Judith Silver, Song Leader for Singing for the Mind, with the 8th anniversary cake

Singing for the Mind

A real party atmosphere greeted everyone as they entered the Montefiore Hall on 9 May when we celebrated the 8th anniversary of Singing for the Mind and thanked Judith Silver, who has been our main Song Leader since the project started, and who was sadly leaving us. An expanded circle of singers including friends and family were present, as well as Rabbi Alexandra Wright and also Peter Todd, who had helped set up the partnership with the Alzheimer's Society when the project started 8 years ago.

Two wonderful cakes were baked specially for the occasion by Debi Penhey, and a gift was given to Judith Silver to thank her for helping to make the project such a success.

Singing for the Mind Sessions at the LJS

Peter Todd (see page 1) joins in the singing and dancing

Singing sessions for people with dementia or memory loss have been running at the LJS for eight years. Brought to the LJS by Rita Adler, and initially set up as Singing for the Brain in conjunction with the Alzheimer's Society, it is now run independently as Singing for the Mind. We are enormously grateful to the Ernest Hecht Foundation which has given invaluable support and funding from the beginning, as well as to other donors; to Mary Rossiter who was the original organiser and who ran Singing for the Mind for nearly seven years; and to our wonderful (but sadly departing) Song Leader, Judith Silver, who has been with us from the start and who is enabling us to continue by training our future Song Leaders.

We follow a structured singing programme which includes breathing, movement, and even dancing at times, as well as singing well-known and also new songs. This programme revives verbal abilities and helps connections between people, and that is certainly seen in our participants. But best of all it gives such pleasure to everyone.

The Song Leaders, volunteers and participants come from the LJS, other synagogues, and the wider non-Jewish community. All participants attend with a companion who find that they, too, gain support and friendship. There is an opportunity to chat and have tea and biscuits both before and after the singing. Everyone involved in Singing for the Mind says it is the highlight of their week.

There is a limit on participant numbers, and often a waiting list, so if you know someone who would benefit, do put their name down early. For more information and to view Lucy Kaye's prize-winning film Memory Songs, please go to: <http://ljs.org/community/#sfm>

Film Club at the LJS 7.00pm-9.30pm Wednesday 14 August

Our new bi-monthly film club is presented by Cristina Galisi, a graduate in Modern Languages and Cinema Studies. It features recent Israeli films related to either current Jewish themes or Festivals. Our next screening, a musical comedy about life, love and friendship, is Bananot La-Eroviszion – Cupcakes (in Hebrew with English subtitles). A group of friends from Tel Aviv accidentally enter a Eurovision-style Song Contest when their tune is picked to represent Israel. Thrust into a world of glamour and high expectations, the friends struggle to navigate around the sharp elbows of the pop music business, getting into lots of hilarious situations along the way.

Drinks and popcorn will be served at 7.00pm before the film starts promptly at 7.30pm. There will be a discussion after the film. There is no charge for admission, but contributions to costs are much appreciated.

For further information please contact Cristina Galisi: cristina@galisi.com, or to register for the Film Club, please contact Felicia Beder: rabbispa@ljs.org or call 020 7432 1283.

Rabbi Harry Jacobi MBE z”l

19 October 1925 – 24 April 2019

We pay tribute to a much loved and highly respected Liberal Rabbi who was a member of the LJS and who regarded it as one of his spiritual homes.

A conscientious, modest, humorous and music-loving man, Harry Jacobi cared deeply for all humanity, and his own life experience inspired him to serve others and fight injustice.

Born Heinz Martin Hirschberg in Germany in 1925, Harry’s early life was tumultuous and his family was to be annihilated during the Shoah. Shortly after having celebrated his Bar Mitzvah in Berlin’s Friedenstempel just days before Kristallnacht, he left for Holland, never to see his mother again. After time in an internment camp then an orphanage, he was among those rescued in 1940 by the remarkable Truus Wijsmuller-Meijer (later honoured as a Righteous Gentile), and only moments before Dutch capitulation to their Nazi invaders, he boarded a ship bound for Liverpool.

After working the remaining war years in Manchester, then subsequently as a driver for the Jewish Brigade in northern Europe, Harry began to prepare to make Aliyah. However, a visit in 1949 to the World Union Conference in London where he heard Rabbi Leo Baeck’s presidential address calling for the rebuilding and advancement of progressive Judaism in Europe touched Harry deeply and changed the course of his life. He prepared to study for the British rabbinate, was ordained ‘reverend’ in 1961, and received his rabbinic ordination in 1971.

Harry decided to build up and strengthen the post-war diaspora community, continuing this throughout his life, serving the communities of Southgate, Wembley, Zurich, and, after retirement, South Bucks and Eastbourne Progressive congregations. He also taught and preached in countless other communities. For ten years he was the Chair of the (then) Liberal Judaism Rabbinic Board and led high-profile campaigns to highlight the plight of refugees.

