SUGGESTED BYLAWS CHANGES FOR CONGREGATIONAL APPROVAL
March 22, 2015

History/Background

For the past four years, the size and function of board positions have been considered as part of the Strategic Planning process at JRC. The following Bylaws changes are being proposed to improve the effectiveness of JRC’s Board of Directors.

Change 1

In the current governance structure, a person serves as JRC’s President for two years and then serves as Immediate Past President for two years. While desirable, the current Bylaws do not state that the President must be currently serving on the board prior to his/her term as President. The congregation usually becomes aware of proposed Presidential candidates a month or so prior to the annual elections. For transparency and consistency of leadership, it is being suggested that an individual serve on the board for the year prior to becoming President. This change would create a new position of President Elect. The President Elect position would be for one year and then the individual would become President for two years. So as not to increase the length of service, the Immediate Past President position would be reduced from a two year term to a one year term. The President Elect and the Immediate Past President positions would be filled in alternate years. This change would begin in July 2016, as the current President, David Tabak, becomes the Immediate Past President. The Nominating Committee would begin looking for an Incoming President next year (FY 2016).

The President Elect position would serve as a primary resource to the President, assisting in the Board budgeting process, regularly meeting with all Vice Presidents to set and monitor goals, ensuring congregational communications through a variety of formats, and becoming familiar with the role of the President.

Change 2

With the creation of the President Elect position, it is necessary to alter the Bylaws to indicate who would fill the President’s position if he/she were unable to complete the term of office. The change would specify the President Elect as the first person to fill this vacancy, (in years when this position is filled) and subsequently the Vice President of Administration. In alternate years when the Immediate Past President position is occupied and the President Elect position is not, the current mechanism for succession by the Vice President of Administration would remain in effect, and the same mechanism would hold in the event the President Elect is unable to complete his/her term.
Change 3

The current JRC Board consists of 12 officers, 12 members-at-large, and one youth member. At times in the past, the Nominating Committee has had difficulty filling all open Board positions. The Board has also heard from JRC Committees and Task Forces that it is often difficult to find members to serve, and that the nomination of active volunteers to the Board can have the unintended consequence of removing experienced volunteers from Committees and Task Forces. Research and best practices in the field of non-profit governance suggest that the optimum size of the board be 9-12 people. In addition, consultants from the Executive Service Corps (ESC), the Reconstructionist Rabbinic College (RRC), and the JRC Governance Task Force have also suggested that JRC consider reducing the size of its current Board. The recent Board survey showed that the majority (57%) of the responding Board members felt the Board was too large. The member-at-large position is often a place of Board entry for future Executive Committee Members (Vice President, Treasurer, Secretary, and President). The majority of respondents (57%) to the recent Board survey were not in favor of eliminating all the member-at-large positions. This change would reduce the number of member-at-large positions from 12 to six.

Change 4

This change would also serve to reduce the size of the Board. In the past 18 months, the Board has discussed the “sunsetting” of the Vice President of Operations position. Two committees (House and Landscaping) would move from the portfolio of the Vice President of Operations to the Vice President of Administration. The role of a key volunteer familiar with building issues and working with staff would remain as House Committee chair, without the additional governance obligations attendant to a Vice President position.

Change 5

The current Bylaws state a term limit for officers but not for members-at-large. This change would apply a similar criterion to the member-at-large position, a term limit of two consecutive 2-year terms of office. The following exception would help ensure that no more than four of the six members-at-large are new to the Board in any given year: the Nominating Committee could present a list of nominees such that one or more incumbent members-at-large could hold the position for a single additional year, but not more than five consecutive years.

Change 6

These changes reflect the names of the current standing committees at JRC.
On March 11, 2015, the JRC Board approved the following Bylaws changes to be presented to the congregation at a special meeting to be held on March 22, 2015.

The existing Bylaws can be found here, and a comparison showing the proposed changes in the context of the full set of Bylaws is available below.

Motion

It is moved that the congregation accept the changes to the Bylaws to restructure the Presidency sequence for greater transparency and preparation, to eliminate the position of Vice President of Operations, to reduce the number of members-at-large from 12 to six, and to enact term limits for members-at-large. This motion presents changes to the wording of the JRC Bylaws, Articles IV, V, and VI.
