D'var Torah: Revealing Hidden Talents

Rabbi Jim Michaels, Conservative Yeshiva Student

This week's Torah portion focuses on the construction of the Mishkan. In the three previous portions, the Torah has described everything about this portable place of worship, both the edifice and the holy objects inside. This week and next, we read how the plan was executed in faithful detail.

The "lead architect" for the project was Betzalel. The rabbis understood the name to mean "In God's Shadow," indicating that his appointment was ordained by God, who extended divine providence toward him. Various rabbinic legends convey different aspects of his commission.

Rashi points out that Betzalel was a great-grandson of Miriam. That means he came from a distinguished family which had status in the community. His assistant was Oholiab who, according to Genesis Rabbah, was not considered to be distinguished in stature or status. Nonetheless, the two men worked together, regardless of their family origins. The Rabbis learn from this that the work of the Mishkan was to be a democratic process. Everyone's efforts were welcome and important.

It's legitimate to ask about Betzalel's qualifications for this important task. Certainly, he never had any on-the-job experience, so what were his credentials? To answer this question, the Torah describes him as being chacham leiv. The term literally means "wise of heart," but the traditional understanding is that Betzalel (and all who worked on the project) had skills which had been unrealized and untapped. Midrash Tanchuma says that God grants wisdom to those who already have it. God knew Betzalel had artistic potential and allowed him to put it into practice.

In my experience working in a large senior residence, I saw how this can play out. Many residents had never participated in arts or crafts projects. They often said they had been discouraged in their formative years. We encouraged everyone to take part, with or without prior experience. Many who went to these activities discovered talent they never knew they had. Several entered paintings in judged competitions; one woman was thrilled when her painting was actually sold!

This self-discovery extended beyond the creative arts. One 99-year old man had never expressed interest in attending religious services. One morning, he stopped me while he was eating breakfast and asked if I could bring him to our daily minyan. "I've made a new year's resolution," he said. "I want to come to services every day for a year." I was glad to affirm his request and brought him in his wheelchair to the synagogue that same day. He easily kept his resolution and continued for another year. "I never realized I could find so much fulfillment while sitting in the synagogue," he said.

Over the past two months, I've seen another example of this concept. I have been studying at the Conservative Yeshiva, along with many young students, just starting on their path of Jewish learning. Some are rabbinical students, but many others are simply there for Torah lishmah - study for its own sake. They come from all over the world. They've discovered skills in Hebrew and Jewish texts and have derived great satisfaction from their studies. It has been an inspiration, one which is available to all.

The old saying goes, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks." The concept of chacham leiv contradicts that notion. Each person has many untapped skills and talents. We only need to try. Perhaps, like Betzalel, we'll find those new talents and put them to use for personal and universal benefit.

Rabbi Jim Michaels recently retired as Director of Pastoral Care of the Charles E. Smith Life Communities in Rockville, MD. He currently is studying at the Conservative Yeshiva in Jerusalem.

Parashat Vayakhel Self-Study Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

We have reached the point of action. After receiving lengthy instructions for building the Mishkan (Tabernacle), it is finally happening. What will it look like when put into practice?

Note that this is Shabbat Shekalim, the first of several Shabatot on which we read a special Maftir (last section of Torah reading). This Maftir is found in the beginning of last week's reading.

1) Few sections of Torah state that they were told to the entire congregation, but this Parasha opens with a gathering of EVERYONE in the congregation (35:1). Why do you think that Moshe would be reluctant to address the entire people together?

2) Moshe warns the people against creative work (melakha) on Shabbat, for that there are the other 6 days. Then he mentions the prohibition against lighting a fire on Shabbat (35:2-3). Why do you think that he mentions this particular action?

3) Betzalel, the artist and craftsman, is gifted with the knowledge and talent to work with all the precious materials. He is also able to teach (35:34). Why does this need to be mentioned? How do you think this affected the work on the Mishkan?

4) When instructed to build the ark, Moshe is told to place the Covenant in the ark (25:16). When Betzalel executes the directions given to Moshe, that detail is missing (37:1-9). What might be the reason?

5) Shabbat Shekalim: Every person who can be counted in the census, from the age of 20, has to give ½ a shekel 'atonement/ransom for his life' (30:12). This was given to the Mishkan, and everyone gave an equal amount. How do you think that this was put to use so that it would constitute 'atonement' for the people?

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.

Women's Seder
Sunday, March 31 • 5 pm

Everyone will have a role in this seder as we celebrate together through music, prayer and Mediterranean food. Women will inspire the Passover narrative with their voices and experiences. Bring your friends - all women are invited!
