COVID-19: A Success Story

n his book, The Home We Build Together, Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks^{zt^{*1}} describes three parables for society and identity: the country house, the hotel and the home. The country house divides us into hosts and guests. There are insiders and outsiders, the majority and minorities. In the hotel, everyone is a guest. You pay the price; you get a room; and you are free to do what you like so long as you do not interfere with the other guests. In the home, we care about belonging – it is not just where we are but who we are. We have responsibilities to our home – not just rights within it.

Rabbi Sacks applies these parables to English society. The country house is the assimilationist model – "the melting pot." The hotel is the procedural state with its embrace of multi-culturalism. The home is Rabbi Sacks' vision of a future society committed to a common project.

Rabbi Sacks' three parables apply not just to political life but also to synagogue life. We have witnessed these three parables during the COVID Crisis. Every experience in life teaches us something. This is especially true of crises. In these moments, we can learn the most about others and ourselves.

A synagogue might be seen as a country house in that there are insiders and outsiders with varying levels of commitment. Before Rosh Hashana this year, suspicions were raised, online and within many communities, about whether members would rejoin their synagogues. In the midst of a pandemic, would people contribute to an institution, if they were not able to attend regular High Holiday services? The question presumes an insider and outsider perspective. The insiders judge the outsiders' commitment.

A synagogue might be seen like a hotel in that a synagogue is a business that serves consumers. When a product is delivered, the customer pays; when the synagogue is closed – due to a pandemic or otherwise – he or she does not.

Both these parables find echoes in the following quote from a July 2020 JTA article:

Across the country, synagogues are bracing for a significant reduction in revenues. Though many are seeing increased attendance at virtual services, without the annual cash infusion that in-person High Holiday services bring, and with community members under financial pressure, congregations across the denominational spectrum aren't sure how they'll make ends meet this year.

At Shaarei Shomayim, these dire predictions did not come true. As a synagogue community, we are not a country house or a hotel. We have been, are and will be a home. In the midst of the crisis, new members joined us in support of our response and the values that our response reflects. Throughout the crisis, we come together. Throughout the crisis, we take the health (physical, social, spiritual and mental) of our people seriously. In the early stages of the pandemic, we reached out to one another - seeking out those who were alone. For the High Holidays, I turned to a great group of volunteers who stepped up in leading services. Many more reached out for guidance during this time for themselves, their families and their friends. At Kol Nidrei, we launched the Community COVID Crisis Campaign, which I initiated and led with the help of dedicated community volunteers. We have already raised over half a million dollars from over 165 families. Yet, success is not in dollars. Success is in the commitment and connection that those dollars reflect.

What happened? Why did we succeed in the face of this terrible crisis? The answer is, "A shul is a home." Our Judaism isn't a consumer product or experience. Our Judaism is our identity. Whether our health allows us to come to shul or not, our Judaism is a part of who we are. That identity involves coming together (sometimes in person – always in spirit) during difficult times. That identity means living for more than our self-interest. We take responsibility for the destiny of our people. We take responsibility for that destiny as embodied by our synagogue. It is here, with our community, that we do together the things that we cannot do alone.

One of the challenges that Rabbi Sacks faced in applying the parable of home to general society is that many had forgotten what a home is. In our preoccupation with the language of rights, we have forgotten the idea of responsibilities. We have become an I-generation: iPod, iPhone, I everything. We see everything in terms of the individual, and this causes an error in our thinking.

So why did the prognosticators quoted by the JTA get this wrong (almost as bad as US pollsters, l'havdil.) In some respects they are like classical economists who have created a fictional creature to populate their model of the Jewish people – this creature is very much like what Richard Thaler calls "Econs" in contrast to humans. What's an Econ? Thaler explains: "For four decades, since my time as a graduate student, I have been preoccupied by... the myriad ways in which people depart from the fictional creatures that populate economic models. It has never been my point to say that there is something wrong with people; we are all just human beings – homo sapiens. Rather, the problem is with the model being used by economists, a model that replaces homo sapiens with a fictional creature called homo economicus, which I like to call an Econ for short. Compared to this fictional world of Econs, Humans do a lot of misbehaving, and that means that economic models make a lot of bad predictions, predictions that can have... serious consequences...." – Richard H. Thaler, Misbehaving: The Making of Behavioural Economics.

We understand that our greatest asset is not in the bank – but in the relationships that give our lives meaning, especially our relationship with Hashem.

