Between Pesach and Shavuot: Yom HaShoah and Yom Ha’Atzmaut

by Reb Moshe Waldoks  page 10
Join us for a follow up to our December Community Meeting furthering the discussion: Who is a member?
March 11, 10 am - noon
Brunch will be served. Childcare provided.
Beit Rabban Shabbat
Our joyous Kabbalat Shabbat celebration of student learning will feature student-led davening, a delicious dinner and fun activities. All are welcome to attend.
Friday, March 23, 5:30 - 8:30 pm.

Birthday Aliyah
Celebrate your birthday at TBZ with an aliyah and cake! Come to the first Shabbat in your birthday month and be called to the Torah for a group Aliyah. Want to sponsor the birthday cake at Kiddush? Call the office to find out how. We look forward to celebrating with you.

Family Pesach Program
Be part of an art project centered around the Exodus story with Tova Speter of the MEM project. Tova is an artist, art therapist, art educator, and arts administrator with an MA in art therapy. She has 10+ years of experience leading community murals, engaging students in artistic expressions of their Jewish identity, and reaching out to under-served communities through art.
Sunday, March 25, 10 am - noon

Men’s Study Group
What do you do for yourself as a Jewish man? What do you do to nurture and grow relationships and connections with other Jewish men? At TBZ’s Men’s Group, we meet and talk freely in a confidential, nonjudgmental, respectful and supportive environment. We talk about men’s issues, Jewish issues, relevant readings and personal experiences, and work to build deep and caring connections. Men are welcome to join us to engage intellectually, emotionally and spiritually at any or all of these meetings.
Every 3 weeks on the 3rd floor after Shabbat Kiddush. March 3, 24, April 14, May 5, 19, June 9

TBZ Host @ Homes
We hope you have chosen to eat, pray, sing, and connect with other TBZ members over lovely intimate vegetarian meals in their homes or be the host for this opportunity in your home. Shabbat evening, Friday, March 2, or seudah shlishit and havdalah on Saturday afternoon, March 3. Please enjoy making these meaningful connections both with TBZ members and with the joys that Shabbat brings to all of us.

New Office Assistant
We welcome Lindsay Eagle to the office staff. Lindsay is an experienced administrator and no stranger to Jewish Life, having served as Boston University Hillel’s Office Manager. She also works at the Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate, a museum dedicated to civic education and engagement. Lindsay freelances as a stage actor, director, and producer in the Boston area. She can be reached at office@tbzbrookline.org or ext. 13

Inclusion Committee Initiative: Focus Tools
What are those brightly colored toys in the lobby and why are they allowed inside the sanctuary? While they are often called ‘fidget tools’, the term ‘focus tools’ better captures their function. By manipulating them—bending, squeezing, and playing with them—children can calm themselves in a way that allows them to pay attention and listen during services. Some children bring their own focus tools to synagogue. Adults also use focus tools. We hope that having a basket of them readily available will send a message of welcome and inclusion to individuals who might need them. Kindly return them to the basket when you or a family member are done using them. The focus tools were purchased with a generous grant from the Ruderman Synagogue Inclusion Project (RSIP). TBZ NEWS & EVENTS

TBZ Community Urban Retreat

While in past years we have headed to the Cape for our annual community retreat, this spring, TBZ will be retreating on Beacon Street. We will include the most popular programs from prior years—including retreat-themed Shabbat services, classes, special children’s programming, yoga, a variety show and lots of other activities. The retreat will culminate with a dance party including some of your favorite retreat games for adult and teens. The only thing missing will be packing suitcases and several hours of highway driving. Childcare will be provided throughout the weekend.

Plans are in the early stages! We welcome input and participation from retreat regulars and from members who have not participated in the past. As always, we cannot have a community retreat without community participation. Contact the office, Cindy-jo Gross or Ariadne Valsamis if you would like to help!

