A Message from Rabbi Don Rossoff

Audacious hospitality

As you may remember, last Yom Kippur we invited Barnert members from other faith backgrounds up to the bima for a blessing in gratitude for the special role that they play in Jewish life. Later that day, we were addressed by two members: one sharing what he thought we needed to know about the experience of intermarried couples, and the other sharing what he thought we needed to know about having Jews of color in our community. These were part of our efforts to explore how Barnert can be even more inclusive as a diverse sacred community.

I believe this exploration is so very important, especially now. The face of American Judaism and the faces of American Jews have been changing for decades, causing us to broaden our minds and open our hearts and challenging our preconceived notions of what it means to be Jewishly “normal.” At a Biennial Convention of the Reform Movement back in the 1970s, our president, Rabbi Alexander Schindler, challenged temple communities to be more welcoming to the intermarried and to Jews by choice. While our work is not yet done in that regard, interfaith families and Jews by choice feel more welcome in Reform synagogues than ever before. Last month, at our latest URJ Biennial Convention in Boston, I and others in our great Barnert delegation had our eyes opened even wider as to what inclusivity really means.

In the words of URJ President Rabbi Rick Jacobs, synagogues need to be places of “audacious hospitality.” Audacious hospitality, as defined on the URJ website, is a “transformative spiritual practice rooted in the belief that we will be a stronger, more vibrant Jewish community when we fully welcome and incorporate the diversity that is the reality of modern Jewish life.”

The Biennial was a microcosm of today’s Jewish world and a model of what audacious hospitality looks like. Jews of color — i.e., Jews of non-European lineage, Jews in wheelchairs and on crutches, transgendered Jews, gay Jews and lesbian Jews and gender non-conforming Jews and so many more “diverse” Jews — walked, or wheeled, among the over-5,000 attendees without turning a head. Why? Because they knew that Jewish life belonged to them as much as it belonged to anyone else — and so did we all.

The Biennial was a microcosm of today’s Jewish world. The convention offered so many workshops focused on audacious hospitality — too many for any one person to go to. I heard a rabbi who had had a stroke in her early 30s, and is bipolar, speak about her difficulties being seen as competent. Parents of transgendered children spoke about how their synagogue supported them and their children as the latter were transitioning. Temple professionals spoke about the importance of using a person’s preferred name and pronoun. Rabbis spoke about programs in their temples aimed at making sure that persons with mental illnesses or who had mental or physical disabilities knew they were welcome and they and their families had a place to go and speak with other families in like situations. We were also aware of other populations within our communities who may not always feel they fit in — for instance single adults (of any age), people who hold more conservative political views than others, people who think the temple is too traditional, people who feel that the temple is not traditional enough.

We are starting to have conversations as to what audacious hospitality can and should mean at Barnert Temple. If you are interested in the inclusion conversation, we would love to hear your perspective and ideas. To join the exploration, please let me know of your interest.

I do not know exactly where our conversations will lead us. What I do know is that as we enfranchise those who currently feel at the margins, we will indeed be “a stronger, more vibrant Jewish community” for having embraced “the diversity that is the reality of modern Jewish life!”

Shalom uv'racha – with peace and blessing,

Sacred Symphonies: Music As Midrash Rabbi Don Rossoff

Thursdays, January 4, 11 and 18, at 7:30 pm

Rabbi Don Rossoff shares his love of music and Judaism. The Bible has inspired creative interpretation (midrash) not just by ancient rabbis but by musicians, artists and poets throughout the ages, including modern Jewish classical composers. In this three-part class, we will listen to and analyze three Biblically based modern compositions: Bloch’s Shelomo Rhapsody, Bernstein’s Jeremiah Symphony and his Chichester Psalms. No musical background necessary.

A Message From Rabbi Rachel Steiner

Why inclusion?

This year we are celebrating the 170th anniversary of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, our beloved Barnert Temple.

Our congregation was founded in 1847, around the same time that the original founders of Reform Judaism in Germany were coming to America and establishing the American Reform Movement. Much has changed about Reform Judaism and the Barnert community during these years, but one principle that has remained constant is our emphasis on inclusion. Although we have chosen to focus on inclusion in this magazine issue and will continue to do so in the months ahead, I think it is important to highlight that inclusion and breaking down barriers — while maintaining our Jewish identity — is at the essence of what Barnert has been about for 170 years.