Translating the Econ paradigm into a Jewish context, we might describe Jewcons as people who are always rational, always selfish, and unchanging in their tastes. They live in Rabbi Sacks' hotel parable with very little interest in their part of the Jewish story or in their responsibility to one another. However, COVID-19 has proven this understanding of Jews wrong. We are not Jewcons. We are enriched with neshamot that respond well to the call of the Torah. We understand that our greatest asset is not in the bank - but in the relationships that give our lives meaning, especially our relationship to Hashem. When under pressure, we will not mortgage our part in the story of our people - our home - for consumables of any sort. We have demonstrated who we are. We are not Jewcons - we are Jewman beings. This is the story of our success this time and through time.

Yashar kochachem. Let us take pride in our commitments. May we merit to celebrate this success in health and happiness – TOGETHER – sometime soon.

President's Message

Hope and Inspiration

s I write this article, Shaarei Shomayim has just locked down for the second time in eight months. We are now legally permitted to have no more than ten people in the building for davening at any one time. The surge of COVID-19 is strong, and the cold of winter is approaching. There is, however, reason to be hopeful.

Rabbi Jonathan Sacks^{2t^{*1}} notes that even though the Second Temple was destroyed, Jewish hope was not. We remain a hopeful people – "Od lo avdah tikvatenu"– "we have not yet lost our hope," teaches Hatikvah, and articulates our 2,000 year-old hope of returning to the Land of Israel, restoring it, and claiming it as a free and sovereign nation.

In honour of the eight days of Chanukah, I want to share the eight things that bring light and make me feel hopeful about the future:

1. The unwavering and unending pastoral care, concern and compassion toward the ill, vulnerable and bereaved in our community provided by Rabbi Strauchler, and the devotion of our team of clergy members – Rabbi Diamond, Ralph Levine, Chazzan Freund, and Rabbi Bergman.

2. The professionalism and unbounding energy of our Executive Director, Nicole Toledano, who has so capably lead us through the re-opening of our shul; the hard work and positive attitudes of our office staff Meital, Lejla, Ellen, and Tova; and the care and attention of our maintenance staff who skillfully meet the demands brought by COVID-19, and keep our building clean and disinfected.

3. The incredible work of our volunteers, especially our Gabbai Louis Vandersluis, who has risen to the occasion and 905-764-6017 gg.print.gg@rogers.com so capably oversees our minyanim and ensures that they run smoothly. In addition, our Medical Committee Chair Gili Rosen, and Security Committee Co- Chairs Marc Koplowitz and Eric Ohayon, have advised and guided us and kept us healthy and safe, enabling all of us to attend shul with peace of mind in the past months.

4. The wonderful programs being initiated by our Youth Committee Chairs Rachel Shour and Dalia Yunger, under the capable leadership of Avital Strauchler and our Youth Director Ari Karon.

5. The kindness of shul members and our Chessed Committee, who reach out to others and give encouraging words and provide support.

6. The spirituality of the men and women who attend minyan twice daily in person and on Zoom, and dedication and resilience of our teens who have maintained their commitment to davening by organizing their own minyanim in backyards in the neighbourhood.

7. The commitment and creativity of our Executive Committee and Board of Governors, who meet regularly and have participated in two lengthy strategic planning sessions to think about the future vibrancy and vitality of our shul.

8. The generosity of our members – since our call to action, our Community COVID Crisis Campaign Team, cochaired by Charlene Arje and Joyce Eklove, has raised over $500,000 to ensure the stability and financial security of our shul in the midst of the pandemic. Please join this effort and contribute to this campaign if you have not yet done so: https://www.shomayim.org/form/donate-COVID.html.

Being part of a diverse and accepting community that consistently demonstrates its caring, respect, and commitment to Jewish values inspires me most of all. Staying connected and involved in our shul provides hope. Please join us for davening, participate in our wonderful lectures and education programs, lend a hand through our Chessed Committee, and reach out to me at president@shomayim. org if you have an idea that you would like to share. I would love to hear from you!

Let us all continue to look to the future with hope and optimism, provide support to one another, and look forward to a time very soon when we can greet each other in shul in person.

