Bnei Mitzvah Celebrate With Hoops, Pizza, Divrei Torah

Competitive basketball, pizza dinner and some thoughtful discussion about reaching גיל המצוות - all part of an annual event for some of our young men, hosted by Rabbi and Karen Pruzansky. On Thursday, June 13th, a dozen young men whose bar mitzvah falls in 5779, gathered at the Pruzansky home to mark their coming of age.

The basketball was hard fought, the young men demonstrating teamwork and sportsmanship and the Rabbi demonstrating he can still rebound over much shorter opponents. The Rabbi also surprised his adversaries (and perhaps himself) when he sank three three-pointers in rapid succession.

"Please Rise!"

"Dinner is Served"

During dinner, the banter was relaxed. Asked by the Rabbi if they remembered their Bar Mitzvah speeches, most of the youngsters were able to recall that they started with "In this week's parsha." The Rabbi then took the opportunity to urge the youngsters to recognize the responsibilities that come with becoming a bar mitzvah.

The Rabbi then took the opportunity to urge the youngsters to recognize the responsibilities that come with becoming a bar mitzvah. Using the weekly sedrah's discussion of the obligations and restrictions of a נזיר as a springboard, the Rabbi urged his young audience to be more sensitive to "context"- to recognizing that actions may be permitted or forbidden depending on who performs them and when they are performed. The Rabbi then segued to the proper behavior and activity on Shabbos. He clearly but gently suggested that basketball was not an appropriate Shabbos afternoon activity. "We dress differently on Shabbos; we sing zmiros." The Rabbi surprised the young men when he suggested that, on Shabbos, they should "Chase girls." "Don't harass them. Don't bother them. But you're coming of age. Be friendly with them." Finally, the Rabbi suggested, "On Shabbos, talk out ideas with your friends- what it means to be a Jew." Following the Rabbi's talk, the young men devoured a large number of doughnuts and, as the sun started to go down, returned to the basketball court.