At its core, Reform Judaism is about ensuring that Jews are able to enjoy lives consistent with both our Jewish tradition and modernity. For the original Reformers, who had received a traditional Jewish education, that meant selecting the Jewish practices that allowed Reform Jews to participate fully in the broader, non-Jewish community while retaining the core Jewish rituals and teachings that shaped their souls, their families, and their sense of purpose. The vision of Reform Judaism has always been about inclusion, providing a way for us to maintain our Jewish identities while actively engaging with the wider community as citizens and neighbors.

Of course, inclusion is important for other reasons. Let me address three. The first is that the diversity that comes from inclusion makes our community stronger. We need classrooms and discussions filled with individuals bringing different experiences to our study, sharing different opinions or interpretations, and asking different kinds of questions. We know that what we do at Barnert has to support our lives everywhere, not just when we are in the building. The more we push each other to think big and dig deep, the more effective we will find we are able to be as we work to live full lives of impact and connection. This is what Reform Judaism has always been about. This continues to be one of our pillars. When new people feel welcome and join us and share their stories, we are able to see the ways in which our community makes room for everyone and also has room to grow.

A second reason to focus on inclusion here at Barnert is that the Torah tells us, thirty-six times, to welcome the stranger. Love the stranger. Be kind to the stranger. Why? Because, we are taught over and over again, you were once a stranger in a strange place. It's simply what we do. Who is "the stranger"? In our case, we welcome those who might otherwise feel like outsiders, like they don't belong. And it's not simply about saying "hello" when someone new knocks at our door. We have the obligation and the privilege to go out of our way to ensure that Barnert is a place where anyone in a Jewish family can find a home, so that the feeling of being an outsider becomes a true sense of belonging. So many people have walked into our Reform congregation and told me that they felt like they had found their first, real Jewish home.

A final reason (not the final reason — there are myriad others we will explore in the coming months) to focus on inclusion in our community right now is, perhaps, a combination of the first two: each of us wants to feel accepted and find a home, a Jewish home. If we do not offer the same for others seeking connection, we are not doing right by our Reform Jewish tradition. Each of us can recall experiences where meeting someone who helped us to learn or experience something new helped us to change and to grow. We help each other stretch for new ways to practice Judaism, to try articulating new sentences about our belief and about faith, to make sense of what is happening in the world through our Jewish lenses. We come imperfectly whole, in search of a place to incubate new ideas, beliefs, melodies and friendships. We want to be included just the way we are. We can do an even better job to create a Barnert that is open and safe for those in our communities who have not yet found their Jewish home.

Reform Judaism and Barnert Temple have always adapted to ensure that our communities are inclusive of Jewish families who are seeking their spiritual home. We continue to work to become a place where even more Jewish individuals and families feel welcome and energized and inspired. As we engage in this holy work, we heed our calls to welcome the stranger, to ensure our Judaism is relevant and woven into our contemporary lives, and to create a community we are proud to call home.

Important New Procedure Regarding Friday Evening Mi Shebeirach (Healing) List

As time has gone on, sadly, more and more names have been added to the Mi Shebeirach (Healing) list to be read during our Shabbat service. The challenge before us is that names which no longer need our prayers often remain on the list, resulting in an exceptionally long list to be read during Friday-evening services. The list has not been updated for a very long time and it is time to do so.

As of January 1, 2018, we are going to begin a new list.

If you would like the name of a dear one to be mentioned publicly during our Healing Prayer, or read silently by one of the rabbis, please send an email (preferred) to loris1847@barnerttemple.org or call Lori in the Temple Office at (201) 848-1800.

Once a name is placed on the list, it will remain there for two (2) months and then be removed. If you wish the name to remain on the Mi Shebeirach list for more than two months, you will need to contact Lori again. (You may want to put a two-month reminder on your calendar about resubmitting the name.) Please do not assume that a name will be on the list if you do not request it to be so.

Prayers for healing, whether offered by a community in prayer or by an individual in prayerful moments, can be very powerful. Of course, the most powerful and meaningful prayer is the one you offer on Friday evenings surrounded by your Temple community. But when that is not possible, in a moment of need praying by yourself is also helpful.