DOWNSTAIRS MINYAN

Roosters and Hearts

or this volume of the shul bulletin, I decided to go in a different direction entirely. Let me explain. Although the most common name in Hebrew for a synagogue is רבית כנסת, which means house of gathering or assembly, our Sages referred to a shul with two other names – בית מדרש – house of study, and – house of prayer. Our shul continues to strive to combine all three functions in order to reach its fullest potential as indicated by the various names.

But of the three stated purposes expressed by the names, I believe that the goal of prayer is the most challenging one to accomplish. For many of us, myself included, we have no difficulty in getting together with friends, neighbours and members of our community, or even with dedicating some time to attend a presentation, class, shiur, lecture or discussion. But prayer – that's not so simple for many of us. I realize that there are many reasons why this is so and there will not be any one response or solution that will address everyone's needs.

But for me, the siddur is a fascinating repository of the accumulated wisdom of our people and religion. The various prayers that are found among the pages of this ancient text express some of the deepest hopes, fears, beliefs, doubts, questions and assertions that our ancestors, grandparents, and parents have dared to record. In some ways, these prayers are the most concise statements of Jewish philosophy that were ever written, and were compiled into one book which can be easily acquired by every Jewish man, woman and child.

And so, for this submission to the shul bulletin, I decided to share some thoughts about a very short prayer that we recite. In fact, it's a blessing with which we begin the morning prayers each and every day.

ברוך אתה ה׳ אלקינו מלך העולם אשר נתן לשכוי בינה להבחין בין יום ובין לילה

"Blessed are You, Lord our G-d, King of the Universe, Who gives the rooster understanding to distinguish between day and night." An alternate translation is:

"Blessed are You, Lord our G-d, King of the Universe, Who gives the heart understanding to distinguish day from night." (the Koren Siddur Translation)

These translations differ in their interpretation of the word "שכוי" which means either "rooster" or "heart" and both are based on convincing textual sources.

Either version acknowledges the indispensable role that our human intellect plays in our everyday function and life. Critical aspects of human existence are governed by binary relationships: birth and death, good and evil, dark and light, and day and night. From the moment we wake each morning, Hashem presents us with the opportunity to assert our humanity by choosing to identify with one of these two alternatives.

It's worthwhile noting that the blessing is not formulated to read "Blessed is Hashem... who formed day and night." Of course this version is theologically correct, but it eliminates the fundamental assertion of our choice to distinguish between the day and the light it brings, or the night and its related uncertainties.

We rise each morning with the realization that much of what unfolds in our lives flows from the decisions we make. To me, this is an empowering and encouraging statement of our potential.

Within rabbinic literature, the heart was the seat of knowledge and the source of wisdom. Thus the version which translates "שכוי" as heart makes sense. But what is to be learned from the rooster?

Among other answers given, I suggest that the blessing points out that the knowledge we need to gain in order to become the best version of ourselves is not bestowed upon us without our own efforts. It exists in the world in which we live but we must deliberately seek out this wisdom whether it be from the simple rooster, from the study of science and nature (as Maimonides teaches), from our parents and teachers, and most surely from our Torah and tradition. Roosters and hearts – that's how we start our day.

Staying Connected

echnology, the application of scientific knowledge to the practical aims of human life or, as it is sometimes phrased, to the change and manipulation of the human environment. (Britannica.com). What would we do without it? In the world today, it is very difficult to even function without some form of technology. Most important in these days and times, it is what keeps us connected in a world where we are being told we should be disconnected. Whether it is to remain six feet apart or to only associate with members in your immediate household, we need to remain apart.

Technology has enabled us to remain linked – we may be tired of staring at a display, but it is what is on the display that is important. It has now been almost nine months of being disconnected – of not having a meaningful conversation with our loved ones who are not part of "our bubble." Without technology, whether a phone or a monitor, we would be lost. Technology has shown us that we can connect to those close – but also those far away. Weddings, b'nei mitzvot and other smachot have happened that have enabled those in other countries, even across the world, to be a part of a family event.

Technology has enabled us to stay connected to our members and our friends. Whether through calling or zooming, you can participate in our daily minyanim, hear a beautiful pre-Shabbat Kabbalat Shabbat, watch / listen to a Scholar-in-Resident – stay connected virtually.

Technology has given people the ability to remain working, no matter where they are. Staff who are immunocompromised or work in facilities that cannot provide acceptable space and safety, have been able to maintain their employment. Technology has enabled the seamless flow of communication between spaces and people – you often don't even know if a call has been rerouted to a personal home phone. The occasional child screaming in the background or a dog barking sometimes gives it away.

