

KOL B'NAI AVIV

THE VOICE OF B'NAI AVIV

From the desk of... Rabbi Adam Watstein

We are days away from Pesach, and I thought I would offer some insight and resources as to how to enrich your holiday experience.

To start with the most obvious, the Rabbinical Assembly annually publishes a guide to Pesach observance, which you can access easily by clicking here. It's a lengthy document, but it covers all the basics: how to prepare a house for Pesach and what foods to buy (and what not to buy), even how to deal with important side-issues like baby food, pet food, and medication during Pesach. There are lots of places to find information about Pesach observance on the Internet, but the RA guide is the obvious place to start. There is also a lot of helpful and useful information in the chapter by Rabbi Alan B. Lucas on the Jewish lifestyle in The

Observant Life. (If you don't own a copy of TOL, you can purchase one either online by clicking here)

Moving along, many congregants routinely ask me about the whole question of kitniyot. The term kitniyot applies loosely to the subcategory of vegetables called legumes, and references specifically foodstuffs that cannot become the kind of leavened product forbidden on the holiday yet which have traditionally been avoided by Ashkenazic Jews on Pesach. There is plenty to say on the matter. Most of the published materials that have emanated from our Conservative authorities are vigorously opposed to maintaining these traditions. To see a very strongly worded position paper by Rabbi David Golinkin discouraging holding onto the prohibition of kitniyot, for example, click here. For another, this one by Rabbi Amy Levin and Rabbi Avram I. Reisner, formally permitting Ashkenazic Jews to eat kitniyot on Pesach, click here. These are clever statements rooted in serious scholarship. I understand what they're trying to do, but we will maintain the traditional prohibition at B'nai Aviv this year, as we always have: it's one thing to respect the logic of learned peers...and, at least for me, another thing to imagine my own grandparents taking a good look around and declaring themselves unwilling to eat in our shul at Pesach. To abandon a tradition we've maintained for well over a millennium just because the custom can't be justified logically or rationally is a complicated decision. So read the papers referenced above, then decide if you really want to ask me what to do.

And what about the sedarim themselves? First, let's talk about Haggadot. There are a lot of choices out there! Buying enough copies of any one of them to use at a seder featuring a couple of dozen participants is obviously a serious investment! But even without buying enough for all...it's worth investing in some interesting editions of the Haggadah and books to consult as a way of preparing to make the seder interesting and innovative. Here are some choices compiled by my mentor, Rabbi Martin Cohen, mostly available online, or for inspection in my office, as I own many of them as well:

- The Haggadah I recommend for families looking for an attractive volume with a translation that's easy to follow, and a full set of explanatory directions is The Feast of Freedom, edited by Rachel Anne Rabinowicz and available through the Rabbinical Assembly by clicking here.
- I can also warmly recommend the Haggadah published by my friend Noam Zion of the Shalom Hartman Institute in Jerusalem with David Dishon. Called A Different Night: The Family Participation Haggadah, it first came out about twenty years ago and is concise, interesting, filled with new directions to take your table talk, and focused on issues that should matter to all contemporary Jews
- Three Hundred Ways to Ask the Four Questions. (Click here to buy a copy.) You'll find the Four Questions in hundreds of languages, including expected ones like Yiddish and Ladino, and very unexpected ones like Zulu, Maori, Mayan, Mongolian, and Navajo. But you'll also find the Four Questions in Klingon, Twitter, Lawyeresque, Ubbi-Dubbi, and Hebrew Pig Latin. The whole book is very funny and very engaging, and I recommend it to you all.
- An interesting on-line Haggadah to consult and/or to download and print out is the one by Rabbi Rachel Barenblat, which you can see by clicking here for the body of the text and here for the cover. It's a bit new-age for me in parts, but also clever and interesting, plus she has a lot of very good ideas for families eager to address young children's limited attention spans.
- For families eager to maintain a traditional feel to the seder but also to incorporate present-day issues, the Jewish Orthodox Feminist Alliance has an on-line pamphlet (click here) featuring lots of ideas for special activities and discussions that will make the seder more contemporary and more lively. There's also a particularly good section of games for children who have had enough...and that's worth a lot.
- A supplement for the Haggadah published by Uri L'tzedek, an Orthodox social justice group headed by Rabbi Shmuly Yanklowitz, is available online by clicking here. The supplement features a broad range of texts and seder suggestions relating specifically to social justice issues, and also has an ongoing rubric entitled "Act!" which suggests specific steps to take to address the issue under discussion in a fruitful and positive way. You can download the supplement for free, either with or without signing up for their newsletter.
- Finally, Behrman House has brought out two editions of the Haggadah specifically for families with young children in the last couple of years. One, the Family (and Frog) Haggadah (click here), is filled with colorful images and sidebars designed to hold children's interest throughout the seder. The other, Rebecca Redner's Gateways Haggadah (click here), is specifically intended for families with special-needs children grappling with speech, learning, or language difficulties. It's quite a good effort, and will surely appeal to families trying to involve non-readers or pre-readers in the seder. Both are priced reasonably for a family to purchase multiple copies.

