FROM THE RABBI Steven C. Kane

Over the years I have had children come into my office for an "ask the rabbi" session. They are allowed to ask any question of me they want. Sometimes they ask me which is my favorite baseball team, and sometimes they ask me if I believe in God. Inevitably, though, one of the students will raise their hand and ask, "Why did you decide to become a rabbi?"

Most of the time my answer includes telling them about my love of teaching Judaism to children and adults, a passion for Israel and the Jewish people and being with families at moments of immense joy and even deep sorrow. Now, however, there is something else to add to that list.

For the past few months, the CSI Afghan Refugee Resettlement Committee has been working on bringing an Afghan family to this area. The committee has met regularly to make certain everything was in order, from finding a place for them to live, to furnishing it with the proper furniture, to stocking it with food to get them started. They have also been actively lining up employment opportunities. Of course there was lots of paperwork and red tape to get through. The work of the committee has been simply incredible.

This week our efforts will result in an Afghan family of three (soon to be four) moving into the apartment we secured and beginning a new life here, in Westchester County. As we helped prepare their home I kept thinking about this family, whose father was employed at a U.S. Army base in Afghanistan, and what they must be feeling. They are so far from their homeland and culture and undoubtedly long for it, yet had they stayed in Afghanistan their lives would have been in serious danger. They are coming to a place that they have never heard of, being greeted by strangers. Yet there is no doubt there is great joy in their hearts for the generosity of our community and the opportunities they will now have.

The Talmud (Mishnah Sanhedrin 4:5) teaches us that God began creation with only one person (Adam) to teach us that "anyone who saves the life of another is as if they have saved an entire world." It is certainly true that there are tens of thousands of refugees in America, and we at CSI can hardly save them all. But by embracing the Torah's commandment to welcome the stranger, for this one family we will have made a world of difference.

Why did I become a rabbi? I will now be able to add, "to help us realize our responsibility as Jews to try and save the world, one person (or family) at a time." Perhaps that's the most important reason of all.

CANTORIAL NOTES Hazzan Jeffrey Shiovitz

Everyone loves Purim. It is the time for joy and celebration. We read the Megillah in an atmosphere of unbridled happiness and this year in person, too! We share MIshloach Manot (gifts of food) and we offer Matanot L'evyonim (special tzedakah to the needy and especially to our new family from Afghanistan!) We rejoice at a Seudat Purim (the festive meal) filled with good food, drink, family and friends. So, what's not to like about Purim?

Indeed, we should enjoy every minute of that glorious day. However, let us not forget the tremendous story and its lessons. We must remember the courage of Mordecai and Esther as they found the inner strength to stand up against a most powerful tyrant. We must remember the powerful words of Mordecai, who spoke not only to Esther but to every Jew in every generation who enjoys a bit of power and influence. "And who knows if it was only for this reason, to save our people, that God gave you the power and place in society." Purim is not a story from our past, but a call to action in our present. It is truly not so much about our history as it is about our destiny.

We must remember. In fact, the Shabbat before Purim is always called Shabbat Zachor, the Shabbat of Remembering. We read a special Torah portion about the mitzvah to remember what the Amalekites did to us when they attacked us in the wilderness of Sinai. That section concludes with the command, "Remember, and do not forget." These words have resonated in the hearts and minds of Jews throughout the ages.

In Judaism, remembering is never merely a mental exercise of recall. One does not fulfill the mitzvah of "remembering the Sabbath," or "remembering that we were slaves in Egypt" simply by thinking about it. Indeed, in Judaism, it is always a call to action. Memories fade if they are not translated into meaningful action. When we are introduced to Purim with a Shabbat of Remembering, we are reminded that Purim is not simply a story to recall, nor is it simply an occasion for celebration. Rather, Purim must be a call to action. It must be a call to act with greater faith and courage as Jews. It is a call to respond to the threats of those who would see our destruction. It is a call to respond to ensure that there is always going to be a Jewish tomorrow, no matter how troubled today may be.

