D'var Torah: Choosing Responsibility

Rabbi Mordechai Silverstein, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

Just last week, we were standing at the foot of Mount Sinai for the experience of the revelation of God's Torah. Following this grand and auspicious event, Parashat Mishpatim finds us deep in the intricate minutia of laws governing civil society, some of which seem relevant, some irrelevant, some concerting and some deeply disconcerting.

The parashah opens with the laws of the eved ivri (Hebrew slave), a thief or debtor who became indentured to another in order to work off what they owe. They work for however long it takes, but no more than six years, because in the Sabbatical year all debts are forgiven and Hebrew slaves are freed. But, the Torah tells us, when the time came for manumission, the eved Ivri could choose to remain a slave in perpetuity: "But if the servant declares: I love my master, my wife, and my children; I do not wish to go free; his master shall take him before God. He shall be brought to the door, or the door-post; and his master shall pierce his ear with an awl, and he shall remain his slave for life." (Exodus 21:5-6)

The rabbinic sages found the very idea that someone might want to remain a slave highly distasteful. In the Babylonian Talmud, we find two midrashim which examine the religious and philosophic significance of the ear-piercing ceremony: "Rabban Yohanan ben Zakkai used to interpret this verse as something quite precious. [He asked:] Why was the ear singled out from all the other limbs of the body? The Holy One blessed be He said: This ear, which heard My voice on Mount Sinai when I proclaimed: 'For it is to Me that the children of Israel are servants' (Leviticus 25:55) - they are my servants, and not servants of servants, and yet this [man] went and acquired a master for himself? - let it (his ear) be pierced! Rabbi Shimon ben Rabbi [Yehudah HaNasi] [also] expounded this verse as something precious. Why were the door and doorpost singled out from all other parts of the house? The Holy One blessed be He said: The door and the doorpost, which were witnesses in Egypt when I passed over the lintel and the doorposts and proclaimed: 'For it is to Me that the children of Israel are servants' - they are My servants, and not servants of servants, and so I brought them forth from bondage to freedom, yet this [man] went and acquired a master for himself? - Let him (his ear) be pierced in their presence (the doorpost and the door)!" (Kiddushin 22b)

The sages connect the two symbols - the ear and the lintel - to our two primary ways of knowing - hearing and seeing - and the two seminal moments in Israelite history - the Sinaitic revelation and the Exodus from Egypt. The ear knows that God is our one true master; the doorpost knows that God wants us to be free. The absolute wrongness of the eved Ivri should be obvious to us all, and yet, paradoxically, we have the God-given freedom to enslave ourselves to another. It is not forbidden, and one who chooses it is not punished; the piercing ceremony is just a lesson to drive home the stunning significance of the choice.

On a certain level, all choices mean relinquishing some of our freedom. The deeper question is whether we are relinquishing our freedom just to be comfortable, or to make a more just, caring, and peaceful world. Are we abdicating responsibility or embracing it? For a people who experienced Sinai and the Exodus, the choice should be clear.

Parashat Mishpatim Self-Study

Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

We ended last week with the revelation at Sinai. As part of that, the people received some of the laws of the Torah ("Mishpatim" means 'laws'.) Here is a taste of a few of them (this is in no way a Halachic discussion.):

1) The parashah opens with the words "And these are the laws that you will put before them" (21:1). Where were the laws that follow given, and how do you think that they are connected (if at all) to the previous parashah?

2) After the law of buying a Hebrew slave, the Torah brings the case of a father who sells his daughter as a servant (21:7-11). Why would a father sell his daughter? The Torah stresses that the regular "exit" laws of slavery do not apply in this case. The buyer is limited in what he might do to her, but he could marry her to his son. Why would the Torah allow such an arrangement?

3) If a person intentionally kills another person, the Torah says "you shall [even?] take him from My altar to die" (21:14). Why would the killer be by the altar? If you want to see examples of persons holding onto the altar, look at I Kings 1:50, 2:28.

4) If a fire goes on to burn some thorns, and a crop is destroyed by the fire, the person starting the fire has to pay for the burnt things (22:5). Why do you think that the Torah has to specify who is financially responsible?

5) At the end of the parashah Moshe is told to go up to God together with Aaron, his 2 older sons Nadav and Avihu, and seventy elders of Israel. But in the end, only Moshe will go up, and the rest will stay back, and Moshe will bring them the words of God and the laws (24:1-3). Why do you think that all these people need to go with Moshe if they are actually not allowed to go up?

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.

We Are Still Helping Those Who Have Been Affected due to the Federal Government Shutdown

Canned Food & More Drive

Many families from our partner school, E. Prep & Village Prep Woodland Hills, are being affected with delays in the SNAP food distribution (food stamps). We are collecting canned and non-perishable foods and household supplies that will be brought to the school immediately. A bin is located in Gross Atrium which will remain in place through the month of February.

If You Know Someone Who Needs Help

We are here for you! The clergy is available for support and counseling to anyone adversely affected by the federal government shutdown. Additionally, an anonymous donor has generously offered to provide financial assistance to any of our members who are facing challenges during this time. If you or someone you know needs help, please contact any clergy member.
