COUPLES AND CONVERSATIONS

According to a recent report, 70% of Reform-raised Jews who married in the last ten years married non-Jews. Some of their spouses convert, some don't. Some of those couples decide to have Jewish families, and some don't.

But that 70% is a really important number. It's an unbelievable opportunity to open our doors, our hearts and our community to a whole host of incredible people. They have to be incredible if our neighbors and brothers and daughters and friends are choosing to marry them, right? It is up to us to make Judaism a place where all of these families not only feel accepted, but loved, admired, and supported. Wouldn't you want to be a part of something like that?

As a rabbi married to a partner who chose Judaism, I understand the complexity in being part of a diverse extended family — it can be messy and challenging, eye-opening and beautiful, and can feel overwhelming to navigate, especially at the beginning.

Being part of an interfaith/Jew-ish/multi-faith/however-you-define-yourself couple can be challenging, especially this time of year, but you don't need to find the answers alone. I am a proud new participant in the Rukin Rabbinic Fellowship, which focuses on deepening rabbis' practices and understanding of working with interfaith couples — those who are seriously dating, engaged, and newly married — as they navigate these important questions together.

To that end, I am offering a new online workshop intended to provide a safe environment to work on creating your religious/cultural lives together, and to give couples a chance to build intentional homes and an amazing community.

Do you want to explore questions about your life together, including: How can we honor both of our heritages? Can we raise our children in one religion while exposing them to the other one? How will we celebrate holidays and lifecycle events? How can we talk to parents and other relatives about issues related to our interfaith relationship?

Would you like to discuss and begin to make decisions about your religious/spiritual/cultural life together with support from other couples, and address particular challenges that arise in your life? Do you want to get to know and develop relationships with other interfaith couples who are thinking about similar issues?

If so, I hope you'll join me in "Couples and Conversations," which will meet on the dates below at 7:00 PM on Zoom.

You can register on our website at www.temple-israel.org/event/couples

January 12, 2023 • January 19, 2023 • February 2, 2023 • February 9, 2023

To those who choose to be part of our community — who sit around our Passover tables and sit shiva with us, who name their daughters and celebrate their son's brit milah, who travel to Israel with us, and stand under chuppahs with us — we say welcome. We are so, so happy that you are here.

Looking forward to learning and growing together.

Rabbi Jen Lader

The golems allow us the opportunity to consider what is necessary to assume responsibility for one's protection and the community's protection, using whatever resources are available — be it mud or paper — and to consider what role we play in our own salvation or destruction.

Our "No Temple Family Without a Chanukah" is sponsored by the following funds:

THE BARBARA & LAWRENCE MILLMAN FAMILY CHANUKAH FUND - Provides funding for families to celebrate Chanukah and/or other Jewish holidays

Established in 2007, this fund was created to support the "No Temple Family Without a Chanukah" project for families in need of assistance for Chanukah and other Jewish holidays. The fund provides small gifts, traditional food, and other support to help families create treasured holiday memories. Recent grateful recipients, in notes of appreciation, wrote "my heart has been touched by your kindness" and "thank you for the unbelievable generosity you showed my family during Chanukah."

JACKIE UNATIN MEMORIAL CHANUKAH FUND - Provides holiday celebrations for those in need

Arlene and Richard Agree treasure the beautiful traditions and memory-making opportunities that surround the holidays. With this in mind, they started a fund in memory of Rick's sister Jackie to help members provide meaningful holiday celebrations for their families.
