Talmud Learning with Rabbi Ira Stone
Saturday, 6/25, 1:15-2:15pm

Join Rabbi Ira Stone to learn about Emmanuel Levinas' approach to the Talmud and engage in text study together. Rabbi Stone served as Congregation Beth Shalom's first rabbi and is currently the director of the Center For Contemporary Mussar. The Talmud is the central document of Rabbinic Judaism, yet remains a closed text to the vast majority of Jews. The traditional modes of Talmud study do not bring questions or methodologies that would resonate with contemporary Jews. However, the French/Jewish philosopher Emmanuel Levinas pioneered an approach to Talmud that could serve the purpose of rendering a text that often appears to be consigned to a frozen historical moment into a meaningful guide for contemporary religion.

ANNOUNCEMENTS & UPCOMING PROGRAMS

Bringing Jewish Voice(s) to the Conversation around Abortion, Wednesday, 6/29, 8-9pm Contact the office for the zoom link.

With the recent overturn of Roe v. Wade, many in our country are talking about abortion, and when religion is part of that conversation, it's usually from the perspective of the Christian right. But Jewish tradition actually brings an entirely different voice to the conversation, through a nuanced religious lens that values not only the potential life of the fetus, but also the life of the pregnant person, physical and mental health, and humility in the face of difficult choices. Join Rabbi Rose for a text-based class exploring Jewish perspectives on abortion, when abortion is permitted (or even required) by Jewish law, and how we might think about this issue through the lens of Jewish tradition as opposed to other religious traditions. Note: if you took Rabbi Rose's three-part series on this topic last fall, the texts will already be familiar to you, but you're welcome to join nonetheless!
