In This Issue...

Don't you just love winter in Florida? Come January I always think to myself, THIS is why people move here. For me it's not just the temperature. Something about the bright blue sky, the wildlife, the greenery...it is all so energizing. Though this year I think my extra burst of energy is actually motivated by all of you. Although we have been reopen for two years, every time we are able to bring back another thing we haven't done since pre-pandemic, I get so excited, and the last few months seeing so many of you taking part in TBA programs motivates us to do more. So what more is coming in 2023?

Our Lunch & Learn series with Rabbi Alon has been so popular that we are going to continue it through February. If you haven't tried it yet, join us—we provide lunch, you just bring yourself and an open mind! Our Musical Shabbat series will also continue with beautiful Harp and Klezmer music in January and February along with another congregational Shabbat dinner featuring homemade Ashkenazi classics.

This past month saw the return of Canasta and Mah Jongg, and next month we are bringing back our annual brisket competition (get your tickets early, we've always sold out in the past), as well as a wonderful Tu B'Shevat experience, two great speaker breakfasts hosted by our Sisterhood and Men's Club, special sermons, lions, tigers, bears, and a partridge in a pear tree—oh wait I'm mixing things up, but I am just that excited. I hope you will join us, and I wish

A MESSAGE FROM RABBI ALON

SHARANSKY AND MANDELA

In his book "Never Alone: Prison, Politics, and My People," Natan Sharansky describes this meeting with Nelson Mandela.

On February 11, 1990, four years to the day after my release, the South African government freed Nelson Mandela... A few weeks later, I received a phone call... "Mandela knows who you are...he read your book in prison and wants to meet you when he visits America".

I was curious to meet Mandela too, wondering how he coped during his prison ordeal.... [When we met] he told me that, in 1988, Helen Suzman, the only South African parliamentarian who had fought stubbornly for the right to visit him in prison, gave him a copy of [my book] Fear No Evil. Mandela was in his twenty-fifth year of imprisonment...

"The interrogations were familiar to me," Mandela told me, "but boy, you really suffered."

"I suffered?" I asked, surprised. "You suffered three times worse. Twenty-seven years!"

"But," Mandela replied proudly, "my people were with me. And you were alone."

I was surprised how agitated his words made me. It felt like he was insulting my partners in crime, the Jewish people. "But my people were with me too," I proclaimed, equally proudly.

Mandela smiled. "I read your book. It was all in your imagination. My people were with me in real life, all the time." We compared notes. While both of us had been stuck in a place called a prison, we were in vastly different institutions. Mandela explained that, during his long stretch on Robben Island, he met regularly with his comrades. They ran their revolutionary struggle from their cells. They received frontline reports, set strategy, made tactical decisions, and sent instructions to the field. He didn't have to play chess in his head.

Was the world of my struggle only imagined? Was I really that alone? For me, my dialogue with my people in prison was no less real than Mandela's.

What a remarkable story. Mandela, who served nearly three decades in prison, triple that of Sharansky, considered the latter's tribulation much worse than his. Mandela had his people with him; Sharansky was alone. But Sharansky had a rare mental capacity, as he played chess in his head he never stopped mentally communicating with his people, which gave him the strength to survive the gulag imprisonment.

Most of us are not Sharansky. We need to be part of a real, tangible community to survive, let alone to thrive. Sharansky, as a freedom fighter had no choice—we do. Let's make 2023 a year of belonging. I encourage you to get out and join any kind of group that puts you together with others. This is the way God created us; as God said "It is not good for a person to be alone" (Genesis 2:18).

Happy 2023!

Our third bake sale of the school year will be on Friday, February 10 from 3:00pm-5:00pm in The One School lobby. We appreciate all of you that provide baked goods to make our fundraiser a huge success! Be on the lookout for volunteer opportunities as well.

Lastly, be sure to save the date for our Annual Gala on Saturday, April 1!
