

Rabbi Daniel Fridman is a native of Teaneck, New Jersey. He graduated from Yavneh Academy and The Frisch School, and went on to study in Israel at Yeshivat Har Etzion, where he was privileged to learn in the shiur of Rav Aharon Lichtenstein, zt'l. Rabbi Fridman received his B.A. in Biological Sciences from Columbia University, Summa Cum Laude, Phi Beta Kappa, and was ordained for the rabbinate at Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, where he studied extensively under the tutelage of Rabbi Michael Rosensweig. Rabbi Fridman currently serves as Sgan Rosh Ha-Yeshiva at Torah Academy of Bergen County, where he has been privileged to receive extensive mentoring from Rabbi Yosef Adler. In addition, Rabbi Fridman is on the faculty of Lamdeinu, an adult education organization in Teaneck, NJ, where he teaches a women's Talmud shiur and weekly Parshah shiur.

Prior to his arrival at Jewish Center of Teaneck, Rabbi Fridman served as Resident Scholar at The Jewish Center in Manhattan from 2009-2015. Nearly 700 of his shiurim, classes, and lectures can be found at yutorah.org.

Rabbi Fridman is married to Dr. Chaya Fridman, a board certified neuropsychologist on faculty at Cornell Medical College in New York.

They are the very proud parents of Eliana, a student at Shalom Yeladim.