Remember, even when being cured is no longer an option, healing can take place in the heart and in the spirit which strive for shalom, wholeness. This can be true both for those who are prayed for as well as for those who pray for them.

I pray that you and yours are well and remain well. Know that, with your assistance, your Barnert family will continue to offer prayers for the complete restoration of body, mind, and spirit for your loved ones in need of healing.

With thoughts of b'reeut, r'fuah, v'shalom — health, healing, and peace,

Rabbi Don Rossoff

I have provided here a copy of the Mi Shebeirach prayer should you ever want to recite it on your own. ## Our homeland

By the time this issue of our magazine arrives in your home, my daughter Caroline will have returned from spending the fall semester of her sophomore year in Israel with the URJ Heller High Program (formerly known as NFTY EIE). I had the opportunity to visit her on the Parent's Pilgrimage and was encouraged by some Barnert friends to share the experience here.

First off, a little background on the program.

URJ Heller High is a semester-long program in Israel for high school students in grades 10 through 12. Heller High is based on Kibbutz Tzuba, nestled in the Judean Hills, approximately 15 minutes outside of Jerusalem, where the students live in dorm-style housing. With very small class sizes, students take an advanced Jewish History class, Conversational Hebrew, and their regular General Studies courses to fulfill the requirements of their home high schools. While at Heller High, students become immersed in the study of the history, culture, and land of Israel.

Experiential learning is at the core of the curriculum. On average, one to two days per week are spent outside the classroom on field trips. There are also a number of weeklong trips throughout the semester, including a pilgrimage to Poland to study the Holocaust; a week in Gadna, a simulated Israeli army-training experience (Caroline's favorite!); and a weeklong hike in the north, from sea to sea.

We had traveled as a family to Israel for the first time two years ago with Rabbi Frishman. That trip was life-changing for all of us. In addition to being introduced to our homeland and its history, we were also able to understand first-hand just how complicated the politics are, within the state of Israel in addition to the broader political landscape of the Middle East.

So, why go back such a short time later and visit many of the same sites? The obvious answer, of course, is to see my daughter. Beyond that, I wasn't sure what to expect. The Parent's Pilgrimage invites us to experience Israel exactly the way our kids experience it. The focus is on the history of the Jewish people as seen through the lens of our children, who deepen their own Jewish identities during this unique living and learning opportunity.

One of my favorite excursions was our Crusader Tiyul (field trip). Together, we "stormed" the Belvoir Crusader Fortress, which still stands today. To learn about the Crusader period and the impact it had on Jews at the time, while sitting on the floor of what was the main room where the soldiers ate, strategized and rested, was incredible. We visited Tzfat and learned about the history of Kabbalah. We walked through the Orthodox quarter of the Old City after learning about Orthodox sects and why so many variations exist. We ate, shopped, explored and experienced what it's like to live on a kibbutz.

For most of my life, I never understood why I was supposed to care so deeply about Israel. As a Reform Jew, I knew it was something our movement supported but I had no personal connection to it. Now, I do. For me, these trips to Israel strengthened my own Jewish identity in a way I hadn't anticipated. Walking the streets of Jerusalem offered a deeper and more tangible connection to this holy city and our people's history. I felt for the first time that I really am a child of Israel and that feeling alone was nothing short of amazing.

I feel blessed to have been able to visit our homeland twice in my lifetime. If you've never been before, I hope you'll have the opportunity at some point to visit; and if you have children who are or will be eligible for the URJ Heller High program in Israel, that you'll consider sending them. It truly is an experience of a lifetime.

I hope 2018 brings you good health, great adventure, happiness, and peace.

L'Shalom.

Rebecca McKinnon

A Message From Sara Losch

Opening doors to inclusive education

When studying Jewish texts, we parse sentences, looking deeply into meanings of operative words. I've been particularly drawn to this Pirkei Avot (Sayings of Our Fathers), text, from the great sage, Hillel: Do not separate yourself from the community.

What constitutes "separating"? What if separating is a result of feeling unwelcome? What if

I FEEL separate? And, what is "the" community? Is it all Jews? All people?

Barnert leaders and clergy are and have always been committed to creating an inclusive community, one that assures that everyone can feel included. We also understand that it is not always easy. It takes work. People often do feel separate.

In the Preschool, the teaching has two players: "yourself" is the person wanting to be part of something; "the" community is anyone whose child participates in Barnert Temple Preschool programs. Until now, "the" community included families with at least one Jewish parent.

