

STEECathome Online School

written by Allison Colker & Nadine Zucker

My STECC school building is closed right now.

I can't go to my school building, but I can go to STECCathome school online.

I didn't know I could go to school on the computer, but for now that's how I see my teachers and friends and it's also how I learn new things.

Monday through Friday, I go to online school.

I see my teachers and friends and continue those relationships.

I get to pick what I want to do each day and who I want to visit with...cooking, nature, music, yoga, Hebrew, gardening, science, and more!

I am introduced to new ideas and new things.

At the end of the day, I can say goodnight to my online school family with a book we read together.

I'm excited to go back to school at Shaare Torah with my friends and teachers. Until then, I love seeing them at STECCathome online school.

About the authors...

Allison Colker joined the Shaare Torah community as Education Director in June of 2015. Allison directs our Religious School, Early Childhood Center, and ECC Summer Program. Allison's passion as a Jewish educator is to help children and families find their own individual sense of Jewish identity, community, and connectedness. She strives to build a solid foundation of Jewish tradition and practice, and create joyful learning experiences, combined to lead to a lifetime of doing Jewish in one's own unique way. "Learn It to Live It!" Allison and her husband Ryan both grew up in active synagogue families, spending summers at Jewish sleepover camp, were actively involved in Jewish youth group and later in Jewish life on campus, and started teaching religious school as teenagers.

Nadine Zucker is originally from New Jersey. She graduated from Syracuse University with a major in psychology and a minor in elementary education, and started her career in retail management. Morah Nadine and her husband, Michael, moved to Maryland and had two beautiful boys, Ari and Max. She was lucky enough to be a stay-at-home mom for ten years with them. Morah Nadine re-entered the workforce as a preschool teacher thirteen years ago, spending the last six years studying the Reggio Emilia philosophy. In her spare time, she loves to read, create jewelry, hike, spend time outdoors, and enjoy time with her family. This summer, she is planning to learn to play the guitar! MorahNadine is so happy to have found Shaare Torah ECC and loves exploring with the children! Morah Nadine has most recently served as a 3s and 2s teacher at Gates of Discovery: The Rose and George Teller Preschool of Shaare Tefila in Olney, and before that as a 3s teacher at the Early Childhood School at B'nai Shalom of Olney.