I'd also like to recommend the on-line essay by Edmon J. Rodman entitled "The 5 (Or So) Habits of Successful Seder Leaders, which you can access by clicking here and which I found thought-provoking and worth reading.

Leading a seder is not easy. I myself find it complicated when I'm sitting at a table with people who have been to two sedarim a season for their entire lives and others who haven't ever been to one, not to mention my children who range in age from 20 months to nearly 7 years-old. The whole point of the seder is to relate the story of the Exodus in a way that all present can understand...But the key, at least for me, is coming prepared, knowing what issues I want to highlight, having questions prepared in advance that I hope will stimulate vigorous responses on the part of the participants, and—this is key—having a sense in advance of how long I want the seder, particularly the pre-meal part, to last and how long I am going to devote to each specific section of the Haggadah.

I'd also like to address a particularly painful aspect of Pesach observance that most of us prefer to ignore: the heart-ache involved in facing Pesach for those in mourning for loved ones. Rabbi Stephanie Dickstein, a colleague who is also a licensed social worker, has prepared a remarkable document entitled "Coping with the Empty Chair at the Seder: A Personal Journey for Memory and Contemplation," which you can see on the website of the Jewish Board of Family and Children's Services by clicking here. You'll find Rabbi Dickstein's suggestions intelligent and thoughtful...and I believe that those among us who are already dreading the sight of that empty chair will find much of worth in her words.

My final piece of advice is not to let the seder overwhelm the chag. There is something intensely gratifying about searching those last crumbs on chametz on the night before the first seder, whether by candlelight or flashlight. It is a wonderful experience for children and is best explained here. Coming to shul on the morning of Erev Pesach to participate in the siyyum, even if you aren't a firstborn, can also be a very satisfying experience. Selling your chametz in advance of the holiday too can also be a moving, emotionally satisfying experience. If you have not yet done so, an explanation for why we sell our chametz can be found here, and it is as easy as stopping by the shul for 2 minutes!

I hope some of the above assists you in having a terrific holiday. I wish a chag kasheir v'sameiach to you all, and am completely available to all who wish to talk through any aspect of Pesach observance or who have any specific questions about preparing a Jewish home for Pesach. (Let me save myself some time up front by telling you all that, yes, we eat quinoa on Pesach.) Of course, I will be available throughout the week before Pesach to assist you in the sale of your chametz. And to talk about your seder plans too, and particularly to explain any of the more obscure passages in the Haggadah...

B'shalom,
Rabbi Adam Watstein

B'nai Aviv

1410 Indian Trace ~ Weston, Florida

954-384-8265 ~ melissa@bnaiaviv.org

I, the undersigned, acting on the express instructions of the people whose names and addresses are attached to this bill of sale (and added to it prior to April, 10, 2017 corresponding to the 14th of Nisan 5777, at 10AM), do hereby sell all the leavened products forbidden to Jewish people on the Passover holiday still in the possession of those people to Glen Gillingham for the price of $1,000,000,000.00, which sale is to be deemed immediately effective upon the down payment of no less than $1.00. Should the balance not be paid in its entirety by Tuesday evening, April 18, 2017, at 8:28 PM, the entire sale is to be declared invalid, whereupon the aforementioned leavened products will revert to the ownership of their original owners.

In accordance with Jewish law, I have transferred the goods referred to above to the purchaser by means of the commercial device current within Jewish circles called kinyan sudar, whereby the purchaser signals his acceptance of the terms of the agreement and takes possession of the goods in question by tugging on a handkerchief in the presence of witnesses.