Walk for Hunger

Please join or sponsor this year’s walkers from TBZ, or plan to help with the snack station. Our team will join over 40,000 walkers, 2,000 volunteers and thousands of donors as we raise awareness about hunger in our state and raise funds for programs designed to break the cycle of food insecurity in our communities. More than 700,000 people are chronically hungry in the state. The 2018 Project Bread Walk for Hunger offers us all a chance to make a difference.

More information about signing up to be part of the TBZ team, sponsoring walkers and volunteering will be available soon.

Yom HaShoah

Renowned musician Joey Weisenberg comes to TBZ for a powerful program that explores the question: How can we enter the vibrancy of pre-War Jewish communities by connecting to their Chasidic melodies and nigunim? Joey will help us to link to this vanished world through music and song at a Shir Hamaalot (Rising in Song) at TBZ for the Greater Boston Jewish Community.

Co-sponsored by TBZ, JCDS, Boston’s Jewish Community Day School and Temple Ohabei Shalom.

Cantor Becky Update

We wish Cantor Becky and Alex Khitrik a Mazal Tov on the birth of Max Ezekiel.

Many of you know that Becky has had some health challenges after the birth. She is grateful for all the support and love she has received from our community.

Baby Max is also going through some health challenges and we wish him Refuah Shlema. We hold him on our prayers.

We will update the community regarding Becky’s return to work.

Adult Learning

A number of fans gathered on a Sunday morning to hear Ani Tuzman, the author of The Tremble of Love, read from the novel she wrote about the Ba’al Shem Tov and to learn more about his impact on Jewish life in the 18th century and today.

TBZ NEWS & EVENTS

Beit Rabban

The Beit Rabban Parent Committee continues to facilitate communication between parents and staff, sponsor special guests and field trips for individual classes, and help build community through whole-school events. Beit Rabban students in Grades 4 & 5 enjoyed a wonderful panel by TBZ’s Tikkun Olam committee to learn about TBZ’s work to repair the world, as you see in the accompanying photo. This led to students’ involvement with a fundraiser selling “welcome your neighbor” signs around our community. We are currently gearing up for our biggest event of the year, Beit Rabban Shabbat. Organized by the dynamic duo of Sharon Morganbesser and Lynda Danzig, the evening of Friday, March 23 will feature student-led davenning, a delicious dinner, and fun activities.

Women’s Retreat

TBZ Women’s Retreat was held January 21st at TBZ. The theme was “Living Our Truth: Finding Resilience and Wisdom in the #metoo movement.” The #MeToo movement has empowered women across the country to speak out loudly. Over 90 women in our community came together to tell our stories to one another, share our feelings about power, and process collectively how to respond to the challenges facing women today. After the morning service Rabbi Sharon Cohen Anisfeld, President-Elect of Hebrew College, shared with us how important it is to “hear and be heard” by those we both know well and those who we don’t know at all. Various sessions took place over the course of the day. The retreat culminated with Marjie Sokoll guiding a whole group reflection followed by Rav Claudia who led a moving and intimate closing circle. Rav Claudia urged us to continue forming relationships with each other so that the message of this powerful retreat will continue to resonate in our lives.

Bobbi:
Meditation practice helps us to appreciate the oneness of this very diverse world that appears to be full of separate people and things. It helps us to relate to YHVH, as Jeff Roth says, “the unfolding of being,” a process that cannot be captured by a name or a word. It is a gateway into experiencing the peace of feeling connected to rather than separate from the unfolding of reality. In this way, meditation supports our capacity for prayer, Torah Study, and compassionate connection to others, the three things ("al shelosha devarim ha-olam omed") which sustain the world (Pirkei Avot).

Reggie:
I agree with you, Bobbi. Considering that Jews love to talk and schmooze, it is hard to think of meditation as being Jewish. But it really is!! When we meditate we bring our attention on one focal point, the way we bring our attention to prayer on Shabbat morning or to a blessing we recite. My meditation practice is being attentive to the breath. I bring my attention to my breath, breathing in and out. We breathe each other in and out, breathing the same air, in and out. There is a great image: as we breathe out, God breathes in, and as we breathe in, God breathes out...... we are breathing God in and out. In the creation story in the Tanakh, we read that the first human being was formed by God’s breath. In that silent breath, a connection is made and a human being is born.