I am very excited to announce that "the" Preschool community—Friday-morning baby classes through Kindergarten and Day Camp—will now be open to, and include children and families from other cultures and faith backgrounds. Unanimously approved by the Board of Trustees, this change in policy came about in large part because our preschool families wanted to see it happen.

Our program will remain completely Jewish in design and curriculum, with all Jewish holidays, mitzvot, and Torah continuing to guide us and be our foundation.

We see the following positive outcomes:

- An open-enrollment policy resonates with our mission as an inviting and open community. Families from other faiths and cultures will learn about Judaism, providing significant and meaningful opportunities for positive interfaith dialog, understanding and acceptance.
- Increased student enrollment will benefit the congregation financially, ensuring maximum use of our physical space and more cost-effective staffing ratios.
- People of other faiths or backgrounds who are extended families of current preschool families can join our preschool community alongside their Jewish family.

We began the 2017–18 temple year with this tag line: Come Home to Barnert.

Now, we are honored to welcome home those who wish to join our preschool, as Hillel's teaching continues to guide us as we all come together in our sacred community. We look forward to your participation and to helping you feel fully part of our community.

Registration is now open for Preschool, Transitional Kindergarten and Day Camp 2018. Spread the word.

A VERY REFORM SHABBAT SHIRAH!

Did you know that Barnert Temple was founded not long after Reform Judaism began to grow in Germany and North America?

This marks Barnert's 170th Anniversary. In celebration of our rich heritage, we will dedicate Shabbat Shirah, our most special musical service, to the amazing legacy of Reform liturgical music from the 1800s until today.

We will be led in song by the rich, in-house talent at Barnert for our service on Friday, January 26, at 8 pm.
It will be an unforgettable musical journey!

Fantastics: 4 to 5 years old

Our highly rated Fantastics' Pre-Kindergarten program revolves around an emergent curriculum. Students have the freedom to learn at different rates and in different ways. Our goal is to graduate children who love learning and are ready for kindergarten.

Transitional Kindergarten: 4 to 6 years old

We are known for our individualized attention, a creative curriculum, outdoor programming, academic challenges, and sensitivity to each child's unique learning style. ## Kindergarten Explorations: 5 to 6 years old

Barnert's Kindergarten Explorations program offers students who only attend kindergarten in the morning, an opportunity for the much-needed time to explore topics beyond reading, writing and math. # We are delighted to share this special Thanksgiving D'var Torah by former BarTY President Alex Brover

Shabbat Shalom, everyone, and Happy Thanksgiving. My name is Alex Brover and I am currently a senior at Emory University, studying accounting. As some of you may know, I have always been quite active in Barnert, ultimately serving as the president of BarTY during my senior year of high school in 2014. Though I would be remised if I did not give Sara Losch a shout-out in saying that I also am an alumni of Barnert Preschool and Religious School. And for those of you that are having the same déjà vu as I am, almost nine years ago to the day, I stood on this very bima talking about the exact same Torah portion. Why that day my mother let me walk around with the Justin Bieber-esque haircut and wear an orange shirt, orange tie, and matching orange braces I will never quite understand... Nonetheless, here I stand today, slightly less awkward and hopefully slightly more insightful to talk about this week's portion of Vayeitzei.

This week's portion begins with the well-known story of Jacob's ladder. In the story, Jacob has just left Beer Sheva running from his brother Esau, whom he has just stolen his father's birthright and blessing from. One night along his journey, he stops in an unsuspecting place for the night that some scholars argue was actually the future home to the Temple Mount in Jerusalem. While he is sleeping, a ladder appears in his dreams reaching from the ground to the heavens. Angels were climbing up and down the ladder and God appears to Jacob. God tells Jacob that his descendants will conquer the land of Israel, and the parshah concludes with the birth of the 12 tribes of Israel. The ladder appears to Jacob in a dream seemingly out of nowhere. God proves to Jacob that he is there with him, even in the middle of the desert while he is running from his Esau than many people believe is trying to kill him.

