Culture Corner

With: Susan Schuster

This month, I decided to share with you links to some articles that I found interesting and a podcast: Bible 365, A Daily Podcast with Rabbi Meir Soloveichik.

The cost is $100.00 a year for a daily 15 minute podcast. I enjoy listening because the Rabb includes either a painting or literature in his daily discussion. For example, today's discussion was Pygmalion and the Shibboleth Story. Pygmalion refers to George Bernard Shaw's play Pygmalion, published in 1912.

The origins of Shibboleth refer to Judges 12:6. Gileadites pronounce the word: shibboleth, the Ephramites pronounce the word: shibboleth. Rabbi Soloveichik, also refers, to the movie "My Fair Lady," based on Shaw's play, as part of his discussion.

NOW WHO WOULD HAVE THOUGHT?

Rabbi Motzen sent me an article that I enjoyed reading so I want to share that with you also.

A Religion Without Visual Art? The Rav and the Myth of Jewish Art Ranana Dine

One more article that I found interesting was in Times of Israel newspaper.

<https://www.timesofisrael.com/worlds-largest-known-complex-of-byzantine-winepresses-uncovered-in-israel/>

Industrial complex dating back 1,500 years, found south of Tel Aviv, was capable of producing 2 million liters of wine a year.