Sheila:
For me, Judaism and meditation seem bashert. On one hand, it seems that all the instructions I need to learn this practice of meditation, I find in the psycho-spiritual spiral of Torah, Hebrew liturgy, Shabbat, and Jewish holidays day by day, week by week, year by year. You just need to know enough Hebrew, not to completely depend on translation, to see the teachings jump off the page.

And, on the other hand, its seems that vital to learning about Judaism, is this practice of meditation that brings a continually fresh insight and a sense of revelation to Jewish text, prayer, ritual, and mitzvot (acts of connection).

Reb Moshe:
What is vitally important in my own spiritual life is the dissolving of a dialogic sense of tefila (that we are here and God—even the One you do not “believe” in—is outside of us) to a unitive internalized path for seeing our place in the Universe as Jewish human beings. It seems simple to understand that Echad is Oneness and signifies the interdependence of all life. While this is simple, it is not easy. Our ego-driven lives often serve as a barrier to this expanded consciousness. All of the mitzvoth are geared to this principle of humility, interconnectedness with Jewish traditions of the past and the present and our obligations as Jews to move our tradition forward to the generations to come.

This spring, at our annual Spring Fundraiser Kiddush, we will celebrate 13 years of Nishmat Hayyim at TBZ. In preparation for this community event, our meditation leaders, Reb Moshe, Bobbi Isberg, Sheila Katz and Reggie Silberberg offer reflections on the question:

“What is Jewish about Meditation?”

Sheila:
Everything that arises into consciousness wants to be seen, recognized, and loved, whether it is anger or sorrow or yearning or judgment. Meditation practice and Jewish teachings repeat and repeat: Shema! Listen, pay attention to This form, intention, return again, say “Hineini,” “I am here,” the only place we can ever be within the one “I am.” Breathe out and let go of this life now. Breathe in and behold it arising anew.

Reggie:
Our rituals and blessings, whether it is lighting the Shabbat candles, making motzei, or reciting grace after meals, remind us to pause, stop, and take a conscious breath to prepare for this very moment, and then make the blessing being fully present in time and space.

Bobbi:
Jewish practice reminds us, with its daily, weekly, and seasonal prompts, of the many opportunities for contemplative moments and heightened awareness of the present: on arising each morning, Jewish prayers bring our attention to being alive and awake; eating, eliminating, entering and exiting have rituals to remind us to wake up to what we are doing in the moment. And Shabbat is an entire day dedicated to being rather than doing. Jewish practice reminds us to wake up and be present, over and over, in the repetitive minutiae of day-to-day life.

Reb Moshe:
To be an observant Jew one must sit and see, feel, and experience, what is in the present moment. Out of this observation we will recognize how our Halachic observance path makes demands upon us that derive not only from tradition but from our existential need to actively participate in both tikkun olam, repairing the world and tikkun haNefesh, repairing of our souls.

Please join us on May 5th for the Spring Fundraiser where TBZ will celebrate Nishmat Hayyim and honor Bobbi, Sheila, Reggie and Reb Moshe.

TBZ NEWS & EVENTS

Rosh Hodesh
The TBZ Rosh Hodesh group is going strong. We’ve had some great meetings over the last few months. In December, in the spirit of Chanukah’s focus on creating light in the dark we created beautiful two-sided journals exploring areas of light and dark in our lives. Of course we also enjoyed lighted candles together and eating latkes. In January the group met to study the Parsha for the second annual Rosh Hodesh Shabbat (Beshalach, including the Song of the Sea). Members of the group participated in all aspects of the service – leading portions, reading torah, giving d’var torahs and co-sponsoring the Kiddush.