How important is Purim? The Talmud teaches and Maimonides codifies this in his work on Jewish law: "In the Messianic era, all the Biblical books of the Prophets and Writings will become obsolete, except for the Megillah of Esther. In those days, all the struggles of Judaism will be forgotten, except for those of Purim, the memory of which will never pass." On Purim, we celebrate, but more importantly, we remember, we act with strength. When we act with strength, we ensure the future for our children and our grandchildren.

Remember, Happy Purim!

JEWISH MUSIC THROUGH THE AGES

Saturday, March 5th at 8pm Hadar & The Rising Song Institute Part 2 ZOOM LINK

FROM THE PRESIDENT Clare Rosen

I am so proud to be counted as a member of CSI. You, as a congregation, willingly give tzedakah, the Hebrew word for philanthropy and charity. Tzedakah is a form of social justice; donors benefit from giving as much as, if not more than, the recipients benefit from the gift. For example, the Afghan Refugee Resettlement Committee has brought together so many who have given their time, effort, and insight, in addition to making monetary gifts. I'm certain that the volunteers will agree that they have built new and meaningful relationships. I know I have.

As Jews we give tzedakah because we try to right the wrongs of the world and create a more just society. Because the world is an imperfect place, it is up to us as Jews to try and create Tikkun Olam, a repaired world, also a form of social justice. In many cultures, bedtime prayers are a daily ritual. In my family I was asked, "What did you do to make this world a better place?" Often, I was unable to say what I did, but just having the question asked every day imbued in me the responsibility to make a difference.

Purim is just around the corner, March 16th to March 17th. The story of Purim tells of the near destruction of the Jewish people, who were thankfully saved by the courage of Queen Esther. A Purim custom at CSI is to give Mishloach Manot to our friends and family. In the Book of Esther we are told to send portions to each other. One reason is that sending food to others is an expression of solidarity, a symbol of peace and harmony in a fractured Jewish community. Another reason for Mishloach Manot is to send food to the poor. And rather than sending only to the poor, segregating them from the larger Jewish community, we send gifts to all.

Mishloach Manot can be seen as a symbol of two things. It is a way to instill harmony and love in the Jewish people, and to remind ourselves as we celebrate Purim that we cannot forget the needs of the less fortunate in our community.

Another ritual that I look forward to each Purim is to make a new hamantaschen recipe. This year I'm going to try a savory one.

Open to all!

The CSI Vineyard and Winemaking team has been active in preparation for our second vintage (5780 / 2021) to enable bottling and sales of wine for Passover. This year's crop was solid even though the rains from Hurricane Ida caused the grapes to swell with excess water. We waited an extra 10 days to give them a chance to absorb additional sun and resume the ripening process. Our team, including Mike Kirsch, Ryna Lustig, Michael Stern, Adam Stern, David Levitt, John Chambal, Larisa Wayne-Paulmeno, Chris Walsh, Ruth Speier and five of my granddaughters, harvested the crop on September 12th, just before Yom Kippur. Once again, we purchased additional grapes from Double A Vineyards in Fredonia, New York, which were picked up and delivered by John Chambal and a friend of his on September 14th. On Sunday, September 19th, we began the process of pressing and fermenting the grapes to turn them into wine for our new vintage. I entered a bottle of our first vintage in the Prospero Home Wine Makers annual competition in early November and received a Gold Award in the Hybrid Grape category as well as a Bronze Award for the Best Label, which was designed by our own Janice Rappaport. About two dozen bottles (with alcohol content of just over 14%) remain from our Gold Award winning bottling, and they are available for purchase at the CSI office.