I have been very fortunate in that there is a very strong Jewish population on Emory's campus. We hear stories of religious intolerance on college campuses and almost train young adults not to be surprised when things like that happen. During my freshman year at Emory, someone spray-painted a swastika on the side of the house of one of the Jewish fraternities on campus. Within hours there was an outpouring of support as this story came to news headlines. Rabbi Frishman reached out asking how the community was reacting to this act. Though it did feel a bit scary at the time, the stupid actions of one person did not seem threatening. The university as well as all of the other Jewish organizations on campus reacted swiftly and strongly to denounce this act of hatred.

Just one year later, hours after Yom Kippur ended, a student group on campus erected a wall to protest the state of Israel. They called it the Apartheid wall and put it right in the center of campus for everyone to see and pass by. On it were testaments to how this group believed Israel was acting unjustly toward Palestinians. The protest claimed not to be anti-Semitic but rather just anti-Israel, but the gross misrepresentation of facts along with the timing being right after Yom Kippur made it difficult to personally separate those two sentiments. It made me angry every time I was forced to walk past it because this was not the act of one student acting like an idiot with a can of spray paint the year before. This group had meticulously sought out permission to do this. This was premeditated and nobody agreed on how to react. Some people wanted the school to force them to take it down, which for obvious reasons was certainly not a good idea. Others wanted to just ignore it because bringing any more attention to the provocative protest was exactly what these students wanted. Ultimately, a student group put up a Wall of Truth beside it to respond to most of the groundless claims that the students were making.

I'm not sure I know what the best action is, but I do know for certain that it does not get any easier each year when that wall goes up. I'm not sure if it was subconscious or not but right around this time, I began to attend Shabbat dinners at Chabad and Hillel much more regularly. It's not that I felt compelled to go, but it just seemed like the right thing to do. Shabbat dinners were something to look forward to after a long week and there's something to be said about being surrounded by like-minded people. It was in this time after the first protest that I could imagine how Jacob was feeling running from his brother Esau. Though nobody feared for their lives, the Jewish community at Emory was at a crossroads and it was comforting to see the community engage in discussions on how best to handle the situation, just as while Jacob is alone in the desert he is surrounded by angels. Even when things were not going his way, he realized angels surrounded him and were there to protect him.

I wish that I had understood this sentiment from the beginning of college though. During my senior year of high school, two kids in the grade above me during their freshman years of college took their own lives each within a month or two of each other. These were two individuals who were checking all of the boxes: they had tons of friends, a great school. If they had difficult handling the pressures of college, how was anybody else supposed to succeed? Our small community was going through testing times. We had been raised all of our lives to hear that college is the best time of your life. Enjoy it while you can. Nobody wants to talk about the times when college sucks. Being completely taken out of your comfort zone of 18 years and thrown into a new environment with new people is not easy. In high school, I graduated toward the top of my class. Guess what?, so did everyone else. You were the captain of a sports team? The kid living two doors was for two teams. The pressure can at times be insurmountable and yet everyone says college is so amazing. It felt like if I wasn't happy I was doing something wrong.

My biggest regret has been not embracing these angels that surround us during the hard times. Feeling like I had to keep in my feelings because I didn't want to worry my parents 900 miles away was not healthy. Everything turned out great but in case nobody has told you before, let me do the honors. I don't know a single person that absolutely 100% loved their freshman year of college. It can be miserable. Don't forget to look for those angels that surround you. Whether it is your friends at school, friends from home, family, whomever. Surround yourself with people that care and are there to support you through good and bad and it will all work out.

I am proud to say that I will be graduating this May and taking on the real world thereafter. It would be naïve of me to think that I would be where I am today without the support of the Barnert community. They say it takes a community to raise a child and that has certainly held true for me. Thank you Zack and Melissa for helping teach what it meant to be a leader while I was in BarTY. Thank you so much Rabbi Steiner for inviting me to speak here tonight. Thank you to the Barnert community for being there for me. Always.

Shabbat Shalom.

Men's Club

On November 19 we had a networking breakfast, which connected people both professionally and personally, and was a lot of fun! This was led by Men's Club Past President Stephen Becker. What a great turnout we had!

On December 10, psychologist and Men's Club member Michael Kirshner spoke to both the Men's Club and Women of Barnert about the signs, symptoms and treatment of opioid addiction. The opioid crisis has been growing steadily in New Jersey. This was both informational and insightful.