The Shoah runs as a subterranean stream that has altered Jewish identity for all Jews. The War against the Jews with its policy of complete extermination of Jews and Judaism added a new dimension to Jewish life and identity. The racist exterminators were not interested in one’s Jewish practice or ideology; a Jewish grandparent was all that one needed to be murdered. Thus, the fact that Jews choose to remain Jews is an act of renewing the covenant, leaving aside our ambivalent relationship with God. The Shoah became an equalizer for Jews. To be a Jew is to remember the greatest catastrophe in Jewish, and perhaps, human history. We must remember that this horror took place in Germany, the center of European Enlightenment, only 75 years ago. This is not ancient history and its residue formed many different ideologies and strategies for Jewish survival.

Why remember these horrible events, particularly when we live such a comfortable life here in the United States? The recent re-emergence of Fascist, white supremacist groups demands that we remember the results this hatred may have, if left unchecked.

Between Pesach and Shavuot, two modern Jewish days of commemoration and celebration deserve our attention as much as these two Pilgrimage festivals. The first is Yom HaShoah which begins Wednesday night, April 11 and ends the evening of April 12. It is customary to light a Yarhzeit candle after sundown on April 11 in memory of the millions of Jews who left no relatives to light candles for them. The second is Yom Ha'Atzmaut, celebrated at sundown on April 18 and concluding the following evening. The day before the celebration of Israel's founding is Yom HaZikkaron, Israel’s Memorial Day for those who fell in the conflicts of the last 70 years. If you have been in Israel during this time it is astonishing to see how Yom HaZikkaron abruptly turns into Yom Ha'Atzmaut with fireworks and celebration.

At the suggestion of Rabbi Mordechai Nurok - member of the first Knesset and a Holocaust survivor - the fixed Hebrew calendar date of 27 Nissan was established as Yom HaShoah on April 12, 1951. This day of memorial was signed into law as a secular “Yom HaZikaron LaShoah veLaGevurah (Remembrance Day of Shoah and Resistance). This year the Hebrew and Gregorian dates coincide.

Yom Ha’Atzmaut, celebrating the founding of the State of Israel and its close proximity to the Shoah, has led to myth of the phoenix rising. It is convenient to see the establishment of the state of Israel as the “payback” for the Nazi attempt to eliminate us from the world stage. But this quid pro quo anthem is deeply flawed. A Jewish State, either as an independent entity, or as part of the British Empire, would have emerged without the Shoah.

The Zionist enterprise began in the 19th century and its goal of self-determination for the Jewish people was based on the correct assessment that anti-Semitism was endemic to European culture. It was hoped that the millions of Eastern European and other Jews would commit themselves to building the State from within and without throughout the 20th century. Six million murdered Jews did not create the State of Israel.

The State of Israel served as a unifying component for Jewish identity from its inception in 1948 until 1982 when, as a result of the Lebanon fiasco, splinters began to emerge within the American Jewish community. These differences among supporters of Israel have grown in subsequent years and are reaching a crescendo. The major differences today are from those who criticize Israel out of love and commitment to its survival, and those who often use anti-Israel critique as a mask for anti-Semitism.

We celebrate Israel’s founding, a culmination of the traditional millennial yearning of next year in Jerusalem, l’shana haba-ah biyerushalayim, and the secular revolution of Zionism that saw the establishment of the State as a prerequisite for achieving normalcy in the community of nations.

Rav Claudia supports undocumented immigrants
By Tali K. Walters

“The treatment accorded by a state to the non-citizens living within its jurisdiction is the most accurate indication of the extent to which justice and humanity prevail in that state.” —Rabbi Samson Raphael Hirsch

Ricardo (pseudonym) ran from Guatemala, leaving behind his wife and ailing newborn baby, to avoid the extreme danger he faced for refusing to work with drug traffickers. In November 2017, Ricardo finally gave up to ICE authorities after 2 weeks in the desert without water. After his initial detention in Puerto Isabel Service Processing Center in Texas, he was moved to the Suffolk County House of Corrections in South Boston, due to lack of space. Ricardo speaks no

English, has no experience with the US – he is only 21 – and does not know his immigration status. He thinks an assistant to an immigration attorney met with him but is not sure and does not know what to anticipate. He is sad, depressed, and scared, though grateful to have food to eat and safety.