Furthermore, this sale includes leavened products known to the sellers at the time of the sale, but also all leavened products present on their property or in their homes, places of business, or vehicles not specifically known to them. There are no exceptions to this: all leavened property is included.

From the desk of...

Mah Nishtanah? Why is this Passover different from other Passovers?

Creating meaningful Jewish rituals at school is not only part of the ECEC Judaic curriculum but also part of the daily life at school. From every day brachot, blessing over the food, to making their own challah on Fridays, children experience the joy of Judaica through hands on activities. These experiences are the bricks needed for building a strong foundation of Jewish identity.

And having Pesach around the corner, my question is ...Is it enough to shape this identity with what we are providing at school? More than any other holiday, Passover is for the children! It affords us, parents and educators to connect with the kids in the most magical way - no matter what level of observance we all attend a Seder. Seders are coming in all shapes, sizes and choreographies. Sometimes too long , sometimes too boring....

Guess what! It doesn't have to be that way. This year, make the difference.

This year, put your fatigue asideFocus on the kids...and make it their night - one they will remember. Hear their questions and ask them others. Tell them "The Story", because Passover celebrates the most inspiring events in Jewish history - the liberation of the Jewish people from slavery. For generations our ancestors understood that the bond created on Passover is an investment that is unique and priceless. So this Passover, make it meaningful to the fullest!

Happy Passover, Chag Sameach!

Sabrina

Please make note of this upcoming Sisterhood event:

Mother's Day Event
Chaired by Corinna Black Kushner

Thank you to Andi Eisler, Debbie Green, Bonnie Salmon and all of the ladies who worked so hard to make our Purim fundraiser a success last month! Next year, we will change a few things with regard to pick up of the hamantaschen. We used this year as a trial run and see that we can make some improvements. Thanks to all who supported the project and hope you enjoyed the delicious Purim goodies and greetings from your friends and fellow B'nai Aviv members!

I would like to use space in my article this month, to explain the "Torah Fund Campaign" of the Women's League for Conservative Judaism. This campaign is world-wide, and supports the Jewish Theological Seminary in NY and other institutes of Jewish studies training Rabbis, Cantors and Jewish Educators in Los Angeles, Jerusalem, Buenos Aires and Potsdam.

The Torah Fund Campaign began in 1942 and provides scholarships to all the schools. Our very own Rabbi Watstein was a recipient of a Torah Fund scholarship as a Rabbinical student!

Sisterhoods and individuals support the Torah Fund by making donations to buy a beautiful and unique pin (a $180 donation to Torah Fund) and buy greeting cards (package of 6 cards for $18, for sale by contacting me). Our Sisterhood has a goal of raising $2000 for the Torah Fund this year, and we are nearly at our goal. Please contact me if you are interested in becoming a Torah Fund donor (the $180 can be paid in installments) or if you would like to buy greeting cards (all types) from me. I will have samples of the greeting cards put on display in the Sisterhood showcase in the lobby.

B'nai Aviv is the host site for this year's Regional Torah Fund one day conference. It is being held on Sunday, April 23rd. It will be a day of Jewish education for women, as well as a Torah Fund luncheon. The cost to attend the day is $36 (or, you can choose to just attend the luncheon if you want to). The day will run from 9:30 - 3:00 and you are welcome to attend all, or part of it. Please let me know if you are interested in attending.

Don't forget about our next exciting Sisterhood event....the WOW Luncheon (Women of Worth) on May 7th! Get your tables together and send in your RSVP's. Don't forget that sponsorships are available, and that we are also looking for raffle prizes. There will be a great boutique to shop for mother's day gifts and end of the year teachers' gifts too! The deadline of April 26th for RSVP's is firm, so don't delay in getting yours in.

And one final item....Mathilde's Mentionables. We are collecting new underwear to go to needy women. There is a box in the temple office for collections. I will also bring the box to our next event.

B'nai Aviv Mission Statement:

B'nai Aviv is dedicated to serving and nurturing the spiritual, educational, cultural and social needs of its members in an egalitarian environment framed by Conservative Judaism.

Our synagogue is committed to providing these services in an atmosphere of warmth and mutual caring within a congregational family who share a deep-felt desire to promote and ensure the continuity of Jewish life, to perform tzedakah, and to support the State of Israel and the United States of America.