On December 14th, a group including Mike Kirsch, Tom Hannon, Michael Stern, John Chambal and David Levitt racked the wine from the oak barrels and demi-johns undergoing secondary (malolactic) fermentation in classroom 1 back into the fermentation bins, before pumping the wine back into the barrels to continue the fermentation and aging process. After racking, we took a sample of the wine and brought it for testing of Total Acidity (TA) and Alcohol Content by Volume (ABV) to Prospero Wines. As anticipated, the TA was in the neighborhood of .70-.75 indicating a slightly acidic wine (characteristic of the hybrid grape), and the ABV of 12.7%, somewhat lower than the first vintage since the sugar content of the grapes was lower than the prior harvest due to the more than six inches of rain from the remnants of Hurricane Ida.

We plan to rack again at the end of February, with a final racking in April for a total of four (including the initial racking from fermentation tanks into the oak barrels), in order to clarify the wine and eliminate most of the sediment formed from the yeast husks, seeds, stems, leaves and twigs that make up the fermented must.

On Sunday, December 19th, our team of viticulture participants including Mike Kirsch, Ryna and Naftali Lustig, Larisa Wayne-Paulmeno, Paula Edlavitch, Susan Levitsky, David Levitt and John Chambal, pruned the vines to begin the process of generating renewal growth to produce clusters of grapes for the new season. This involves cutting back the canes and spurs as well as the cordons, to permit new growth. Starting in late March or early April we anticipate that the vines will bud, and we will begin the process of adding new mounds of wood chips at the base of the vines and spraying to reduce the likelihood of the development of mildew and mold (including black mold).

My thanks to this year's team of viticulture participants as well as five of my granddaughters, Violet Miser, Ava Miser, Zoey Stern, Marley Stern and Ivy Stern, who have provided able assistance in the management of our vines.

My sincere apologies if I missed anyone. Aaron B. Stern, email: sternab@aol.com

As we have for the past two years, we will be collecting money rather than Passover food for Project Ezra, a wonderful organization that services elderly Jews on the Lower East Side. Any amount is welcome - chai ($18) or double chai (or more!) is always appreciated. The cost of the box of food we donated in the past is approximately $65. Project Ezra will deliver small packages with Passover essentials to their clients. These seniors will also receive a direct relief check they can use for Passover shopping. The checks will be distributed beginning the last week in March - first week in April. As you begin to think about your own Seders, please help with this mitzvah and be as generous as you can to help others celebrate Passover.

To donate through CSI: Go to the CSI website (www.csibriarcliff.org) and click on "Support Project Ezra" next to the Seder plate. This will take you to the page where you can make your donation. We will forward the funds directly to Project Ezra in time for their Passover distribution.

To donate directly to Project Ezra: Go to their website (www.projectezra.org) and click on DONATE. (Where it says "tribute text" if you note that this is from Congregation Sons of Israel in Briarcliff, NY, Ezra will keep track of our donations – similar to the memo line on a check.) You can pay by credit card or send a check to: Project Ezra, 387 Grand Street (Ground Floor), New York, NY 10002 (Please write "Congregation Sons of Israel Briarcliff" on the memo line.)

Donations may be made through April 1st.

Thank you for supporting this drive. Wishing you all a joyful and meaningful Passover.

FROM THE NURSERY SCHOOL DIRECTOR Naomi Elyachar

Even though it is still winter when March begins, it already feels like a time of renewal because our spring holidays begin this month, and we start planning for the remainder of the year. We start thinking ahead to moving up day and the end of the school year festivities already in March. We will be celebrating Purim this year with costumes, a carnival during the school day, musical fun, and by making mishloach manot to share with others. By the very end of the month, the classes will begin to talk about Passover as well.

On my end, spring allows time for reflection on what direction I plan to bring the school. It is the perfect time to try out small changes, see how they work, and if they are keepers or not for the next school year. We have a long history at our school of a high-quality, structured, play-based program. My goal is to build upon this while using my background in early childhood education and professional experiences and development to continue to stretch our offerings here to be innovative and focus on the needs of our students and community.