During this time in which our President and his government does not take heed of Rabbi Hirsch’s words, there are new immigrants to the US, like Ricardo, who risked their lives to come across the Southern border in an effort to escape real dangers in their home countries. We have friends, neighbors, and relatives in danger of unannounced, abrupt, and heartless removal from their families and homes by ICE agents. Those picked up by ICE are placed in detention, in jail often with inmates serving time for crimes, to await their deportation hearings. These individuals have few rights (i.e., the right to an attorney, proper medical care). It is difficult, if not impossible, for visitors to see their incarcerated loved one due to distance, bureaucracy, and fear of being picked up by ICE themselves. The one group of supporters that has (almost) full access to undocumented immigrant detainees is clergy. In 2017 Rav Claudia joined with Boston clergy from Christian, Jewish, and Unitarian Universalists congregations to care for these members of our greater Boston community. In January, Rav Claudia had the opportunity to provide pastoral care at the Suffolk County House of Corrections to Ricardo, one of the over 200 (as of October 2017) undocumented immigrants held in ICE custody in Boston. Clergy's pastoral care sometimes takes the form of social work as they connect detainees with resources such as pro bono lawyers, translators, social services, and Accompaniment.

In addition to providing pastoral care for immigrants in detention, Rav Claudia and members of faith communities and secular groups engage in Accompaniment of undocumented immigrants. People participating in Accompaniment show up at Court, write letters, attend rallies, offer rides, and help meet other needs of the undocumented immigrant facing legal difficulties. “Accompaniment is a way of showing love and honor” (Rabbi Lev Meirowitz Nelson in Mikdash: A Jewish Guide to the New Sanctuary Movement). In this role, Rav Claudia provides pastoral care to (often Spanish speaking) immigrants who have often been contributing members to the greater Boston community for decades. She writes letters of support to judges and accompanies these individuals to ICE check-ins and Court hearings. Accompaniment of an undocumented immigrant buffers the risk of sudden, unexpected ICE detention. “Escorting immigrants shows that they have our respect – and we hope they will receive the government’s as well” (Rabbi Nelson).

Rav Claudia met with Ricardo last month, listened to his “very sad life story,” and cried with him as he waited for the possibility of a new, safe life in the US. His immigration hearing, that would have potentially led to his freedom, was postponed due to a personal crisis in the judge’s life. Ricardo is in physical, emotional, social, and immigrant limbo. Opportunities for Rav Claudia’s involvement in this Tikkun Olam will not diminish in the foreseeable future.
FROM THE INCLUSION COMMITTEE

Dear Ones,

Over the last two years, especially during our renovation, much thought was given to making TBZ an inclusive Shul. This inclusion was not only for external needs such as elevators and bathrooms, but also to make TBZ inviting to those with non-visible disabilities. Both Rav Claudia and I are proud of what our Inclusion Committee has done. There is, of course, more to do. We are eager for your feedback in this important arena for TBZ to show its sensitivity to all who attend our Shul, whether on a regular or infrequent basis. Again, thanks to all those who helped translate ideas into realities.

—Reb Moshe and Rav Claudia

Please tell our ushers if there is any other way we can help to meet your needs.
TIKKUN OLAM AT TBZ

TBZ Tikkun Olam translates our traditions into social justice to heal our world. We provide opportunities for our entire community to bring to life our Jewish call to action. We have added a new action group on transgender rights, and there are significant new developments in each action group.

Sanctuary
In January, as partners in the Newton Sanctuary and Solidarity Collaborative, we welcomed the first family into Sanctuary at the Parish of St. Paul in Newton Highlands. TBZ members were very active in preparing the space, and have already volunteered many hours providing companionship. The family is settling in well. As two people are required to be present at all times, we are always looking for additional helpers. If you are interested in volunteering, please contact David Woodruff at davewoodr@aol.com. For general questions, contact Marion Freedman-Gurspan freedgur@aol.com or Penny Roberts, penrob49@aol.com, co-chairs of the Sanctuary Action Committee.

