Shabbat Rocks!
Fridays, April 20, May 18, June 15,
July 20 and August 17 • 7 pm

This season has been generously underwritten by The Jan & Ron Moskowitz Family, Phyllis & Sidney Reisman and Jocelyn & Peter Saltz.

Bring your families to this wonderful evening, with a live band playing some of today's most upbeat Jewish music. You will find yourself tapping your toes, clapping your hands and dancing to these contemporary melodies. Multiple musical genres are woven through the service, highlighting text from each of the Psalms, which creates an energizing and engaging service. A special prayer book offers Hebrew, transliteration and English to make this service user friendly. Listen to and download tracks from our website. Services will be held in the Linden Family Courtyard, weather permitting.

Thank you to our oneg sponsors: Lynda Silverberg and Charlotte Kurland in honor of the Bar Mitzvah of their grandson, Ryan Silverberg, and Phyllis & Sidney Reisman (April), The Jan & Ron Moskowitz Family (May), Jocelyn & Peter Saltz (June), Men's Club (July) and Sisterhood (August).

D'var Torah: Language of Sacrifice

Rabbi Andy Shapiro Katz, Director of North American Engagement

In a Jewish movement that has removed prayers for the reinstatement of korbanot (sacrifices), these last two parshiot are challenging. But properly understood, korbanot can give us insight into the human experience.

This week's parasha, Tsav, describes the same korbanot as last week's parasha, VaYikra. But due to its focus on the kohanim, it lists the korbanot in order of their holiness, as expressed in how much of the korban is consumed, and by whom:

- Olah / Burnt Offering (ox, sheep, goat, dove, or pigeon - entirely burned on the altar)
- Minchah / Gift Offering (grain - part burned on the altar and part eaten by the kohen)
- Chatat / Sin Offering (ox, sheep, goat, dove, pigeon, or grain - part burned on the altar, part eaten by the kohen, and part destroyed)
- Asham / Guilt Offering (same as Chatat)

Shlamim / Well-Being Offering (ox, sheep, goat - part burned on the altar, part eaten by the kohen, and most eaten by the owner)

One might think that this menu of sacrifices originates with the Book of Leviticus, but in fact there are references to Olah, Minchah and Shlamim (often called Zevach) throughout Genesis and Exodus. Although not referred to by the term korbanot until Leviticus, these three offerings were made by Israelites and non-Israelites alike long before the Torah was given. In other words, Olah, Minchah, and Shlamim are just an earlier (and arguably more primitive) symbolic language for certain timeless and universal human-spiritual feelings. By considering both their specific characteristics, and the stories in which they appear, we can understand what each one seeks to express.

The Olah - fully consumed on the altar - acknowledges our fundamental imperfection and lack of standing: that if God's judgement was not tempered with mercy, or held in check by covenant, or if God did not find us pleasing, we would not, and should not, exist. When Noah makes such an offering after exiting the Ark, he is acknowledging that though he may have been the most righteous in his generation, he still has the same flawed nature that prompted God to destroy the world. And when God commands Avraham to offer up Yitzhak as an Olah, it is to emphasize that sparing "the righteous" was more about God's choice to be merciful than the strength of Avraham's argument.

The Minchah is similar, but without the same degree of self-negation Yaakov sends a Minchah to Esau to dissuade him from seeking vengeance. And years later, Yaakov and his sons send one to Yosef in the hope that he will spare Binyamin. A Minchah is therefore less an act of surrender, and more a way to curry favor with a more powerful, and potentially angry party.

But whereas the Olah and Minchah come from a place of yirah (fear/awe), Zevach/Shlamim is rooted in ahava (love). It is a recognition of the wholeness and well-being that comes from being in relationship. One makes an offering, but much of it is returned to the owner to enjoy and share with others. Thus Yaakov does a zevach with Lavan, essentially saying: "I took advantage of you, but you took advantage of me. Let's acknowledge that we benefit each other."

This brings us to Har Sinai. In Exodus 24:5, as part of the Naaseh V'Nishma ceremony of accepting the covenant with God, Moshe and Bnei Yisrael offer up both Olot and Zevachim. And Yitro, when he comes to Moses after Har Sinai, also offers both! They grasp the powerful dichotomy of the Sinai experience: that the power and fury of that moment produced not only a recognition of our nothingness vis-a-vis God, but also the empowering dignity of being in covenant with a God who wants us as partners.

In life, all of us move between these two extremes - the sense that our existence means nothing, and the sense that it is deeply important. It is our blessing as Jews to have inherited a tradition that provides us with the symbolic language we need to grasp this, wrestle with it, and find the meaning within it.

For Discussion: When is Jewish practice for you most like an Olah - an offering of surrender and self-negation? When is it most like a Shlamim - an offering of wholeness, thanksgiving, and mutual benefit?

Self-Study by Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty
Our Parasha belongs to the Kohanim (priests). We open with general instructions for sacrificing, and move on to the process of turning Aaron and his sons from ordinary Levites into Kohanim.

1) Ashes accumulated on the altar (mizbe'ach) and had to be cleared off. A Kohen would remove it and leave it near the mizbe'ach. What would happen when too much started accumulating (6:3-4)? Why do you think that the Kohen who took it away had to change his clothing as part of this responsibility?

2) A person bringing an offering of Shlamim (wholeness) should bring it with his own 2 hands (7:28-30). What do you think is the significance or symbolism of this action?

3) Chapter 8 describes the preparation period for Aaron and his sons as they are becoming Kohanim that will serve in the Mishkan. Moshe is told to wash them with water (8:5-6). What might be the symbolism of the use of water? Are there other occasions on which we use water for ritual, rather than hygienic, reasons?

4) Following the washing, Moshe dresses Aaron in most of his special garments. What do you think this is intended to symbolize? Are there other places (not necessarily in Torah) where clothing carry similar symbolism?

5) The preparations before the Mishkan goes into full use will last seven days. What might that remind us of? Can you find any connection between the building and preparing for the Mishkan and the period of 7 days that you thought of?

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.

Volunteer Shabbat Saturday, April 21

This year's Volunteer Shabbat will recognize congregants who generously give back to the shul with their time, treasure and talent. A sweets-filled kiddush will be sponsored by Bob Cohen and Sue & Jeff Nash in everyone's honor. If you would like a part in the service, please contact Shani Kadis or Sue Nash (440-759-3042).

Sisterhood Lunch & Learn A History of Cake & Bread

Tuesday, April 24 • 12:15 pm • Park Synagogue East
