Rabbi's Spotlight

At the closing of Pesach, we again brought out Shabbat to learn sad news from San Diego. Another young anti-Semite, likely a white supremacist, entered a synagogue and shot four people including the Rabbi. One person, Lori Gilbert-Kaye, was killed in the attack.

Rabbi Yisroel Goldstein, one of the victims, was giving his sermon when he was shot in the hand. He lost three fingers and would have lost his life had the attacker's weapon not jammed. After being attended by paramedics, the Rabbi FINISHED HIS SERMON and told his congregation to stand fast, hold firm and not give into fear or anger. He asked instead that we perform acts of loving-kindness in response to this tragedy. What a truly remarkable man and a genuine reflection of the Jewish response to the hatred, violence and darkness that so often scars the beauty that is life on Earth.

It is normal and understandable to feel fear sometimes, but we must never let fear into the driver's seat of our mind. It is also understandable for one to feel anger towards the perpetrators and their like, but this must never be allowed to fester into hatred. These things multiply the darkness.

Shimon Ha-Tzadik, one of the eldest sages in the Rabbinic tradition, said "The world stands on three things; Torah, worship, and acts of loving-kindness." When the world appears to be falling apart it is because one of these pillars is slipping. It is most often the pillar of kindness. Show more kindness to others and we will increase the light in this world. This is no longer optional; it's a mitzvah emergency.

This week we also remember the names and stories of millions of our brothers and sisters who were slaughtered by the Nazis and their collaborators for being born Jewish. Last week's events remind us that we have not eradicated the threat that is anti-Semitism. In the wake of their martyrdom, we are charged with the vital responsibility to remember their lives, their names, their deeds and their righteousness. By doing so, we distill and clarify their holy neshamot—their holy spirits—and elevate them higher towards the eternal peace and home in the Eternal One. We must also hear, learn, and teach and repeat the accounts of survivors to the next generation, the children and teenagers of 2019 not only so that they know their history and their roots, but because there continue to be groups of people who wish to eradicate us. Sadly the danger is very real and knowing these stories could save a life one day.

May the holy soul, Lori Gilbert-Kaye, be bound up in the bond of life along with our brothers and sisters who fell at Etz Chaim Synagogue in Pittsburgh, and along with all of the holy neshamot who were murdered in the Shoah. May they all rest secure in the peace of the Eternal One.

Shabbat Shalom,

from Rabbi Joshua Corber