Transgender Rights
In 2016, Massachusetts passed non-discrimination protections for our transgender friends, family and neighbors in public spaces. A broad coalition is joining together to defeat a dangerous initiative on the statewide ballot in Massachusetts in November 2018 that would repeal our state’s non-discrimination law. Faith leaders, public safety officials, major employers, top educational institutions, labor unions and more are standing together to affirm: Discrimination has no place in Massachusetts! We are working with the Freedom for All Massachusetts campaign to defeat the 2018 ballot measure that would repeal these recently granted transgender rights. On March 3, Pippin Shoults of Freedom for All Massachusetts will discuss the transgender non-discrimination law and how we can protect transgender people during Kiddush. Contact Marion Freedman-Gurspan freedgur@aol.com

Resistance Group
The Resistance effort at TBZ continues to focus on protecting democracy from the many threats it faces under the current administration – equality, affordable high-quality healthcare for all, climate change, and more. We take action in the form of rallies, phone-banks, letter-writing campaigns, and demonstrations. Each quarter we try to highlight a specific topic and offer an action plan to help make a difference. In November we held a phone-bank and together made well over 120 calls to senators around the country, expressing our outrage and asking them to reject the administration’s so-called tax reform. In January, a dozen TBZ members rallied together at the People Persist Rally on the Cambridge Common near Harvard Square in Cambridge on the one year anniversary of the 2017 Women’s March.

People Persist Rally, January 20
Please join us as we exercise our democratic rights and take inspiration from one another. For questions or more information contact: Fran Adams & Julia Freedson (franaca.adams@gmail.com; jfreedson@yahoo.com)

JALSA/JLC:
Last fall, our TBZ team did a crack job as part of the JALSA/raiseUmpa campaign collecting over 250,000 signatures state wide to put the $15 minimum wage and paid family leave bills on the ballot next November. At TBZ, we beat our goal by 50%! Stay tuned – to get these on the ballot we need a second stage of petition gathering in the spring. If you’re interested in helping out, contact the action group leader, Jonathan Klein, at Jklein728@gmail.com.

Refugee Immigration Ministry (RIM)

We have been supporting two families in an apartment in Brookline Village: “I” and her 1-year-old daughter “G,” from Cameroon; and “G” and her two children, 3-year-old “T” and newborn “C,” from Ecuador. Both families are doing well. We are now considering supporting a third family seeking asylum. Our cluster—three synagogues and three churches in Newton and Brookline—will hold our fundraising drive for our annual budget of $40,000 this March, as we approach Pesach and Easter, our interfaith seasons of redemption and liberation. We are incredibly grateful to all the volunteers (too many to name) who have generously donated their time, as well as to all our donors, whose contributions make this work possible.

Thank you! Contact Jenny Berz (jberz@gmail.com) or Jed Shugerman (jshugerman@gmail.com) for more.

Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO)

TBZ joined the Islamic Society of Boston Cultural Center (ISBCC) in late October to present an informative and deeply moving program on the serious issues facing our Muslim brothers and sisters today. We had one-to-one relational meetings and began to build the trust that is and will be needed, especially in this political climate. In the next few weeks we will begin to have house meetings, 90-minute gatherings of 8-10 people, to talk about what’s on your mind, what concerns you about life in the Boston area, what you would like to see GBIO take on next as we try to make life better for everyone here in our community. Look for our emails as this project begins and please join us for this opportunity to begin to make a difference.

If you are interested in joining us on this project or on any of our other action groups: health care, criminal justice reform, affordable housing, please contact either Susan Bookbinder (susanbookbinder@comcast.net) or Rosalind Joffe (rosalind@coaching.com).

“Do not be daunted by the enormity of the world’s grief. Do justly, now. Walk humbly, now. You are not obligated to complete the work, but neither are you free to abandon it.” -Rabbi Tarfon.
