Rabbinic Reflections

RABBI JORDAN HERSH | RABBI@BETHSHOLOMFREDERICK.ORG

עשה לך רב, וקנה לך חבֵר

Provide yourself with a teacher, and acquire a companion [chaver].

(Pirkei Avot 1:6)

Friendships play an extremely important role in our lives as social beings. When we seek out Jewish wisdom concerning our relationships, most often we are looking for insight into our bonds with family. Of course this makes plenty of sense, as our family serves as the foundation upon which our lives are constructed. However, our ancient tradition also places a very strong value on friendship and understands this extra-familial bond to be an integral part of our social, moral and even spiritual development.

The central and foundational text of the Jewish mystical tradition, the Zohar, is by and large a story about a group of friends, affectionately known as the chevraya, and their adventures traveling on the road together, discovering the mystical secrets of Creation. The Zohar's companions express excitement and delight when they encounter each other on their journeys and actively engage in conversations intended to inspire one another and help them reach new heights of spiritual attunement. Often, the stories of these conversations between friends end with explicit expressions of gratitude for having had the blessing of such a wondrous and intimate communion and connection with the other.

Just like our spousal and parental relationships, friendships are deeply intimate bonds. A friend is a person in whom we can place our trust and who genuinely has our best interests at heart. A friend should be someone who encourages us when we are in need of encouragement and who gives us strength to move forward. Of course, friendships, like any relationship, need to be reciprocal; just as I am in need of your support today, tomorrow I will provide you with mine.

Avot de-Rabbi Natan, an early Rabbinic text, comments on the verse quoted above as follows:

This teaches that a person should get a companion for himself, to eat with him, drink with him, study Scripture with him, study Mishnah with him, sleep with him, and reveal to him all his secrets, the secrets of the Torah and the secrets of worldly things.

It is from upon this understanding that the time-honored Rabbinic tradition of chevruta, studying in pairs, is built. Torah is not merely a compendium on knowledge, but is a gateway into experiencing the world as infused with Divinity and meaning. To study Torah in isolation and with a goal of accumulating information would be to miss the point of opening ourselves up to being transformed by Torah. It is for this reason that studying with a friend has become the main form of Torah study throughout the Jewish world. In the yeshiva environment, one's chevruta, or study-partner, holds an extremely dear place in his or her heart. It is a companionship that, while centered around the study of Torah, involves a fully committed personal engagement of trust and intimacy. When I was studying at Yeshiva in Jerusalem, my mornings were always focused on talking about what was going on in my life with my chevruta. Because we knew each other intimately, we were able help one another understand how that which we were studying was truly present, or could be made present, in our lives. In this way, our Torah study became a study of our own experiences in life.

We live in a world of social networking and digital friendships; our goal has become acquiring as many "friends" as possible. Outlets like Facebook and Instagram certainly do serve as tools for keeping connected, and were certainly a source of refuge during the pandemic, but the wisdom of our rich spiritual tradition is that having friendships centered around commitment, privacy and intimacy, depth of relationship and face-to-face connection still matter deeply.

See if you can find the time to invest heavily in a few deep friendships. Spend time sharing with one another and studying. With the approach of Spring, now is the perfect time for renewing your commitment to Jewish learning. To reverse the order of the quote above, acquire yourself a friend, a chevruta, and you will provide yourself with a life teacher.

Live, From Beth Sholom, It's Friday Night!

BY MONA AND PHIL CANTER

Come and join us for Friday night services!

Take a break from the work week and transition into the beauty of Shabbat. The lovely melodies, insightful messages, and sharing of community energy is a wonderful way to begin the weekend. My husband and I have found Friday night services to be a source of spiritual inspiration, a way to connect with other congregants, and an opportunity to form new friendships. The Oneg after services is a great way to meet people while enjoying a nice nosh.

We hope to see you soon.

From the Executive Director - Mar. Shabbat Dates in History

ROB ALLEN | RALLEN@BETHSHOLOMFREDERICK.ORG

March 4 / 11 Adar

As the history of the United States began to take shape, it wasn't long before Jews entered into the political picture. It was on March 4, 1791, that the first Jewish member of the U.S. Congress, 65-year-old Israel Jacobs, was sworn into office as U.S. Representative from Pennsylvania's 3rd Congressional District. Born near the town of Perkiomen Creek in the Province of Pennsylvania, Jacobs attended public schools and was engaged in the agricultural and mercantile businesses. He eventually became involved in land speculation in Nova Scotia when he joined a land company headed by William Smith, Provost of the College of Philadelphia. Jacobs was appointed as member of Pennsylvania's Colonial Assembly in 1770, serving in that capacity for four years prior to being elected to Congress. When his term ended, Jacob returned to his agriculture and mercantile work until his death in 1796.