Technology has enabled me to keep in contact with my new granddaughter (and daughter and son-in-law), even though they are thousands of miles away. I am able to speak to them day or night, and I am able to see Chaya grow. I am able to ensure that when we do eventually see each other in person, she can – hopefully – recognize my voice and face. She may be three months old, but she looks directly into the cell phone when we are chatting. Technology has given my older daughter the ability to announce her pregnancy when posting a picture of her ultrasound.

It's in these pandemic times that we learn to appreciate technology. How isolating and lonely it would be without it.

RABBI SAMMY BERGMAN

Embracing the Challenges of Pandemic Life

I thas been a long time since our lives were normal. I can personally say that now, eight months or so since the lockdown began, I miss many experiences that I once routinely enjoyed and took for granted. I miss having guests at my Shabbat table, and enjoying Shabbat dinner at the houses of friends. I miss dancing while celebrating smachot, and greeting people with a handshake and sometimes even a hug. I miss enjoying a good kiddush with the community after shul on Shabbat morning, and sending away Shabbat with friends over zmirot and words of Torah at Seudah Shlishit. While I am so grateful to Hashem that my family and I have been healthy, I also acknowledge that in many ways I feel that I can't live life to the fullest.

As the months have passed by, many thinkers have struggled to formulate a philosophical approach toward coping with all the challenges characteristic to this COVID-19 pandemic. In my opinion, these approaches generally boil down to two schools of thought. The first can be described as the "gam zu l'tovah," or "this is also for the good" approach. This approach is typified by the Tannaitic Sage, Nachum Ish Gamzu, who when faced with difficult circumstances according to the Talmud in Taanit 21a would nevertheless proclaim, "gam zu l'tovah," and miraculously witness those difficulties work out to his benefit. Similarly, many voices, especially at the beginning of the crisis, called for finding the good in the adjustments of pandemic life. In this vein, many have called for appreciating the newfound family time due to the inability to travel and focusing on introspection in exchange for reduced social interaction. Recently, at Shaarei Shomayim, we have begun a shiur during the slot normally utilized for Seudah Shlishit and filled the vacuum with engaging Torah ideas and discussions.

However, as time has gone on, and we have developed fatigue, the "gam zu l'tovah" approach has grown burdensome. Instead, some have suggested a second approach which argues for looking forward to the light at the end of the tunnel. We have heard quotes such as: "This isn't going to last forever;" "Keep being vigilant, maintain your composure, and before you know it things will be back to normal." This attitude is reminiscent of the Disapora Jew's "tzipiah l'yeshuah" or "awaiting the final salvation" (See Shabbat 31a). As our people has travelled from country to country, enduring countless tragedies and disappointments, our faith in redemption, and our vision of what the world will one day become, continues to give us the strength to bear this protracted exile.

But while this approach has its merits, simply holding our breath until the finish line can lead to impatience and even despair. After all, there is no telling when "things will go back to normal." We now realize that the COVID-19 pandemic more closely resembles a marathon than a sprint.

I believe, that while both the "gam zu l'tovah" and "tzipiah l'yeshuah" approaches can provide inspiration in the appropriate contexts, there is a third perspective which fits our current predicament. I came to this viewpoint while studying the comments of Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson, the last Rebbe of Lubavitch, on a verse in the Torah describing the end of Avraham Avinu's life. In Parshat Chayei Sarah (Bereshit 24:1), the Torah describes Avraham as "zaken, ba bayamim," elderly and advanced in years. At first glance, the 2nd phrase seems superfluous. However, the Rebbe (Likutei Sichot Volume 35 Chayei Sarah Sichah 2) argued that "ba bayamim" means something more profound than simply surviving for many years on this earth. Rather, "ba bayamim" is an approach to life in which a person inserts himself or herself into each day, and internalizes everyday fully. In this way every experience in life, whether positive or negative, contributes to the growth of their character. Avraham lived a truly long life because he was present for every day of it and took what he could from every experience. Similarly, Chief Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sackszt" explained Rashi's comment (Bereshit 23:1) that every year of Sarah's life was equally good in a similar way. Sarah Imeinu saw her life as a mission Hashem had sent her on. Even though, Sarah certainly persevered through many trials and tribulations, she understood that each was an equally important step in reaching her destiny.

