

Denise Crevin brings a variety of skills and experience to her role as Director of Education. She has a Masters of Arts in Religious Education from Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, as well as a Masters of Arts in Broadcast and Electronic Communication Arts from San Francisco State University and a BA degree in Communication Studies from UCLA.

Prior to her current role, Denise served our congregation as Keshet Director, where she was responsible for all programming for our post-b'nai mitzvah youth. During her tenure in this role, our congregation experienced greater teen engagement, with 75% of our 8th-12th graders involved in at least one of our offerings. She has also served our congregation as a Religious School teacher for K'tonton, our parent participation class for 3-5 year olds.

Her other work experience includes serving as an Educational Consultant for Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority, writing for CNN Headline News, doing public relations for Marriott Hotels and a variety of toy companies, managing the Creative Department of a sales training company, and co-owning and running a market research company with her husband, Dan.

She also brings a variety of nonprofit experience in leadership development, programming, recruitment, and fundraising through her volunteer roles. She has served on the national board of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority and on various committees, she was co-President of the San Francisco chapter of Hadassah, and has chaired fundraisers and events for organizations in Sacramento including Hadassah, Federation, her local MOMS Club, and her children's elementary school.

Denise and her husband, Dan, grew up at the same congregation in the East Bay. They live in Elk Grove with their two children, Ava and Max, and love being part of the CBI community.