March 11 / 18 Adar

One of the first foreign terrorist attacks of Jews on American soil ended on March 11, 1977. It began two days earlier, when a group of 12 Islamic Muslim extremists led by Hamas Abdul Khaalis stormed three buildings in downtown Washington, D.C., including, the B'nai Brith International Center, the Wilson Building and the Islamic Center of Washington. They took 150 hostages, killing a radio reporter and injuring dozens of other people. The incident became known as the Hanafi Siege of Washington, since all the gunmen were Hanafi Muslims who were all outspoken critics of the Nation of Islam. For 39 hours, D.C. residents watched and waited as negotiators bargained to free the hostages. Muslim ambassadors from Iran, Egypt and Pakistan worked with police to convince the gunmen to surrender. The ordeal finally came to an end after Khaalis agreed to meet with city officials and the Iranian, Egyptian and Pakistani ambassadors. Hostages were released from all three locations and Khaalis and his men were charged and eventually convicted. The incident heightened a new awareness of the need for significant upgrades in the way security at American Jewish institutions would be handled going forward. From a personal standpoint, this was a significant event since I had a family friend who was one of the hostages and was fortunately unharmed.

March 18 / 25 Adar

And, just like that, the practice of Bat Mitzvah celebrations in the United States turns 101 on March 18th! It was on this date in 1922 that the first public Bat Mitzvah ceremony took place in New York City. The Bat Mitzvah was Judith Kaplan, daughter of Rabbi Mordecai Kaplan, and was held at the city's Society for the Advancement of Judaism, a temple that is still around today. Friends of the Rabbi said his motivation for the Bat Mitzvah rite of passage was for four reasons, his daughter Judith being the first, and her three sisters as the second, third and fourth reasons. Unlike today's Bat Mitzvahs, Judith's looked a little different. She did not actually get called to the Torah to read from it. She was only allowed to stand at the foot of the bimah and read from a book, and only after her father had concluded reading the weekly parsha. We can only surmise that no one threw candy!

March 25 / 3 Nissan

I would be totally remiss not to point out that March 25th is "Maryland Day," commemorating the date in 1634 that a charter was granted by King Charles I of England to Cecil Calvert, the second Lord Baltimore Calvert, to found the "Catholic colony" of Maryland. Named for the king's wife, Queen Henrietta Maria, Maryland was the first proprietary colony in what was to become the United States. Maryland became a safe haven for Catholics escaping religious persecution in England, and in 1649, under the direction of Lord Baltimore, an act was passed ensuring religious liberty and justice to all who were Christian. The first known Jewish resident of provincial Maryland was Jacob Lumbrozo, who settled there in 1656. Jews were prohibited from holding public office in Maryland prior to 1826, when the state's General Assembly passed the "Jew Bill," repealing the prohibition. Between the 1830s and the 1870s, 10,000 German and Central European Jews settled in Maryland. Eastern European Jews began to settle in Maryland in the 1850s, with a mass emigration of Eastern European Jews occurring between the 1880s and the 1920s. By 1899, there were 35,000 Jewish people living in Maryland. The state's first Jewish Senator was Isidor Raynor, who was elected in 1904, and was one of the first Jewish U.S. Senators in American history.

Rabbi Hersh will be teaching 101: Basic Tenets of Jewish Mysticism, one of the eight courses offered. His class will be Tuesdays from 1:00-3:00 pm.

The once tightly guarded secret system of Kabbalah, or Jewish Mysticism, has attained much attention in our modern era. Its wisdom has been sought both by Jews looking to their own tradition to deepen their connection with the Divine, as well as countless other spiritual seekers. Together we will explore the basic concepts of Kabbalah and discover how its concepts can help us along our own spiritual journeys.

Celebrating a Bar Mitzvah

Religious School News

DR. JENNIFER NEWFELD | RSPRINCIPAL@BETHSHOLOMFREDERICK.ORG

At the Religious School, the month of January was full of exciting activities and celebrations. The students had a great time celebrating Tu B'shvat, the Jewish holiday that honors the trees and the environment. While the 3rd-5th graders participated in classroom activities, the 7th graders took on the responsibility of running Tu B'shvat stations for the younger students. They organized activities such as planting parsley, dancing to tree songs, listening to stories and painting trees with broccoli. The 7th graders did an outstanding job leading the activities and inspiring the younger students.

In February, the focus shifted to Jewish Disability Awareness, Acceptance and Inclusion Month (JDAIM). The students had the opportunity to learn about the importance of disability awareness, acceptance, and inclusion in the Torah and our communities today. They watched powerful videos, shared personal stories and engaged in conversations on this important topic.

The students ended February by celebrating Adar, the Jewish month of happiness. They blew bubbles because everyone's happiness increases when bubbles are involved. Looking ahead to March, the students are eagerly anticipating the celebration of Purim. The Religious School will also host a Shabbat service on March 10th and a Family Education program on March 26th.

Overall, the Religious School continues to provide an enriching and enjoyable experience for its students. From celebrating Jewish holidays and learning about important values to engaging in activities that promote happiness and joy, the students are growing in knowledge and character. The Religious School is committed to providing an inclusive environment where all students can learn and thrive. If you know anyone who would like to have their children learning alongside us, please let me know. We have enrolled four new students since Thanksgiving and are happy to welcome more either this school year or next.