Embracing the Challenges of Pandemic Life

I would argue that we would benefit by incorporating a "ba bayamim" approach toward the challenges that lie ahead of us. When we lack the optimism to say "gam zu l'tovah," and the light at the end of the tunnel feels too distant, we can truly enter into each day, embrace the challenges, cope as best as we can, and appreciate the invaluable lessons we learn in the process. Rather than trying to see past the pain, we can proceed through hardship by looking the pain straight in the eye, and embracing our inner strength as we continue marching through, even though it hurts.

May this pandemic end speedily. May we soon, once again, unite and embrace each other face to face – without any masks obstructing the smiles on our faces. May we join each other in shul to celebrate joyous occasions over delicious food and drinks. But in the meanwhile, before that all happens, may we find a way to be "ba bayamim" and appreciate both the challenges and opportunities of every moment of our lives.

RABBI DR. RAFI CASHMAN

HEAD OF SCHOOL NETIVOT HATORAH

Honouring Rabbi Jonathan Sacks^{zt"}!: A Lesson in Leadership

s Rashi notes at the beginning of Parshat Vayetze, when a tzadik leaves a city, it makes an impression something of the glory of that place, its lustre, leaves with him. With the passing of Rabbi Jonathan Sacks^{zt^{*1}}, there is a feeling of loss, an awareness that a light in our world, a tzadik, has left our city, our community.

Rabbi Sacks represented the very best of Torah u'Madda. The breadth of his Torah learning was enormous, only matched by his extraordinary scholarly knowledge and academic acumen. This was reflected in the over thirty books he published on topics from science and Torah to Jewish philosophy, from morality to economics, from the parsha to the siddur – he wrote about every part of the Jewish library and experience, and every part of modern Jewish life. He was a guide and model for how to live a religious life in the modern world, and someone whose voice found purchase beyond the Orthodox community while remaining authentic to it. And as a leader, he tried to bring people together across the divides that seem to keep growing, and never gave up hope even as those divides widened.

With his passing, his voice, both literal and figurative, is a loss that will be deeply felt throughout the Jewish world, and beyond.

In his memory and merit, I would like to share one of his divrei Torah on Parshat Chayei Sarah, from his collection Lessons in Leadership.

Rabbi Sacks makes the following astute literary observation when interpreting biblical text: the amount of pesukim given to a subject is one of the Torah's ways of indicating that topic's significance for us. With this principle in mind, the two main stories of this week's parsha take on a different perspective. An enormous amount of space is given to the negotiations between Avraham and Efron (when Avraham is trying to purchase a burial plot for Sarah), and subsequently, Eliezer's journey to find Yitzchak a wife. All this is in stark contrast, he notes, to the complete absence of information about how either Avraham or Yitzchak thought or felt about the Akeida, either before or after, which would seem rather significant. Why the need to spend so much text-time on the details of these two stories?

Rabbi Sacks notes that there are two themes communicated to Avraham in his conversations with Hashem regarding him and Sarah: having children and inheriting the land of Israel. At the moment of Sarah's death in the parsha's opening, Yitchak is unmarried (and so no future progeny can be expected), and Avraham remains a foreigner and nomad in the Land of Israel with no ownership to his name. As such, the parsha then focuses on Avraham accomplishing these two goals – purchasing a piece of land, and finding a wife for Yitzchak. The volume of pesukim is a reflection of these two priorities in Avraham's life, yet to be realized. But what is the message for us?

To this Rabbi Sacks gives an answer that says everything about his own leadership: "Despite all the promises, God does not and will not do it alone.... What changes the world, what fulfils our destiny, is not what God does for us, but what we do for God." Both stories spare no words in fleshing out the degree to which human beings involve themselves in the details of fulfilling God's promises, and do not simply leave it to Him to work out. The stories impress upon us our need to act, to be bold, and be responsible, even when we know God is on our side.

Following in Avraham's footsteps, Rabbi Sacks lived this form of leadership. He took action, and he led by example. He was vocal in support of a religious, tolerant and openminded worldview, and modeled it for us. He did not leave it to God, but instead led the members of his many kehillot, us, to reach "our full stature as human beings." We are better people, we are a better People, because of the years Rabbi Sacks was with us. His passing is a great loss. May the learning of his Torah be an aliyah for his neshama, and a zechut for all Klal Yisrael.