Last year, in the spring, one classroom was asked to change their daily parent communication. This year, every classroom does it this same, new way. Last year, we changed our moving up ceremony to a more intimate, calm arrangement that let the stars of the day our children moving on to kindergarten—shine with fewer distractions around them. Trying new things, keeping what works and scrapping what does not, is as important for our teachers and students in the classroom as it is at the whole school level. I look forward to this idea of "renewal" this spring and trying new ideas and strategies with our teachers to make our school the very best early childhood center it can be.

CHAVURAH FAMILY SERVICE

March 26th 10:30AM

Chavurah service is a lively adaptation of Shabbat services designed especially for families with young children. Judy Kane leads these upbeat, joyful services with the help of musician Brian Gelfand.

FROM THE RELIGIOUS SCHOOL DIRECTOR Wendy Segal

A few months ago, I gave all the 4th through 7th graders a standard Hebrew assessment to see where each student stood in terms of Hebrew decoding. Are they able to pronounce correctly any Hebrew word they see? Since Hebrew is a phonetic alphabet, once one learns all the consonants and all the vowels, one should be able to decode, or pronounce out, any Hebrew word, but it often happens that students don't remember each letter and vowel perfectly. So we give them an evaluation and then give them review sheets to strengthen weak areas. Toward the end of the year, we reassess the students to see where they stand. Next year, we'll do the same: initial assessment, remediation, re-assessment. Very soon, I'll be sending out to parents the results of the initial assessment and scans of the remediation worksheets. Our aides are working with the students but if anyone in your family can read Hebrew, you can review these shaky areas with your children, too.

But a worksheet only goes so far.

I remember taking my written driving exam. Because I'm good at academic endeavors, I got every question right. I did really well in driver's ed class, which we all took instead of PE for several weeks in school. But could I drive? Well, it turns out I could, but not because I had studied the driver's manual. I could drive because my father took me out in the car on many Sunday afternoons. We went to empty mall parking lots (in Bergen County, NJ, blue laws that keep stores closed on Sundays are still in effect). We drove and parked and backed out and sped up and made 3-point turns until I could drive. Then we practiced in my neighborhood and on the highways. Whenever we went somewhere as a family, my father insisted I drive. (My mother stayed in the back seat with one hand outstretched, bracing herself on the seat in front of her and the other hand clutching her heart.)

Religious school is much the same way. (You saw that coming, right?) Formal assessments are important, but no one learns how to daven from a worksheet. No one learns how to be a Jew from a workbook. No one learns how to be a mensch from a textbook. You can't really experience the silliness of Purim until you show up in a costume. You can't forget Passover if your family attends a seder every year. You will know you know how to daven when your body bows in the right places or you perhaps absentmindedly say, "Baruch hu" even as you're listening to your friend whisper something to you or as you're thinking about what a crazy week you had. I suppose that's why the Rabbis of the Talmud take so much time discussing exactly what the procedure should be if you accidentally leave out a particular reference in a prayer or blessing. Should you go on anyway? Should you go back to the beginning and start again? It turns out that it depends on which part you left out and how far along you are. Did you just start? Go back and do it right correctly. Are you nearly finished? Depending on what you left out, sometimes you should just finish up. In case you forgot what the rules are on forgetting, many prayerbooks give instructions somewhere about what to make up and when IF you haven't forgotten where to look for those instructions! Prayer can only be so comfortable that you forget if you mentioned something if prayer is comfortable. And prayer can only be that comfortable if you do it regularly. Being a good person isn't always natural – it comes when you've been a good person so often it becomes a habit. Behaving like a Jew, acting like a Jew only becomes the way you are when you've behaved like a Jew and acted like a Jew day after day, year after year.

I promise to continue to check that the religious school students are indeed learning what we are teaching. But turning correct pronunciation into heartfelt davening requires regular, real life, "on the road" practice. Learning about tzedakah becomes a life-long value when your family gives tzedakah regularly. The bad news is that, to be a good Jew, you have to keep on practicing your whole life. The good news is that you have your whole life to practice.

