D'var Torah: Simple Gifts

Rabbi Mordechai Silverstein, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

Sefer Vayikra opens with a survey of the voluntary/free-will sacrificial offerings. It begins with the largest, and seemingly most significant, offerings: bulls, sheep, and goats, continues with pigeons and doves, and finishes the survey with the mincha (grain) offering, seemingly the least impressive and least significant of the free-will offerings. It is easy to be unimpressed by the mincha offering, since it was the least expensive offering, and mostly brought by those with the least means.

Oddly, the wording used to introduce the mincha offering was unique among these sacrifices. All of the other offerings are introduced with the phrase: "Should any adam (person) from you bring an offering" (1:2). But with regard to the mincha offering, the Torah uses the language: "Should a nefesh (person) bring forward a grain offering" (2:1). Why the change from "adam" to "nefesh?"

While both mean "person," the word "nefesh" also means "self." The following midrash picks up on this, reading the change from "adam" to "nefesh" as emphasizing the "will" of the person making the offering. It is essential for God that the mincha offering be brought with the "right will." The midrash moves the discussion of this idea through a number of subjects, in the end, winding its way back to the significance of the mincha sacrifice:

Better is one who studies two orders (sedarim) of the Mishnah and is conversant in them than one who studies halachot (laws) and is not conversant in them out of a desire to be known as one adept in halachot... Better is one who gives Tzedakah from money that is his own, than the one who goes and robs others in order to give tzedakah just so that he might be called a charitable person...better is a handful [of the flour] of the mincha offering of a poor man than the finely ground incense offering of the congregation...it carries with it expiation while the later does not. (abridged and adapted from Vayikra Rabbah 3:1 Margoliot ed. pp. 54-59)

One might presume from the ordering of the sacrifices at the beginning of the Sefer Vayikra that bigger is better - the larger and more expensive the animal offered the greater its significance and potency. And this is, indeed, often true in the everyday human realm. Grand gestures are celebrated, while modest ones barely register. The goal is to make an impression. And indeed, without faith, what value is there in what goes unnoticed? If a tree falls in the forest, and no one is there to hear it, did it really make a sound?

According to the midrash, the mincha offering provides a sharp rebuke to this way of thinking, reminding us that God notices. And unlike the society around us, God values quality over quantity, quiet competence over an inflated resume, a modest gift of what is truly yours over a grand gift made with resources that are stolen or otherwise unearned. Ultimately, the Torah teaches us that an act's significance does not lie in the impression it makes on others, but on the impression it makes on you.

Parashat Vayikra Self-Study
Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

We are opening the 3rd book of Torah - Leviticus. In addition, Purim will be celebrated on March 20-21 so here are also some questions on Megillat Esther.

1) The first chapters of Vayikra (Leviticus) read like a manual for sacrificing. It presents a great many possible sacrifices, but for the first 3 chapter there is no indication as to why a person is sacrificing. What do you think might be the reason for a sacrifice, and why is such a reason not stated?

2) Chapter 2 gives instructions for sacrifices that are not from the living. Why do you think that such a category existed? If sacrifices have a symbolic aspect, what do you think that these symbolize?

Megillat Esther

3) The dates in the Megillah are given both as they appear in the Torah ("the Tenth month", "the Twelfth month" ...) and by the Babylonian names ("Tevet" "Adar"). What might you conclude from this duality?

4) After the proclamation of Haman's decree to kill all the Jews, Mordechai demands of Esther that she go to the king and beg for her people. If she won't go, thinking that she is safe in the palace, that help will come from other quarters, but Esther and her father's house will perish (4:8-14). What do you think that Mordechai meant?

5) Esther begs the king to repeal Haman's decree to kill the Jews (8:3-14) but it turns out to be impossible: a law signed by the king cannot be repealed. What is the problem with such a legal system? In the Megillah this is solved by issuing a counter law. What would such a law say and what is the result of these conflicting laws?

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.