Youth Matters

hat happens when you take the shul out of shul youth programs? It sounds like the start of a witty joke, but it's a question we were forced to take seriously during the COVID-19 pandemic. Our answer? Youth programs come to you!

Over the past several months, programming has been entering the homes of the shul's youth through screens and delivered activities. Between the High Holiday Youth Programs To Go Packages and our Children's Machzor, Parsha Packages, virtual Rabbi B concert and Simchat Torah Kahoot!, there has been lots to do! I'd like to say a big thank you to the parents and, of course, our participants who have been so receptive and make all our efforts worthwhile. I'd like to highlight two of our ongoing programs.

Parent-Child Learning (PCL) with Rabbi Bergman takes place every moztei Shabbat, and provides families with parsha activities and pizza to enjoy. Music Time is a davening and sing-along group taking place on Sunday mornings. These programs are fun, engaging and provide a muchneeded opportunity to be together while staying apart.

Please God we can all return to shul soon, but for the time being, staying up to date by reading our weekly Kids Matter emails is more important than ever. Don't miss any of the opportunities we have going on! If you're not signed up yet, please contact the shul office.

Thank you to our Youth Committee Co-Chairs: Dalia Yunger and Rachel Shour, and to our Committee Members: Arielle Berger, Dara Dishy, Naomi Glustein, Yael Lipson, Rina Parker, Chana Posluns, and Davida Shiff. A special thank you for the ongoing support, guidance and leadership that our youth program receives from Avital Strauchler.

The shul will always be committed to engaging the youth, no matter the format. Looking forward to seeing you at many more great programs!

Bar Mitzvah Program 5781

abbi Strauchler has been conducting our Bar Mitzvah Program online. He is working with eight young men on Sunday mornings for an hour. The program begins with a video, which triggers discussion. It continues with the study of the laws of Tefillin. We conclude each session with a competitive Kahoot! quiz, during which the boys review what they have studied while competing, using this digital platform. We have been making the most of this "different" learning environment, and we look forward to enriching the Bar Mitzvah year with meaningful Torah study.

Avital Strauchler will initiate the Bat Mitzvah program – in person – in the spring.

Pre-Yom Kippur Havdallah, COVID Campaign Launch and Farewell to the Shore Family

n Motzei Shabbat, September 26, in a Zoom Pre-Yom Kippur Havdallah & Kumzitz, Shaarei Shomayim launched its Community COVID Crisis Campaign. It featured Special Guest Speaker Prof. Arna Poupko Fisher, a musical Havdallah, and a farewell to Rabbi Shore, Lauren and Zachy on the eve of their departure to New York.

We said goodbye to the Shores and wished them well in their new home. A few reflections on their work from the members of our community were shared via Zoom chat that evening...

> "We will miss you and pray for your well being and success. Having you here and being so open and authentic was what we needed. We all have become better for having you as part of our community. Thank you and tzeitchem I'shalom."

"Thank you so much Rabbi Shore and Lauren. I'll miss you. Your warmth and dedication is uplifting. I wish you all the best, and hope that our paths will cross in the future. Gmar Chatima Tova."

"We will really miss you. You have inspired a whole community, but each of us have felt a personal connection to both of you. Our family is so grateful to have you spent this time together, and look forward to many more years of friendship."

"You have all had tremendous positive impact on all of us, individually and collectively. Your music and your In have been inspiring and uplifting. And be sure to send a forwarding address and come back to us soon and often... on Zoom and in person!"

Shaarei Shomayim COVID Crisis Campaign

CHARLENE ARJE AND JOYCE EKLOVE, CO-CHAIRS, COVID CRISIS CAMPAIGN

e launched the Shaarei Shomayim COVID Crisis Campaign in the summer of 2020 to ensure the stability and strength of our shul, for the future. Special thanks to Rabbi Strauchler for his leadership, and also to Robin Gofine, Carol Seidman, David Brown and Michael Goldrich, for their invaluable guidance and strategic inputs.

On Kol Nidrei, we officially launched and promoted our campaign at all the shul's services, and our membership has rallied together in a beautiful way. As of December 11th, 170 families have contributed ^{$550,000}. Special thanks to the Goodman family for dedicating the kiddush club room in memory of Gil Goodman^{zⁿ}, and also to the Hershtal family for a beautiful dedication in memory of Lisa Sandorfy Rosenfeld^{zⁿ}, who has been part of the shul family for many years.

