PARSHA MATTERS - by Rabbi Sammy Bergman

TWO SOUNDS OF THE TRUMPET

Anyone who has taken a family trip knows the challenge of preparing a group of people for travel. One can only imagine how difficult it would have been for Moshe to coordinate the journey of an entire nation of men, women, and children through various stops in a desert on his own. Thankfully, Hashem made Moshe's job much easier. In Bamidbar Chapter 9, the Torah describes how the Jewish people knew to follow the miraculous cloud during the day and the pillar of fire at night. Whenever the cloud rose from upon the Tent of Meeting the Jews broke camp and prepared for travelling and wherever the cloud rested, the Jews faithfully camped.

However, the Torah indicates that these miraculous guides were somehow insufficient. In Bamidbar Chapter 10, Hashem commands Moshe to fashion two trumpets. Hashem provides Moshe with a series of instructions dictating how the trumpets ought to be sounded to signal that the Jews should prepare to travel and camp when necessary. The obvious question arises: since the Jews so faithfully followed the cloud and pillar of fire, why were the trumpets necessary?

The Or Hachaim HaKadosh suggests a practical approach. While the cloud generally signified when it was time to travel, the Jews needed more specific instructions. Bnei Yisrael were grouped into four degolim and had to travel in a specific order. Therefore, Hashem ordered for the construction of the trumpets to specifically indicate to each group when it was their turn to begin travelling.

I would like to suggest a different approach based on an insight from the Malbim. The Malbim notes that Hashem commands the Jewish people to blow different sounds on different occasions. During wartime, we blow the Teruah sounds whereas on holidays and joyous occasions we blow the Tekiah sounds (Bamidbar 10:9-10). Malbim suggests that we blow the Teruah sound to inspire the fear of judgement and repentance. In contrast, we blow the Tekiah as a happy, celebratory sound expressing our awareness that we march in the presence of the King of all Kings.

Based on the Malbim, we can suggest that the trumpets did not only send the message that the Jews should prepare to embark on a new journey, but also provided musical inspiration designed to ensure that wherever Bnei Yisrael travelled, they did so with the right mindset. The Teruah reminded the Jewish people of the urgent importance prayer and repentance during warfare and difficult times. The Tekiah helped to create a joyous spiritual atmosphere as the Jews camped around the Mishkan and engaged in their service to Hashem.

As we read about the trumpets this week, we ought to consider what tools we can use to ensure we travel with the right mindset. How often are we caught off-guard simply because we were emotionally unprepared for it? We would utilize our strengths and talents most effectively if we constructed our own trumpets to help set the appropriate emotional tone for each challenge life presents us with. May the sound of our own Teruah fill us with the urgency to meet the moment. May the sound of the Tekiah fill our daily routines with excitement and purpose.
