D'var Torah: What Story are We Telling?

Dr. Joshua Kulp, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty & Rosh Yeshiva

Roughly 20 years ago, I began to teach and study the origins of the Seder and Haggadah. I was a young, enthusiastic teacher at the Conservative Yeshiva, and every year as soon as Purim was over, I would begin to teach the tenth chapter of Pesachim, the chapter that contains the earliest description of the Seder and Haggadah. As we drew close to Pesach, my students would ask me to write these teachings down, and over the course of the years, I did so, every year writing furiously starting with Purim and finishing a few weeks after Pesach, when the memories of what I had been teaching began to fade. Eventually, with the help of a few students (thanks Rabbi Julia Andelman) I printed these lessons up, bound them with a spiral binding, and gave them to whichever students were interested. I found a cover picture of a hare hunting scene that reminded me of my German-born grandmother, the matriarch at my childhood seder. Hare hunting scenes, "jagen has" in German, appear in German haggadot on the page of the Kiddush as a reminder of the mnemonic "yaknehaz" the order of the blessings when Pesach falls on Saturday night (yayin, Kiddush, ner, Havdalah, zeman). Eventually, this commentary came to the attention of Rabbi David Golinkin, and within a few years we published together The Schechter Haggadah: Art, History and Commentary.

This story, has now become part of my own Pesach story, a tale I tell when teaching about the Haggadah all across the United States. It is meaningful to me on many levels. First of all, it reminds me of several of the most important people in my life. My students, with whom throughout the course of a year I come to feel very close, and with whom I often form lifelong friendships and bonds (as evidenced by the many I drink a beer with whenever I'm abroad). And it reminds me of my grandmother, who wisely chose to leave Frankfurt, Germany in 1933, without her parents, and eventually made her way to the United States, where she raised my father, who provided me with my love of Jewish ritual. The story also reminds me of my own journey as a scholar, from someone who grew up in a world relatively void of Jewish learning, to someone who discovered a deep passion for learning somewhere in the middle of his life, and finally to the person I've become over the past two decades, one who believes deeply in the mission of bringing Jewish scholarship to a broad audience.

Pesach is the richest of holidays because human beings are storytellers. The Haggadah coalesced around the story of the Exodus from Egypt, and it is the fundamental mitzvah of Pesach. But it is also a rich opportunity to trace our observances and customs in order to remind ourselves where Jews have moved over the centuries: from the land of Israel, where reclining was normal banquet behavior, to Europe where it was not. From Babylonia, where lettuce was eaten as marror, to Europe, where it was not available this early in the season. From the crowded shtetls of Poland and Eastern Europe, to the riches of New York where Jews began to observe communal seders. From Europe where we said only, " "לשנה הבאה בירושלים" the renewed state of Israel where we have the merit of saying, " "לשנה הבאה בירושלים הבנויה." The seder is where the family gathers together and talks about seders past, who is new to the table (through birth, marriage or new friendship) and who is no longer around. It is where we form our identities as families and as communities of Jews, remembering the past, and talking about our hopes for the future.

So when you get to your seder table this year, ask yourself what story are you telling? Where have you been? What journeys have you undergone? And what stories do you want to tell in the future? Telling these stories, along with the one written down in the Haggadah itself, is what this holiday is all about.

Chag HaPesach Self-Study

Vered Hollander-Goldfarb, Conservative Yeshiva Faculty

Pesach is the holiday most associated with asking questions, learning, sharing our ideas (and enjoying good food!) Here are a few questions to think about:

1) The Haggadah is perhaps the Jewish compilation with the most versions. People have created Haggadot that were relevant for them. Look around at your Haggadot. What story do they tell about the family, community?

2) A short passage from Devarim (Deuteronomy) 26 is used as the base text for telling the story of Exodus in the Haggadah. It claims that we cried to the LORD our ancestral God, Who heard us. When discussing the cry of the Israelites in the book of Shemot, there is no address given to the cry. We merely yelled out. What is the significance of the difference? Why do you think that the cry is given an addressee when it is retold later?

3) The story of what happened on the night of the Exodus is our Torah reading for the morning of the First Day of Pesach (Shemot 12:21-51). The people are told that they will commemorate this eternally, and tell their children, before they even experienced the Exodus!. There is special stress on doing so in the land that God gave us. What might be the reason for that emphasis?

4) Moshe instructed the people how and what to do with the Pesach - the pascal sacrifice. Some of the blood is to be placed on the doorposts so when God sees it, He won't let the destroyer harm the people. Does God need a sign (and what is it a sign of)? Why do the people need to put the blood there?

5) When the plague killing the first-born children occurs at midnight, there is a great cry. Who is crying? Why does this cry have no addressee mentioned?

We welcome your children in the Main Sanctuary!

May He who blessed our ancestors and is the source of all healing bless and heal those who are ill. May the Holy One Praised Be He mercifully restore them to vigor and lift the burden of anxiety from their loved ones and friends.

On this (Sabbath, Festival, Judgment or Penitence) day we pray that they be spared further pain. May God grant them health of body and health of spirit and mind. May we speedily be privileged to greet their return to good health by welcoming them once again into our midst. Let us say: Amen.

Anyone wanting to add a name to the list should contact Diane Shalom (216-831-6555 ext. 104 or dianeshalom@bnaijeshurun.org) by Thursday afternoon at the latest for inclusion in that Shabbat's program. We will also pause during the prayer for people to recite additional names from their seats.