Our community is strong, but it is clear that many of our families have been impacted negatively by COVID. This fund will ensure that we will be able to get through this pandemic, and we will be able to support those of our community who are struggling.

We set our goat at ^{$}800,000, as we believed that the financial impact of COVID could last up to three years. On the following page is a list of donors who have contributed as of December 1st. This list gets updated weekly and distributed to our membership.

Thanks again to each of you who have gone above and beyond to support our shul's COVID Crisis Campaign. Yasher Kochachem!

Aaron Rifkind: One million steps for CMDA

Toronto

Aaron Rifkind, a very generous donor and supporter of Canadian Magen David Adom has embarked on a mission. His love of walking and his dedication to helping save lives have inspired him to walk a million steps in the coming months with the aim of raising $75,000 for the purchase of a muchneeded All-Terrain Ambulance 'Traxter' for the People of Israel - which were raised at a record time.

In a letter to family, friends and donors, Aaron wrote, in part, "In the middle of March the world came to a standstill, but I did not! I have been walking for several years so, with more time on my hands, increased my walking. It has certainly helped me stay fit and has kept me sane. However, it has started to get boring so I decided that I needed a focus, a sense of purpose and, with that in mind, I have decided to raise money for an All-Terrain Ambulance 'Traxter', designed to maneuver in rough terrain and under extreme weather conditions."

Why did I pick MDA? It was easy. It is a remarkable organization, founded 90 years ago with the mandate to save the lives of all citizens of Israel, regardless of race, religion, colour or socio-economic group. What makes this organization so amazing is that of the 27,200 who work for MDA, 25,000 are volunteers.

MDA is not a government agency, so it relies heavily on private funding. It has a network of 169 medical stations throughout Israel. It maintains a fleet of more than 1,850 Ambulances, Mobile Intensive Care Units (MICUs), and Emergency Medi-Cycles . MDA responds to more than 900,000 calls for accidents, everyday emergencies, births and disasters per annum. It collects more than 260,000 units of blood per year and is often the first to respond to crises overseas.

I am asking for your help to support MDA, to save lives, because saving a life is the greatest gift that anyone can give."

If you would like to continue supporting the People of Israel through Aaron Rifkind's Campaign, please visit www.cmdai.org

We thank Aaron for his generosity and perseverance in completing this life-saving project and wish him and his entire family much health and peace.

Confessions of a Shul COVID Politician

ost people cringe at the thought of politics and politicians, but if you wikipedia the word, you will find that politics is the process by which groups of people make collective decisions. The Covid crisis has tested the capabilities of Shul Politicians the world over. So I just wanted to share some challenges we are currently facing. Our particular Shul is a membership organization, with active Officers, a Board of Directors, and a Rabbi who leads and guides us.

Shul politicians want the approval of their members. At the core, that's our raison d'etre – making our members happy. With regard to Covid, we need to develop constantly changing policies and procedures in response to the changing environment. The process involves trying to arrive at a consensus after discussing the issues with the members, officers, board and Rabbi. In the case of Covid, it's often hard to reach a complete consensus, but with much input and discussion, it's possible to develop policies that are safe, in the spirit of the law, and provide members with the services they need and expect.

After the policies are formulated and communicated, Shul Politicians are looking for the cooperation of the members. Cooperation sometimes morphs into compliance, and people sometimes need to be told to cover their nose, keep 6 feet distanced, and to attend a non preferred minyan location. It's natural for people to focus on their own interests, and the Shul Politician must remember that it's their job to nudge people into cooperation and compliance when necessary.

The payoff of these efforts for the Shul Politician is that every minyan, especially on Shabbos, is a minivictory. In our Shul, our members are cooperative and appreciative, and that sweetens the efforts even more. May Hashem give us the continued strength to deal with this situation and bring us quickly to the days of yore, when seating, talking and funding were our primary concerns.

RABBI SHLOMO KATZ

Zoom Scholar-in-Residence MONDAY, JANUARY 4, 2021 | 1:00 PM

ON THE TOPIC Emunah in 2021

Rabbi Shlomo Katz was born in New Jersey, the son of Cantor Avsholom Katz. His family moved to Israel when he was nine years old and subsequently moved back and forth between LA and Israel. While studying in a Ra'anana yeshiva, Katz was introduced to the music and teachings of Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach. Shlomo received his rabbinical ordination at Yeshivat HaMivtar in Efrat under Rosh HaYeshiva, Rav Chaim Brovender. Today he serves as the Rabbi and spiritual leader of Cong. Shirat David in Efrat. He is a renowned Torah teacher and musician, and his unique style empowers individuals to explore, grow and form connections to themselves, others and to HaShem.

