Want It. Find It. We All Need It.

Why is it that there are so many lessons one can glean in a grocery store? Or is that just me. On a late Sunday afternoon with the quick run to pick up a few items fleshing out that night's dinner, the wisdom imparted is both poignant 18 months into a pandemic, and relevant, as we enter our season of repentance.

It seems this time the wrong check out line had been chosen (you might remember that sermon). With few options open due to an apparent cashier shortage, I found myself five deep from the start and the line was growing. Yet something was different, unexpected. The energy surrounding us actually felt calm. No one seemed antsy or irritated. We merely waited. And then the reason for the delay was noticed – the young man bagging the groceries was having a particularly difficult time. He couldn't get everything to fit in the bag. Exasperated he exclaimed, "it won't fit! It just can't." The cashier helped him, showing him how they could figure it out together and he began to relax. A smile crept across his face. The shoppers in front of me took their groceries as the young man apologized all the while that they assured him that it wasn't an inconvenience in the least bit.

Why is it that we're surprised when patience guided this intimate community of strangers. If only this didn't strike us as astounding, even extraordinary. I'm sure some genuinely were rushed and inconvenienced, a few with anxious children, maybe another who needed to finish a task for work. But in those few moments, something seemingly remarkable occurred – and something we need to bring more into our world.

The Hebrew word for patience is savlanut. Interesting that the root of this word is saval, meaning to bear a heavy burden, even to suffer. How much that meaning can teach us. Real patience takes work and at times possibly even suffering. It isn't necessarily in our nature to wait, to suspend our immediate need for satisfaction and to have something completed. Most importantly, real patience means putting aside our own wishes for the sake of another. Our faith teaches that this is the work we must do. Actually the Mussar masters (a virtue based approach to Jewish ethics developed in the 19th century) suggested that we must train our souls with patience.

As we enter our holiest time of the year, we are told that these are the days in which we must take an accounting of our souls, a heshbon hanefesh. No coincidence I'm sure that one of the earlier Mussar Rabbis, Menachem Mendel Lefin actually titled his book Heshbon HaNefesh and in it wrote, "When something bad happens to you and you did not have the power to avoid it, do not aggravate the situation even more through wasted grief."

There's a lot packed in that line – the energy we expend doing just that, what we end up making worse. Truth is I'm not the most patient individual. Hopefully though I'm learning. The daily changing realities of our covid world have helped some realize the value in not rushing through so much and appreciating the value even in what might slow us down. Those extra moments in the grocery store truly became a reminder of what matters most – and from that, a blessing. As my few purchased items casually strolled down the conveyor, the young man was back in his rhythm. Then he stretched his arms out wide and exclaimed, "what a day. Phew, I'm almost done!" Again, he smiled. As he handed me my groceries, he lifted up his hand to give me a high five and without realizing my hand slapped his back (breaking my hand touching covid protocol, though it seemed worth it). Then he yelled, "we did it. We did it together."

Yes we did. And I know that when I'm frustrated and my patience is waning, I'm going to circle back to this as such an important lesson for our new year.

Making the Best of It

Brian D. Fishman
Executive Director

What a crazy time this is for all of us. As I write this, only a few weeks before it is mailed out, I have no idea if any of it will be relevant. Right now, concern about the Delta variant is increasing and masks are becoming more prevalent. We started talking about how the High Holidays would be celebrated many months ago. So much has changed in those months. We have been consulting with our Covid Task Force on a regular basis and it has been like a roller coaster with good news and not so good news. We try to spin it in the most positive direction.

We recognized that like last year, the celebration of the holidays will be different this year. There will be members who stay home because they are cautious. There will be members who don't come to Temple for services because it is more convenient to roll out of bed, pour a cup of coffee and watch services in their pajamas. There will be people who appreciate the fact that they can enjoy services from home without worrying about parking, getting dressed up or where they were going to sit. And there will be people sitting in the sanctuary, fully engaged in the service because the holidays aren't the holidays unless they are at Temple. We are good with all of it.

If the last year and a half has taught us anything, we know the importance of making a plan that contains the critical element of flexibility. If I had a nickel for every time I heard the word "pivot"... We made a plan for the holidays based on the guidance of our Task Force, CDC and Board of Directors that we believe to be safe and engaging. Since a large percentage of our Family Service participants will not even be eligible for the vaccination, we decided to hold those services outdoors at the West Bloomfield Football Stadium. We are also going to require masks for everyone for indoor services which happens to be the same policy at all of the local temples and synagogues. It is quite amazing how quickly all of those organizations got on the same page.

And then there is Rabbi Mike's 25/26/27th Anniversary Weekend that follows right behind the holidays on the first weekend in October. It is even tougher to predict what things will be like because it is further away. We are going to make sure that it is the best event that we can have (while possibly having to remain a little flexible) for this well-deserved celebration.

