Welcome to Beit Rayim ברוכים הבאים

Rabbi's Spotlight

The final portion of the Bamidbar (Numbers), Parashat Massei begins with a thorough recounting of the entire forty year journey from Egypt through the Sinai desert into the Kingdom of Moab (modern day Jordan and Saudi Arabia) right up to their present position on the east bank of the Jordan River. The Israelites are then commanded on how to draw tribal territories and to designate cities of refuge. The Torah does not waste words, so why is it repeating the various legs of the journey? The answer is, you can't know where you're going until you know where you are, and you don't know where you are unless you know where you're coming from. During their forty years in the desert, the Israelites went through a lot as a people; there were numerous errors and failures on both personal and national levels. We cannot learn from our mistakes if we do not retain an awareness of our past actions. Our present state, the state in which we find ourselves today, as individuals and as a collective, is a result of past actions. Some of those actions took place hours ago (the food we ate for example), other actions took place decades ago (our relatives migrating through and away from the Old World). Knowing this is critical in understanding who we are and where we're heading. The parsha does not only gaze backwards; it looks to future actions as a means to redeem the mistakes of the past—each tribal territory would be appropriate to that tribe's historical experience as well as their population. We cannot be stuck dwelling in the past; we must draw on our experiences and use them to determine the right way to move forward. May we never be so caught up in the day-to-day that we forget our history, and may we never get so stuck in the past that we lose awareness of the ever-unfolding present moment.

Shabbat Shalom,

from Rabbi Joshua Corber

What my host family meant to me— by Lee Balzar Shinshin 2016-17

Hello again to the amazing Beit Rayim community which I miss so much!

I would like to share with all of you some incredible memories I have made last year as a ShinShin. I was lucky enough to be hosted by 3 amazing host families who have made me feel at home, where I was miles away from my actual home. All families were so kind to me and I'm so grateful to say that the connection I've made with them I'll never forget. Whether it was introducing me to the Canadian winter and going winter clothes shopping with me, or having exciting discussions at home about Judaism and our beliefs about Israel, or just laughing, dancing or getting to know my family too, every minute was so exciting and welcoming and I really feel that these bonds can't be replaced. I can honestly say that I have 4 families in my heart after last year. It was always my dream to have a little sister, after last year I was fortunate enough to have gotten 7! It's so fun to still keep in touch with them and sharing my army experiences, hearing how they're doing and missing them so much at every birthday or celebration that you wish you could have been at. The experience with my host families was one of the things that have truly made my year so meaningful and gave a shoulder to lean on at hard times, and a place to get huge hugs at happy times. If you are able to, I strongly recommend to take part in this program and open your heart to another son/ daughter in your family!