CHANUKAH PARTY ON ZOOM

שערי שמים שווי SHAAREI SHOMAYIM

CHANUKAH PARTY Via Shul's Zoom

Join us for Candle Lighting, A Musical Presentation by Strings Attached Orchestra, and Special Chanukah Presentations by our Members!

Tuesday, December 15, 5:15 pm

Register at: Shomayim.org/form/chanukahparty2020

Please have a Menorah handy to light candles, and be prepared for a l'chalm! Event Committee: Dalya Hakimi, Linda Levenstein, Kitty Wintrob, and Avital Strauchler

"Thank you Rabbi Strauchler, Dalya, Avital, Ruth, Linda and the entire Chessed Committee for arranging this Chanukah Zoom program. From beginning to end, it was beautiful from the candle lighting with Rabbi to Ruth Levenstein and her ensemble, the members memories, and the chanukiyah exhibit. Most of all for me personally, it was wonderful to see so many friends on line, it's been a long time! A great big thank you, Happy Chanukah!"

CHANUKAH PARTY ON ZOOM

"I had a great time at the Chanukah party last evening. I was also very overwhelmed when Francine, of the Chessed Committee, delivered the latkes to me. All of this has really made my Chanukah a delight. Happy Chanukah!"

"I really enjoyed the Tuesday evening program. Thank you so much to Dalya, Kitty and the entire Chessed Committee, Avital and Rabbi Strauchler and everyone at the shul. The Dvar Torah, the Strings Attached Orchestra and all the lovely stories from our members brought me so much joy and inspiration."

YOUTH PARSHA PACKAGES

Even though we are not yet ready to welcome the Youth back to shul (so that everyone can stay safe) – we care very much for them and their religious experience. If they can't come to the shul, the shul would come to them! The packages contained a packet of Torah material for them to colour before Shabbat, parsha questions, crafts, games and comics!

WOMEN'S DIVREI TORAH PROGRAM & WOMEN TEACHING TORAH FOR ROSH CHODESH

For many years, Simchat Torah at Shaarei Shomayim has featured a Women's Divrei Torah Program, in which women and men gather on Simchat Torah morning to hear words of Torah from a cross-section of the women of the community. This year, the program moved online, with eight women offering divrei Torah over Zoom and in writing. Topics ranged widely, from Yonah and the impact of his prophecy (both in his lifetime and as we read it today at home), to our personal and national observances of Shmini Atzeret and Simchat Torah, to existential questions about the challenges of burnout and despair that we may face this year. The program was attended by over a hundred people online and we look forward to reconvening in shul on future Simchat Torah mornings.

We thank all the contributors: Miriam Bessin, Sofia Freudenstein, Emily Goldberg Winer, Raquel Kaplan Goldberg, Shayna Kravetz, Michelle Landy-Shavim, Zahava Stadler, and Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein. Thank you to Zahava Stadler and Shayna Kravetz for chairing the program.

Our shul has collected and published the divrei Torah from this year's Women's Divrei Torah Program. For a digital copy of this publication, go to: https://www.shomayim.org/shul-publications.html.

This fall has brought further opportunities to learn Torah with and from the women of our community. In a new Women Teaching Torah for Rosh Chodesh Program, women are offering shiurim to both women and men over Zoom each month. Dr. Anna Urowitz-Freudenstein kicked off the program on Rosh Chodesh Kislev. Avital Strauchler offered the second shiur of the program on Rosh Chodesh Tevet, and we look forward to a full slate of Torah teaching in the months to come.

Thank You for Zoom Shivas

Over the past six months, the shul has hosted Zoom shiva gatherings for our members and their families. This has enabled friends, family and community members to connect with mourners during this difficult time, when "regular" shivas have not been possible. While we have not been able to share hugs, the opportunity to share memories and tears together while staying safe during the pandemic has been so valuable.

From the Community: "We wish to thank you for all the work you have done to enable Zoom shivas. This not only is of great service to the bereaved but also to friends from near and far who cannot visit. In the last short while three families with whom we have had close ties for many decades have suffered losses. To be able to participate in a Zoom shiva has brought comfort to us."
