As most of our Temple members are aware, after a few weeks of having our Shabbat services conducted in an otherwise empty Sanctuary while live-streaming on Facebook, one of our young teens thought it might lift my spirits by having photographs of Temple members and families taped to the empty pews. Looking out into the Sanctuary, I saw the faces of people I care about, who are integral to the life of the Temple (and therefore to my life as well); photographs of those whose stories intersect with my own, and whose physical absence was made a bit less jarring while knowing that their personalities and spirits still filled the room. Looking out even to the photographs reminded me of the many relationships which make synagogue and community life truly vital and meaningful.

One night, I considered how my experience of photos in the pews was in stark contrast to the cardboard cut-outs which are filling many seats in the otherwise empty grandstands in ball parks and arenas around the country. Similarly, are those animated avatars we see in some of the venues, such as in the NBA “bubble” in Orlando. The players in the field, or on the court, cannot, and do not, relate to those cut-outs because they are not reflective or expressive of genuine relationships. They are simply “made for TV”, or at best, there to create an artificial sense of gathering - the antithesis of how Jon Nelson and I experienced the photos in the pews.

In the aftermath of the Spanish Flu epidemic of 1918, one of the most important works of Jewish philosophy was published by Martin Buber, I and Thou (1923). Buber never speaks of the epidemic as having had a role in inspiring his work, but following a time of even greater social isolation than we have been facing over the past half-year during our own COVID-19 epidemic, there is sufficient cause to perceive the connection. In his work, Buber asked how we, with the latest technologies, might learn to promote – not the acquisition of information – but the ability to feel connected, at a time when we feel more alienated one from another. For it is within and between those relationships, which Buber taught to be “inter-subjective connections”, where we discover the Presence of the Divine, the Sacred, the Holy that we call by God’s Name. (Remember that our Temple Emanu-El vision reminds us that relationships are the foundation of who we are, what we do, and who we strive to become as a community.)

In his writings, Buber distinguishes those rare, elevated relationships which he terms “I/Thou” from the more mundane (and far more common) relationships which he terms “I/It”. I could describe his teaching using his own philosophic language, but perhaps a more graphic example would be the difference between your photos in the pews and those cardboard cutouts in the stands.

Although our strategies are different, I believe that all our communal institutions and leaders are looking to find the best ways to maintain the “I/Thou” experience of our Jewish lives. I am certain that rabbis, cantors, educators, staff, and lay-leaders are all striving towards that end, even while we might make different decisions on how best to achieve it. For some, it means pre-recording worship, streaming meetings on Zoom, learning together from our own homes and offices. For others, achieving the experience of true connection has led us to broadcast services live from our sanctuaries or from our homes. As I have written before, I prefer broadcasting services “remotely” - live from the Sanctuary, rather than “virtually”, as in a pre-recorded production. But I see the advantages of both.

A young author, Marina Keegan (who tragically died at the age of twenty-two) wrote this thought shortly before her passing:

“We don't have a word for the opposite of loneliness, but if we did, I could say that's what I want in life. It's not quite love and it's not quite community: it's just this feeling that there are people, an abundance of people, who are in this together...who are on your team.”

In years to come, when the pandemic has passed, I believe we will experience the depth of our most meaningful connections to an even higher degree than before the pandemic began. In the meantime, it is my hope that as we enter the season of our New Year, that we are yet blessed with the authentic relationships, even remotely, which make all of life both meaningful and holy.

Rabbi David J. Meyer
Dear Religious School families,

October is going to be a month of firsts for Religious School this year.

We are going to have our first in-person session and Zoom day of classes. This will also include our first T’filah service with Rabbi Meyer in the sanctuary. We are excited that our first day will also coincide with Sukkot so we will be able to spend class time in the Sukkah (either at the synagogue or in our own homes). Students can also see the decorations they made during the second week of Hebrew classes.

We hope that everyone enjoyed meeting their teachers and Madrikhim and picking up their school supplies on September 13th. Please send us any pictures you might have of your family cooking Kugel together! We hope that the Kugel was tasty and we are open to suggestions for other family cooking activities over the course of the year.

We will also have our first music and art sessions on Zoom. Each class will have approximately five music and art sessions over the course of the year. We will be preparing all the art supplies you will need for your family to pick up and take home when they have an in-person session. Cara and the art Madrikhim will teach students how to create the project over Zoom. Each session will be for the last 30 minutes of class so students will be able to continue with the project after school ends if they choose!

Music will be approximately fifteen minutes with our music Madrikhim and the help of Josh Cohen, who was a visiting music specialist in the 2019-2020 school year. Josh might also lead music on a couple of occasions when the Madrikhim will have their Confirmation and Post-Confirmation sessions. We hope that students will enjoy singing at the top of their lungs in the safety of their own home. (Unfortunately singing is one of the most effective ways to transmit COVID-19—even with a face mask.)

Our first 7th grade family education seminar will take place on October 16th. Families will discuss the significance of becoming a Jewish adult, B’nei Mitzvah, and how it impacts everyone in their family. There will be three family sessions for sixth and seventh grades over the course of the year. Then the following week, our seventh grade students will have their first of three Pre-Confirmation sessions. The first four week session will also focus on B’nei Mitzvah. Then the students will have the ability to create and participate in electives on Jewish topics of their interest with their eighth grade peers.

Finally, our Confirmation and Post-Confirmation students will have their first sessions with Rabbi Meyer over Zoom.

We hope that the month of October will be an exciting “official” start to a new year of learning.

Movie Night:

1st Wednesday of every month. Watch the movie on Netflix or Amazon Prime, and then join us on Zoom for a discussion.

“Little White Lie” (on Amazon Prime)
Wednesday, October 7th, at 7:00 pm

Lacey Schwartz grew up convinced she was white, even though her features distinguish her instantly from her Jewish parents. It wasn’t until she was 18 that she learned her biological father was black. She then begins a journey to reconcile her past and embrace her African-American heritage.

Our movie for November is “Ride Like A Girl” (free on Netflix) on Wednesday, November 4th, at 7:00 pm.

The daughter of a horse trainer sets her sights on becoming the first female jockey to win the Melbourne Cup. Based on a true story.
