

Meet your next letter, the Chaf!

Chaf doesn't have an English letter that matches it exactly.

We write it as CH, but it's a guttural sound, meaning a sound made in the back of your throat, almost like the sound of clearing your throat... as though you needed the cough drop the Chaf's "brother" Kaf has.

Here's the Chaf in several different fonts and handwritings – as you can see, they all look like a backwards "C" and don't have a dot in the middle, even if other aspects of the letter are slightly different!

Circle the part of each Chaf that needs a cough drop but doesn't have one!
The first one has been done for you!

Now you can read the Hebrew word for blessing :

בְּרָכָה

Circle everything over which we say a בְּרָכָה on שַׁבָּת!

Practice making the כ sound by reading the lines below out loud!

כַּ כֵּ כֶּ כִּ כָּ כֻּ כֹּ 1

כֶּ כֵּ כִּ כָּ כֻּ כֹּ 2

בְּרָכָה לָכֵּה פְּכָה כַּ כֵּ 3 blessing go forth

thus / this way

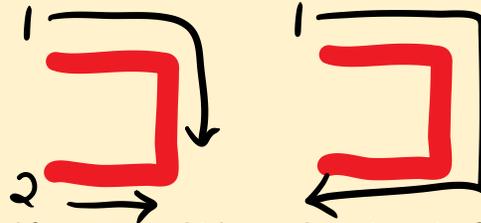

Writing Practice

Make the letter Chaf with a curve:

Some people also write Chaf like this:

Feel free to use whichever shape is easier for you!

Now you try: trace the letter across the first line, then copy it all the way across the second line on your own!

Copy the words at least 3 times each:

ככה פכה ככה פכה thus/

Read Aloud!

Read the Hebrew below. Lines separate the syllables for you on the top – see if you can figure out the syllables on your own on the bottom!

בָּכָה

One-Off Matching

Read the Hebrew on the right out loud, then the Hebrew on the left. Match the ones that sound the same, but have one spelling difference.

BONUS: Circle the difference!

(For instance, בַּת would match to בָּת and the vowel would be circled.) and the vowel would be circled.)

A	רָכַשׁ	בָּכָה	1	he cried
B	מָכַר	כָּכָה	2	thus/ like this
C	כָּכָה	לָכָה	3	go forth
D	בָּכָה	מָכַר	4	sold
E	לָכָה	רָכַשׁ	5	bought/ acquired

Meet your next letter, the Vet!

ב

Vet makes the same sound as the English letter

V

Lesson 11: Vet כ

Here's the Vet in a bunch of different fonts and handwritings – as you can see, they all have that same wide base as the Bet, but the inside is vacant – no dot this time!

ב ב ב ב ב ב

ב ב ב ב ב ב

Circle the vacant belly of each Vet!
The first one has been done for you!

Now you can read the Hebrew word for a male rabbi:

רב

You can also read the word for a female rabbi, where the letter changes back to Bet:

רבָּה

Hebrew Hint

The ending הָ - often (though not always) indicates that the word is feminine!

Does your synagogue have a רב, a רבָּה, or both?

Practice reading the ב in the lines below out loud!

רב מָב בֵּש בָּה בֵּי בָּ 1

Reading Strategy:

Letters "Twins"

Some letters have "twin" pronunciations in English, like the letter C

Like identical twin people, English "twin" letters look exactly the same, but they have different personalities (sounds).

English does (technically) have rules for when C/G appear as their hard or soft versions, but written English doesn't give a beginning reader any hint about which sound to use. If you don't already know the word, it can become a guessing game!

If English is your first language, this part should be really easy:
In the English words below, circle the soft Cs and Gs
and ~~cross out~~ the hard Cs and Gs.

The first one has been done for you as an example!

1. ~~C~~RATE
2. GREAT
3. CAGE
4. CYCLE
5. GAUGE
6. CONCEAL
7. GENIUS
8. CRINGE
9. GRACE

Hebrew also has some “twin” letters – but lucky for you, they’re fraternal twins: they look very similar, but there’s one noticeable difference.

You’ve now met two (out of three) sets of “twins” among the Hebrew letters:

hard	soft
B	V
K	CHHH

What’s the difference between the twins’ appearances?

You don’t even need to know the words for this part – just look for that giveaway difference to know if you’re dealing with the soft twin or the hard twin!

In the Hebrew words below, circle the soft s and s and ~~cross out~~ the hard s and s.

The first one has been done for you as an example!

1. ~~בַּח~~ 2. כָּכָה 3. כְּבֵת
 4. מְכָר 5. לִבֵּר 6. פִּבֵּר
 7. רַבָּה 8. בִּכָּה 9. לִבֵּב

Writing Practice

Make the letter Vet with a right-angle and a line:

Meet your next letter, the Daled!