Finally, I have to give a big THANK YOU to Audrey Bloomberg and Mel Pohl for all of their hard work and dedication as they move into their next chapters. Audrey was at Temple for over 5 years and has accepted a job as the Regional Director for Michigan Region BBYO. I am very excited that she has this wonderful opportunity and wish her continued success. Mel has been here for what seems like forever – over 15 years! If you have ever been in the Temple office, you probably know Mel and she probably knows you. I wish her only good things moving forward and she will not be a stranger as her family will remain as members. Both have been tremendous assets to Temple and will certainly be missed.

As always, please don't hesitate to contact me if there is anything that I can do for you.

The Days of Awe, Everyday

TEMPLE SHIR SHALOM'S the learning center preschool

Marsha Mitnick
Early Childhood
Learning Director

"All grown-ups were once children... but only few of them remember it."

The Little Prince, Antoine de Saint-Exupéry.

As I write this article there are children running around the playground in bathing suits. Their laughter is contagious as they rejoice in the coolness of the water from the sprinkler. For preschoolers every day is a new adventure; they look at the world in awe everyday...and there's that word "awe." With the holiday of Rosh Hashanah just weeks away I can't help but notice what else will follow. Rosh Hashanah commemorates the creation of the world. It marks the beginning of the Days of Awe, a 10 day period of introspection and repentance that culminates in Yom Kippur, also known as the Day of Atonement.

What do these religious holidays have to do with preschoolers? It is more the feel of what these holidays represents that connects with the processes of the young child. We celebrate the birthday of the world on Rosh Hashanah, a new beginning of a new year. For the young child every day is a new beginning. They wake up in the morning and, guaranteed, they will discover some new adventure. Their problem-solving skills are still developing and there is always a sense of wonder within their world.

For the child that attends The Learning Center the development of introspection is an ongoing process. Preschoolers by nature are egocentric. The world centers on them. This is how the preschooler is wired. Our job as their caregivers is to take note of their wiring and help them in the process self-regulation and the beginning awareness of what they bring to the community. How do they impact others? By understanding the individual child we help them become more successful in the group.

The act of atonement, making amends, is a huge gift that our preschoolers learn at The Learning Center. I call it the power of repair. Again, another process. Young children are just learning how to get along with others. Some make mistakes and some can be intentional. Having them revisit the issue, their friend, and checking on this other child is a big step in taking responsibility for their actions. Just think: they are doing this all the years that they are at preschool, not just for 10 days between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

I wish you all a L'Shanah Tova! Let's pray for a year of health and kindness! • marsha@shirshalom.org

Back to “Normal”

Andee Liberman
Associate Director

Every day I hear people contemplate how close we are to being back to normal. Some pushing that they want to go back to normal, others saying we will never be able to, and everything in between. I am here to say I don't really know what the old normal was. Was it normal not to wear masks, to feel protected after one flu shot a year, sending kids to school with a runny nose assuming it was no big deal? Or was it that we never really thought about what normal was? Through the chaos of going about our everyday lives, maybe we didn't stop to think about the broken system we were living in.

Now we have reached a point in the pandemic where many of us think that we are finally adapting to our new normal. Of course, it will vary by household but overall, it is pressuring us to think about sustainability and making decisions that ultimately are focused on keeping our children safe and healthy!

Here at SHORESH and with the Fruman Youth Program (SSTY), our new normal is continuing to follow the guidelines of our medical task force and embracing our outdoor spaces to the fullest! As we start another year of school out of the JCC, we are blessed to have indoor and outdoor spaces to use as classrooms. Our seventh and eighth grade Madrichim will visit different locations to volunteer and program and our high schoolers will continue to meet at Temple, which has been their normal all along!

Our new normal will feature new programs as we welcome SHORESH families back to campus. Get ready for a year of theme days like Pajama Day, superhero day and a visit from the petting farm animals as we discuss the story of Noah. We are excited to welcome back guest musicians and the Topsy Turvy Bus as we highlight sustainability. And last but not least, welcoming our students back to Temple for honors shabbats and to begin their retreat weekends.

SHORESH is happening and we are excited to be together again for our new normal in the 2021-2022 school year! Wishing everyone a happy and healthy new year! • andee@shirshalom.org

Project All Together

Gary Shuman

Vice President of Programming

As the High Holidays approach and we are gathering together physically again, I feel extremely grateful for both how our clergy and Temple staff pivoted to virtual programming to keep us connected over the past 18 months and for the beautiful Temple at the corner of Walnut and Orchard Lake that many of us remember being built.

The Temple was never actually completed as it was originally imagined and designed by Rabbi Dannel Schwartz and the architects. Now that we are returning to our physical home for study, prayer and coming together for the joy of special occasions, I was excited to be asked to be the Chairperson for the Project All Together Capital Campaign. The goal of Project All Together is to finish the original vision for our physical footprint where we can house our pre-school, The Learning Center and SHORESH programs within our own walls, and also be a showplace for our Congregation's simchas. Designs for the updated Temple are now available and will be shared at upcoming events.

