

The Talmud of Relationships

How can I tame my ego? How can I bestow appropriate honor on a difficult parent? How might I accept my own suffering, and that of those I love? How can I balance work and family? How can I best relate to people in need?

Together, we will enter the Talmudic study house and continue the values-based, Jewish conversations that began 2,000 years ago. We will explore how the ancient texts of Talmud can facilitate modern relationship building—with family members, colleagues, strangers, the broader Jewish community, and ourselves. Course is based on the books of the same name by Rabbi Amy Scheinerman.

Texts will be studied in English translation. Participants of any and all backgrounds are welcome.

We plan to study in the KTI Social Hall and will switch to Zoom as circumstances necessitate. Check your KTI email or call the office for information. Park in the first parking lot in the row furthest from the Gantz Building to stay clear of the Early Childhood Program pick-up.

Wednesdays
12:15 - 1:30 pm

- October 13 Finding Our Place
- October 27 Controlling Our Anger
- November 10 Understanding Our Suffering
- December 1 Approaching Prayer
- December 15 Honoring Our Parents
- January 5 Affirming Our Sexuality
- January 19 Balancing Family and Study
- February 16 Maintaining Self-Control
- March 2 Respecting Human Dignity
- March 23 Creating Consensus in Community
- April 6 Clashing Titans
- April 27 Moving to the Land of Israel
- May 11 Straddling Two Worlds
- May 25 Caring for Poor People

