FASCINATING FACTS OF JEWISH HISTORY

We live in a dark era of unprecedented ignorance of Torah. Due to this darkness, the light of Torah, where it shines, shines ever more brightly. Certainly, one of the personalities that waded into the darkness, to ignite the fire of return to Torah in the 20th century, was Rabbi Noach Weinberg. This week on 11 Shevat we will observe the 10th yahrzeit of his passing. I believe it is important to pause and take stock of a man who created a revolution that directly impacted many of us reading this.

Rav Yisrael Noach (ben Yitzchak Mattisyahu) Weinberg (1930-2009) was born in the Lower East Side of New York. He learned at Yeshivas Chaim Berlin in New York and Ner Yisroel in Baltimore, and completed undergraduate work at Johns Hopkins University and post-graduate studies at Loyola Graduate School. He always considered his older brother, Rav Yaakov Weinberg, Rosh Yeshiva of Ner Yisroel, his primary Rabbi. He married Denah Goldman and moved to Eretz Yisrael in 1958, where they raised their 12 children. Disturbed by the high rate of assimilation and lack of Jewish knowledge among Western youth, he opened his first yeshiva for assimilated young men in 1966. That short-lived effort was followed by several others before he co-founded Yeshivas Shma Yisrael (later renamed Ohr Somayach) with Rabbis Nota Schiller, Mendel Weinbach and Yaakov Rosenberg in 1970.

His difference in philosophy led to his creation of Aish Hatorah in 1974, which over the next 35 years expanded to 25 branches over five continents. He had the unique gift of being able to take the timeless principles of Torah, distill them to their essence, and then develop unbelievably creative ways of explaining and illustrating these concepts to the most uninitiated Jews, in a way that would show them the profound depth and relevance of traditional Torah and Judaism. He wrote curricula that accomplished this purpose: The 48 Ways to Wisdom, based on the Mishna in the 6th perek of Pirkei Avos, The Five Levels of Pleasure, based on the first paragraph of the Shema, The Six Constant Mitzvot, his Foundations Materials that present a comprehensive overview of Jewish philosophy and thought – they were all incredibly original in their presentation, but completely anchored to the chain of tradition.

Rabbi Weinberg viewed the Holocaust as ongoing. As he once said to Rabbi Menachem Deutch “they are loading Jews on to the cattle cars as we speak. What are you going to do about it?” His untiring devotion to teaching Torah, and his penetrating questions, inspired a generation of Jews who carry on his devotion to spreading Torah to this very day.

Rav Noach used to articulate two very basic but profound concepts. The first was, 'If you take real responsibility to do the will of God, you will succeed.' And the second was, 'If you really care, then you will take responsibility.' Important thoughts for each and every one of us.

Yehi zichro boruch - May his memory be a blessing.