With a significant lead gift from the June and Robert Gurwin Foundation, our goal is to raise $6.15 million to both expand and improve the Temple facilities and to also pay off our existing mortgage. Due to the lead gift, we will be able to break ground in Spring 2022 on the Temple extension and improvements. Paying off the mortgage will allow Rabbis Mike and Daniel to use more of our dues and donations for Temple programming, education and social action and make the Temple fiscally sound for all of our families for decades to come.

For more information please reach out to the Rabbis or contact me at 248.797.6695 or garypshuman@gmail.com. It's an exciting time for our Temple as we celebrate Rabbi Mike's 25 (and then some) years with us and we look forward to the next 25 years.

Social Action

Sallyjo Levine
Committee Chair

The social action committee has been involved in several projects recently. Each month we make, with the help of the Pine Hill Congregational Church, 300 complete lunches that include a sandwich, juice box, dessert, chips, and a banana. We always welcome the help. You may make the sandwiches at home if you choose. We make the sandwiches on a Saturday and put the lunches together on Sunday. The NOAH PROJECT serving the homeless population near Comerica Park is the recipient of these lunches.

On the first day of Shoresh, September 12, we will be collecting food for Yad Ezra. Even though Yad Ezra is a kosher food bank the food that is donated need not be kosher. They trade food with Gleaners and give them the non-kosher food. We will be collecting at both SHORESH and at the temple.

Delivering for Yad Ezra is on our calendar for September 26. We need four cars, two adults or teens in a car. It takes about 1 ½ hours and it is an easy, feel-good project.

LIFE REMODELED is a Detroit program that we have participated in before. On Thursday, October 7, we are planning on joining other congregations in working in Detroit. The hours are 1:00-5:00 and we can arrange carpools if participants want them. More information will come in the weekly eblast.

Please reach out to me if you have an interest in any of these projects or if you have a project to suggest. Now that we are able to be out of our homes a little more we would like to really start getting more involved in our community.

Book Club

Our TSS book club was overjoyed to meet in person for our July meeting. We first celebrated with dinner and dessert and then discussed "This Tender Land" by William Kreuger which we all loved.

Our August discussion centered on "Out of the Easy" by Ruta Sepetys A departure setting for us, New Orleans 1950 underworld.

Our September meeting will cover "The Yellow Bird Sings" by Jennifer Rosner and October's book will be "The Extraordinary Life of Sam Hell" by Robert Dugoni.

We send New Year's greetings for a sweet and healthy new year to our TSS community. All are welcome to join, contact Judy Singer at judygsinger1122@gmail.com

What's On My Mind...

It's hard for me to believe that summer is coming to an end. Our teenage daughter just returned home after working for nine weeks at Goldman Union Camp Institute ("Camp G.U.C.I."). It's a Union for Reform Judaism camp that does a spectacular job building community among campers through the love of Judaism. I feel so grateful that this summer experience offered the needed antidote to the stress, confinement, and uncertainty she felt this past year. She herself told us that camp uplifted her by reinforcing her spirituality.

This restoration of sorts, has thankfully permeated into our home. I have been especially touched by her continual singing to herself the popular camp song, "Everything is Alright" by Dan Nichols. To be honest, after the difficult year we have all had, this feels like a welcome sign of optimism and renewal. It also seems like a fitting reminder of the coming High Holidays and the opportunity this time brings for self reflection and improvement.

In this mindset of embracing the Jewish New Year as an opportunity for personal growth, particularly in these uncertain times that call for continued vigilance and flexibility, I am clinging more than ever to the concept of "casting off" or letting things go. This year, I intend to "let more things go" in the hope of moving forward. I particularly want to keep at the forefront of my mind the many things that connect us all rather than divide us. Just as I have seen how my (and I suspect your) camper has returned home a better version of herself, I want to leave behind some of my last year's worry and negativity. This year's High Holidays at Shir Shalom offer the perfect time to reflect and work towards these goals. Just as it is necessary for Temple to build flexibility into how we worship, so too do I aspire to better incorporate acceptance and flexibility in my personal thinking. This message has never been so poignant as we are working to ensure that during the High Holidays each member of our community feels uplifted, connected and of course safe.

In my first Scribe article, I was confident and excited by the prospect of our congregation coming back together in person. I enthusiastically reported that we would finally complete our planned celebration of Rabbi Mike's 25th anniversary with a culmination weekend October 1, 2 & 3. Since that time, our path out of this pandemic has become less straightforward. Thus, while our in-person celebration remains the plan, rest assured that going forward we will continue to pay careful attention to CDC and our own Covid task force safety guidelines. I am, however, genuinely confident that my daughter's camp mantra: "everything will be alright" applies to our Shir Shalom family. I am grateful that the magic of this camp-style positivity will be carried through for her at Shoresh and the Fruman Youth Program/SSTY. Personally, I am thankful for the message's reminder to look forward. Above all, I know that in the coming months, regardless of where we choose to worship (in-person or virtually) for the High Holidays and how we ultimately celebrate Rabbi Mike, our congregation will be connected and purpose driven as we welcome in this season of reflection and renewal.