Daled makes the same sound as the English letter

D

Here's the Daled in a bunch of different fonts and handwritings – as you can see, they all have that “diving board” on both sides, one short and one long!

Circle the small Diving board coming off the right side of each Daled!

The first one has been done for you!

Now you can read the name of what we dip apples in on Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year:

דָּבֵשׁ

Daled gets a dot if it's the first letter, but that doesn't change the sound!

...and the name of the time when we end Shabbat and begin the rest of the week:

הַבְּדֵלָה

(The word literally translates to “separation” – it’s a bittersweet time of separating from our restful Shabbat to the hectic week!)

These two things have another thing in common:
can you fill in the blanks?

We dip apples in דָּבֵשׁ to wish for sweetness in the coming
_____, while during הַבְּדֵלָה, we smell the spice box in hopes of sweetness for the next _____!

(Need a hint? Think about how often each of these holidays happens.)

Reading Strategy:

Chataf Patach

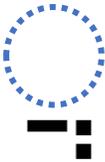

You know three vowels so far: two that make the “ah” sound, and the Sh’va (the silent vowel). The “ah” vowels also have names:

Sound	AH	AH	(silent)	Sound
Name	Kamatz	Patach	Sh’va	Name

Sometimes, the Patach (the “AH” with just one line) combines with the Sh’va and creates what’s called a chataf patach. Read the definition of “chataf” in the green box below. Can you guess what sound a chataf patach makes?

CHATAF:

Whenever a Sh’va (the silent vowel) is combined with any other vowel, it’s a chataf vowel. It doesn’t change the sound unless it comes with a kamatz.

Sound	_____	Sound
Name	Chataf Patach	Name

(You’ll learn chataf kamatz another day.)

The chataf patach can only appear under a few letters – the only one you know so far that can partner with a chataf patach is Hei.

Practice reading the words below that have a chataf patach!

			1
Jewish law	syllable/accent	splendor/glory
			2

Meet your next letter, the Alef!

Alef is a silent letter.

It takes on the sound of whichever vowel is attached to it!

Here's the Alef in several different fonts and handwritings – as you can see, they all have those “arms” stretching out, even if other parts of the letter are slightly different!

Circle the Arms silently stretching out from each Alef!

The first one has been done for you!

Now you can read the word for love in Hebrew:

אַהֶבָה

...and dad:

אָבָא

Practice reading the Hebrew below aloud:

אַמְ אַתְּ אַהּ אֵל אֵי אֵי 1

you (female)

When the Alef comes in the middle, be sure to give it a "space" so every vowel gets its own syllable!

you (male)

father

אָבָא בָּאָה אֲבָל אֶדָר 3

Reading Strategy:

Singular "You" Pronouns

A pronoun is a word that stands in for the name of a person, place, or thing so we don't have to keep saying its name over and over in a sentence. Can you circle all the English words below that count as pronouns?

it	Sarah	she	book	you
Torah	they	them	Israel	he us	him	name	her	we

In English, only two sets of pronouns have a gender: he/him (masculine) and she/her (feminine). The rest (you, it, we/us, they/them) don't change based on the gender of whoever it's referring to. In Hebrew, however, more pronouns have a gender, including the words for "you" (when referring to only one person – it changes when there's a group!):

you (singular feminine)	you (singular masculine)

Circle the one that would refer to you!

Read the Hebrew on the right out loud for practice. Then use the vocabulary you've learned so far to match the phrases on the right to their English translations on the left! (Remember that Hebrew has no word for "is/are" or "a," but they're included in the English when it's needed to make sense!) The first one has been done for you!

Do you have a male rabbi or female rabbi at your synagogue? (Or both?) Write out the phrase(s) you would say to your rabbi to say "You are a rabbi!"

Can you find and circle the "you" pronouns in the blessings below? (You don't know all the letters in these blessings yet, but you can read the "you" pronouns!)

- 1 בָּרוּךְ אַתָּה יי אֱלֹהֵינוּ מֶלֶךְ הָעוֹלָם בּוֹרֵא פְּרִי הַגָּפֶן.
- 2 בְּרוּכָה אַתְּ שְׂכִינָה אֱלֹהֵינוּ רוּחַ הָעוֹלָם שְׁעֲשֵׂנִי בַת חוּרִין.

Bonus

Many Jews say Kiddush, the blessing over the wine, on Shabbat and other holidays. Some communities choose to say the blessing twice, once with masculine language for God and once with feminine language for God. The micrography below is composed of both blessings copied several times – can you find every “you” pronoun, both masculine and feminine?

How many times did you find “you” in the micrography?