On December 16, the Men's Club, Women of Barnert, and the Barnert Social Committee sponsored this year's Chanukah party, Latkes and Vodkas, which was a celebration of music, cocktails and food. What a great turnout to put up the temple's menorah. Thank you to all our helpers.

The super colossal event of the year, The Gourmet Tasting, is scheduled for March 10. Planning for this is underway. Please be on the lookout for more information as we get closer to the date.

We are always looking for new ideas for events.

Please don't hesitate to reach out to me with any questions. I look forward to meeting you at the events.

Barnert at the Biennial!

The Union for Reform Judaism held its 74th Biennial in Boston in December. More than 6,000 Jewish leaders from across the US, Canada, and around the world came together to learn, pray, share ideas, and hear from inspiring speakers. Barnert's rabbis, professional staff, and temple leaders were part of this amazing experience. Here's some of your Barnert Biennial Team working for

Social Action Launches Happiness Initiative

It Starts With Volunteering and Includes Faith, Family, Friends, and You!

A message from Elizabeth Resnick, Social Action Chair, with Jackie Packman and Felicia Halpert

The National Geographic Society recently commissioned a study on the happiest people. Their findings focused on what constitutes happiness, and why some people are happier than others. Two of the top key indicators of happier people: people of faith and people who volunteer. It's wonderful to know the work of Barnert Temple's Social Action group is right up there on the happiness quotient! (FYI: some of the others happiness factors include having a dog, having a front porch, living with good lighting, and having at least three really close friends...)

On behalf of the 2017–2018 Social Action Steering Committee, I want to express our gratitude for the very active participation at the Social Action kick-off brunch meeting in October. Participants told us the energy and enthusiasm in the room was palpable. Our theme, emphasizing the "Action" in Social Action, received a very positive response as well.

Special gratitude to Rabbi Rachel Steiner and Barnert Temple President Rebecca McKinnon, who help drive our efforts and embody the importance of Social Justice/Social Action in so many ways.

Whether or not you came to the meeting the question is simple: How can you TAKE ACTION and make a difference in the world?

The answer: do one thing, take one step — and see the changes you set in motion.

Making a positive impact on people's lives doesn't require a lot of time or money. All it takes is a willingness to step outside of yourself.

There are many ways for you to BE INCLUDED. If you haven't filled out a Barnert Social Action Ongoing Initiatives form already, take a few moments to review the information on the following pages. Then decide what inspires you to take action and turn the form in to the Temple Office.

Act NOW! Let us know how you would like to get involved.

We look forward to you joining us. And who knows? Maybe taking that one step will increase your level of happiness!

Barnert Social Action: Get Involved!

"It is not for you to complete the work, but neither are you free to desist from it."

— Pirket Avot, 2:21

Social Action is at the core of Barnert Temple. It's central to the life of our congregation.

Making a positive impact on people's lives doesn't require lots of time or money.

All it takes is a willingness to step outside yourself.

To act.

Do one thing, take one step — and see the change that results.

Did you know that Barnert is involved in several social action initiatives? We welcome your volunteer commitment. It can be brief, periodic, or ongoing. Whether you like to cook, chat, drive, or hammer, there's something available for everyone.

Consider getting involved. Start by joining an email list.

Check off any or all the initiatives that interest you. We'll then add you to an email list, and you'll be able to stay in touch with what's going on.

Have questions? Contact Jackie Packman at japackman@yahoo.com or email the respective Barnert Temple Chairperson(s) for information about the initiatives on the following page.

Renaissance News

Year In Review

2017 found Renaissance members participating in a number of activities — some here at Barnert, including Mitzvah-Plex, our lay-led Shabbat, and cooking/serving at the Men's Shelter in Paterson.

We had a big theater year. First up in July, the group took in "Come From Away," followed by December's performances of "The Band's Visit" and our annual Christmas Day outing to the Yiddish Theatre which presented "The Sorceress."

On December 10, our annual Renaissance Chanukah Party was hosted by Carole and Pete Brodie, where a record 28 members gathered to enjoy traditional latkes and a coordinated potluck supper and dessert. Temple President Rebecca McKinnon joined us for a "meet and greet."

Book Club

Our next meeting in January is on the 15th, a Monday night, when we will meet to discuss An Odyssey: A Father, A Son, and an Epic, by Daniel Mendelsohn. We will gather at the home of Eileen Manheimer in Allendale. So let's get reading!
