RABBI'S MESSAGE:

The portion we read this week, Naso, is distinguished by it being the lengthiest of all portions, numbering 176 verses. This is also the number of verses in the longest chapter in Psalms, 119, which is comprised of 22 sections, corresponding to the 22 letters in the aleph beis, each possessing 8 verses for a total of 176 verses. The largest tractate in the Talmud is Baba Basra which numbers 176 blatt; folios.

The masters of the secrets of Torah reveal that this counters the chief klippah, impure spiritual force, of the Seventy Nations that oppose the Jewish nation. The grandson of Esav, יצו, Tzfu the son of Elifaz. יצו being numerically equivalent to 176.

The Talmud reports an intriguing tale regarding Rabbi Yehoshua ben Chana. He retold how he once stayed at an inn and his hostess served him beans the first two days. He ate heartily not leaving anything over. On the third day she ruined the beans by over salting them. He refused to eat it. When asked by the hostess as to why he left them over he responded the he had already eaten. (Eruvin 53:)

The Chida explains that the Hebrew word for beans is פולין, which when jumbled spells out פלויני, literally meaning an anonymous non-descript individual, which the Zohar teaches is a pseudonym for the Yetzer HaRa, the Evil Inclination.

The story is a metaphor for life. The first day in the episode is the first period of life when we are inclined to pursue physical pleasure. The second day represents the second segment on life when we seek stature and honor. The last day corresponds to the last part of our lives when we awaken to the reality that material objects nor can social standing bring us happiness, and it is only the nurturing of our soul that can attain eternal bliss.

Perhaps that feeling of being 'non-descript' and anonymous is the ultimate power of the Evil Inclination to defeat us. He poisons our positive outlook by making us feel inferior and unworthy.

During the Yom Tov of Shavuot I had the opportunity to partake in a series of Shiurim given by a stellar cast of Talmidei Chachomim led by the Chief Rabbi of Israel himself.

I was also privileged to recite Tehillim and pray Mincha at the alleged gravesite of King David, the sweet singer of Israel.

I was also inspired to observe the throngs of Jews who flooded the alleyways leading to the Kosel on the eve of the Chag as well as through it.

Partners in Torah

The Torah is described By King Solomon in Proverbs (16, 24) as צוף דבש, honeycombs. The honeycomb represents the sweetness of Torah that is the product of the conglomerate effort of a team of bees that produce a most exquisite taste.

Our people joined together instinctively drawn and elevated by the notion of our connection to that momentous day when G-d bestowed his treasure to His beloved children.

I observed hundreds of people attending the learning; men, women and many children, uplifted by the Torah's brilliance.

I was overwhelmed by the sights of throngs being drawn by the warmth and encouragement of the beloved King David and his words that incite us all to overcome challenge and attaining greatness.

This צוף, sweet honeycomb, is the antithesis to the power of יצו, for it too equals 176.

Each one of us can access prominence, for each one of us is a virtual letter in the Torah that is comprised in the 600,000 core souls that stood at Sinai.

It is the portion that begins with the word נשא, uplift, and our connection to its letters that enthuse us to awaken from our anonymity to claim our role among the People of Israel.

It is the power of our connection to G-d in prayer that empowers us to reach the heights of that relationship.

It is in the wisdom of our Torah that we nourish our souls to find its unique portion in Torah. It is no accident that the first chapter in Baba Basra is entitled, חנותותא, partners!

I thank all those who partnered to make the Yom Tov at Ohel Moshe a most exciting one.

I thank all the well-wishers who shared in our Simcha, although from afar.

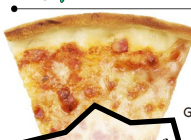

We are all connected by the Torah in all its might that is a reflection of the Divine presence that embodies it as well.

May we build on what we experienced until we will finally nourish directly from the source of all creation, with the coming of Moshiach speedily in our days!