Our efforts were recently recognized and boosted with a grant of $5,000 from the Westchester Jewish Coalition for Immigration and the UJA-Federation.

This grant brings us closer to our fundraising goals, but there is still much to do.

We would love for you to join us.

Here's how you can help:

REFUGEE SHABBAT

This year on March 4th and 5th, CSI, in partnership with WJCI and HIAS, is excited to participate in Refugee Shabbat.

Refugee Shabbat is a moment for congregations, organizations, and individuals in the United States and worldwide to dedicate a Shabbat experience to refugees and asylum seekers. Last year, over 30 synagogues in Westchester observed Refugee Shabbat and the results were a huge success.

On Saturday morning, March 5th, we welcome guest speakers who will share their personal experiences.

Please join us.

WE ARE ALWAYS OPEN TO EXPANDING CSI'S SOCIAL ACTION PROJECTS. IF YOU HAVE SUGGESTIONS OR ARE INTERESTED IN PARTICIPATING, PLEASE EMAIL Judy Boehr OR CALL 914-762-1984.

CARING COMMUNITY

We are here to make CSI a closer, more caring and supportive community. Together we celebrate simchas, console those who are ill or experiencing a loss, and help congregants who need a phone call, a ride to a doctor, or a little TLC.

If you or another congregant you know is experiencing a need, please contact the CSI office (762-2700) or Judy Boehr (762-1984).

HELP BY DONATING BLOOD

For many years, CSI has held a blood drive twice a year (thanks to Jill Greenstein). This, like so many other events, has been suspended because of Covid-19. The need for blood, however, isn't on hiatus. We are fortunate to have a convenient, comfortable blood bank literally down the road in Elmsford. My daughter and I gave blood there recently and it energized me to reach out to our CSI community to request we continue the Jewish practice of saving a life.

The blood center is located at 525 Executive Boulevard in Elmsford (across the street from Westy Self Storage). They are open every day except Wednesday (including Sunday). Please call 800-933-2566 to make an appointment. This mitzvah will only take about an hour of your time, but it will be a great help to others. CSI's group number is 04188 if you'd like to continue this tradition.

OUR MARCH B'NAI MITZVAH

JESSE DOLCH: MARCH 19th

Hello there, I'm Jesse Dolch! I live with my mother, father, older brother, cat, and dog in the town of Chappaqua. I'm pleased to announce that my B'nai Mitzvah is coming up soon, on March 19, 2022. At the moment, I attend Seven Bridges Middle School. It's been a so-so time for me, but what can really be expected from school? At school, I'm one of the founding members of the Diversity Club. Even though it was not my idea, I was the first member. For the past year or so I've been doing Cross-Fit and rock climbing, and every year I do at least one play. All of this has helped me with my mental and physical well-being as well as allowing me to learn and practice what I love while making friends. Though the school part of middle school isn't always fun, I've grown a lot from the whole experience so far, learning how to be a better person.

My mitzvah project was originally going to be feeding the homeless in a soup kitchen, but I was too young to do it. Now, I'm helping to resettle the refugee family who is arriving from Afghanistan. I am helping them find educational books and toys for their children who are 2 years old and a newborn. I was always planning on helping people, hopefully face to face when doing so. It's a special feeling when you can see people's reactions directly from your assistance and I hope I'll be helpful.

Other than the working out and plays, I also love to animate and draw, not to mention write stories. In fact, a friend of mine and I are working together to make either an animation or comic book from of one of my stories. I must admit that it isn't always easy going to Hebrew School, but as I have come of age, I now understand how my teachers, as well as my parents, have guided me in becoming a young Jewish adult. I can't wait for my B'nai Mitzvah.

I would Like to thank Sheera, Cantor Shiovitz, Rabbi Kane, and all my other Hebrew school teachers, my mom, my dad, and my brother for helping me to make it to this day. I look forward to my B'nai Mitzvah!
