D'var Torah: People & Counting

Rabbi Joel Levy, Rosh Yeshiva, Conservative Yeshiva in Jerusalem

The book of Numbers begins with a great census listing the numbers of all the male Israelites of military age according to their tribes. Parshat Bemidbar continues by describing the tribes arrayed on the plain, a great army of Israelite warriors in precise formation around the tent of meeting, each tribe around its fluttering ancestral banner (2:2).

Rashi (France, 1040-1105) comments that this great act of counting comes to demonstrate God's love for Israel and to establish the significance of each and every Israelite. Anyone who has ever accompanied a group of children on a school trip and who has feverishly counted them over and over again will know the deep anxiety of losing even one precious child.

But sadly, instead of marching into Canaan, this great cohort of warriors perishes in the desert - every last one of them except for Caleb and Joshua! Following the sin of the spies, God delivers their sentence:

In his commentary on the verse above, Rashi picks up beautifully and brutally on the role the "numbering" plays in their fate: "Anyone who was included in any census in which you were counted, like the military census or the shekalim census, anyone included in any of these numbers will die..." It is precisely those gloriously arrayed and carefully numbered ranks from Parshat Bemidbar who will be lost forever, their ashes blended imperceptibly into the desert sands.

And yet, when Bnei Yisrael enters the land 40 years later, there is still a full complement of soldiers. How can this be? Herodotus writes about the "ten thousand immortals" of the ancient Persian army who were so called because their unit's strength was kept constantly at exactly 10,000 men; every killed, seriously wounded or sick member was immediately replaced. They were "immortal" precisely because of their facelessness and replaceability. This is how the the Netziv, Naftali Zvi Yehuda Berlin (Poland, 1816-1893) reads Bemidbar in his great work Ha'Emek Davar: the number of soldiers remained constant through the 40 years because they were utterly replaceable. Counting people, it turns out, cuts both ways - either expressing the absolute significance of each individual, or erasing it.

In this day and age, we are profoundly invested in the idea that each individual is a being of infinite value who has a unique and important role to play in the world. Indeed our tradition calls individuals an "olam katan" - a small universe. Religion plays an essential role in impressing upon us the sanctity and infinite worth (Tzelem Elokim) of human life.

But it is also religion's role to give us a sense of the bigger picture, so that we can see how we are pieces of the whole, not the whole itself. Some may even find it calming, or even comforting, to know that we are cogs in a machine - expendable in the extreme. Our immortality, so to speak, lies in our participation in the broader scheme of things, a scheme that we can barely glimpse.

As Rabbi Simcha Bunim of Peschischa taught: In our pockets, we should carry two notes, one that says: "For my sake was the world created" and one that says: "I am but dust and ashes." The trick is in knowing which to take out when.

Parashat Bemidbar - Shavuot Self-Study
Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

This parasha, the start of the fourth book of the Torah, recounts the census taken one year after leaving Egypt in preparation to entering the Land of Israel, as well as subsequent travel in the desert. And right on the heels of Shabbat we have Shavuot, during which the book of Ruth is read.

Questions on Bemidbar:

- 1) The Levites are not included in the census that is carried out in the beginning of this Parasha of those fit for the army. What is the Levites job? (1:50-51) Do you think that this job means that they are safe in times of war? Why?
- 2) The People of Israel were camped around the Mishkan on 4 sides, and travelled according to this order (2:1-31). What is the advantage of this format?

Questions on the Book of Ruth:

- 3) Naomi was once a well off lady from Bethlehem in Judah. As the story opens, she seems to have lost her wealth, but more importantly, she has lost her family. Only her two Moabite daughters-in-law are left. Naomi decided to return to Judah (Ruth 1:1-6). What might be going through her mind as she sets out to go?
- 4) Ruth insists on going with Naomi, despite being a Moabite and having nothing to look forward to in Bethlehem, a Judean town. What do you think motivated Ruth? Ruth declares to Naomi "your nation is my nation, your God is my God..." (1:16-17). What is she telling Naomi?
- 5) When Ruth meets Boaz, the owner of the field in which she is gathering leftovers (and who turns out to be a relative) he declares that he has heard that she left her father and mother and the land of her birth and gone to a nation she did not know previously (2:11). What other biblical character did a similar thing? (Hint: Bereshit 12) Why does the narrator want us to think of that person when we read about Ruth?

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.

Kiddush or Oneg Sponsorships

The mitzvah of a donation for sponsorship of a kiddush or oneg is a beautiful way to share the happiness of your milestone or remember a loved one with the congregation. Sponsorships are acknowledged in the Shabbat handout and in Tidings. The cost of a kiddush is $500 and an oneg is $250; partial sponsorships are available and they are tax deductible. Please contact Paula Botkin.
