Minyan Notes:

It has come to our attention that some people are attending minyan, and/or submitting multiple names in a single form. Please note that our system is automated and helps us contact trace as well as ensure we don't exceed our socially distanced capacity.

- Signup is required
- Please complete the form once per person attending (you may use the same phone number/e-mail address for multiple people in your family)
- Please signup for Shabbat Minyan before 1pm on Friday
- Weekday minyan signup is now from Thursday-Thursday, and should be available when you receive the announcements.

Now that we've moved all of our minyanim indoors, we think it's an opportune time to remind everyone of the Social Distancing Rules:

- Please maintain a distance of six feet from other congregants that are not part of your household
- In the social hall, please do not move the chairs from the designated boxes on the floor
- In the sanctuary, please keep 3 empty seats between yourself and other congregants in the same row
- In the sanctuary, please make sure there is an empty row between yourself, and anyone who may be directly in front of or behind you.
- Please make sure you only attend the minyan you signed up for
- No more than one person should be at the bima at any given time

YOUTH EVENTS

Brachos chart

As our community joins together in outpouring tefillos and increased learning of Torah in the merit of a refuah shelemah for Rabbi Greenberg, our Youth Directors ask the obvious question: Where do the children fit into our efforts? How can we give them a place in creating zechusim for our Rabbi?

Thank you to Adina Metchik for our answer:

Brachos!

Those powerful everyday moments where we recognize Hashem in the totally mundane. We created this Brachos Chart (link below) for you to hang in your breakfast nook and dining room to get the kids involved in saying brachos with just a little more kavana, in the merit that Rabbi Greenberg should have a refuah shelemah very soon. Tell us when you have a full chart so we can send over a special prize!