During the 1960s he edited Pointer, the ULPS (now LJ) journal of Jewish thought, and for several years he ran the Liberal Judaism Evening Institute at the Montagu Centre, which served as an entry point for many into Judaism. During the 1970s and until he moved to Switzerland in 1982, he organised and led the ULPS Israel tour. In 2006 he was awarded the MBE in recognition of his contribution to Jewish community life and to interfaith relations.

A devoted family man, Harry in turn received much love and support right to the end of his long life. He and his late wife Rose were devoted to each other, and Harry enjoyed close and rich relationships with his children, Richard, Margaret and David, as well as with their families. He delighted in his grandchildren and great-grandchildren, who brought him untold joy at the end of his life, especially after having to bear the tragic loss of his younger son, David, in 2016.

Harry will be remembered for his sincerity, his loyalty, and his service to the causes of progressive Judaism in Europe. He was a man whose life exemplified the prophetic ideals of justice, compassion and truth, and who served his God with an unshakeable courage and integrity.

Council Report

'Strive to occupy yourself with the needs of the community' (Rashi)

Council runs on an annual cycle beginning with the AGM. Our June meeting, held shortly before the AGM, is therefore the last of the year and when, according to the rules of the company, Trustees who have served their full term of office need to stand down. This year Anthony Sefton has completed his period as a Trustee: we thank him for all he has done on Council. When I next report to you, the AGM will have taken place and we will have a new Council beginning its tenure.

The June meeting was also the opportunity for Council to review and agree the Trustees' Report and accounts ahead of the AGM. We were therefore joined by a representative of our auditors who took us through the management report they had prepared following the audit. No significant deficiencies had been found in the accounting and control systems, but there are recommendations which we will be addressing. Council is very grateful to Peter Loble, our Honorary Treasurer, and to the office staff involved in the audit: Lysa Schwartz, Ergun Arican, and Alison Mugunthan.

At our Council meeting, we carried out a review of our Annual Plan. We have had success with many of the areas which we had prioritised. These included expanding our learning programmes, recruiting new rabbis and ensuring we are compliant with the data protection law. We have also responded to the unexpected, as with the failure of our boilers and central heating. (A note on this: we are awaiting planning permission from Westminster and hope to receive this in July or August.)

In July, the new Council will be undertaking some forward planning based on our review and on the developing needs of the community.

Council was updated on the redevelopment of the toilets. This summer we are renovating those on both the ground floor and on the first floor. These are on schedule to be completed during the Nursery School's summer holiday and therefore to be ready by the beginning of September. Phase two of the work (the basement toilets and those in the bride's room), will take place next year.

We were also informed of two forthcoming events: one is the LJ Day of Celebration on Sunday 23 June hosted by the LJS and entitled, 'If I am only for myself'; its focus is the role of communities in supporting their members. I will report on this in the next newsletter.

The second event is very exciting: an evening of jazz entitled, 'All That Jazz', on Sunday 3 November. You will see information on page 12, and find enclosed in this newsletter a flyer advertising what promises to be a wonderful evening. The bandleader is Peter Werth, a member of the LJS. Do come!

Council does not meet in August, but takes a summer break, as does the newsletter. We are looking forward to some exciting plans for our LJS community after the holidays.

Sue Head, Chairman of Council

Igor Zinkov, whose rabbinic ordination takes place on 7 July, reflects on Tisha B'Av

Tisha B'Av commemorates the long list of persecutions in Jewish history traditionally associated with this day of mourning. However, the original meaning of the day originates in grieving for the destruction of the First and Second Temples in Jerusalem. It leads many Jews to ask themselves what this day means to those who do not want the Temple to be rebuilt and who don't see themselves re-establishing animal sacrifices.

Every generation of liberal Jews is faced with the challenge of finding meaning in Tisha B'Av. Some of us relate to it, but because the day falls in summer when many synagogues are quieter, it's easy just to neglect or ignore it. The challenge of dealing with the destruction of Temples is often therefore left to our youth at Jewish summer camps where Jewish educators and rabbis try to redefine their theology about destruction, sacrifices, the role of synagogue and worship.

Marjorie Ingall wrote an article 'How summer camps should – and shouldn't – observe Tisha B'Av' in which she asked former campers, current camp staff, and Jewish educators to talk about some of the traumatizing and pedagogically dubious ways they observed Tisha B'Av, and to share some better approaches. Some of the negative examples included having young people build a model Temple, only to have the counsellors burn it, or acting out appalling episodes in Jewish history such as the Crusades, the Inquisition, pogroms, and even the Holocaust.

Perhaps it is not surprising that the participants and staff find it difficult to find a positive message in a day of disasters. One Jewish educator recalls a camp when over 45 campers indicated that they would not be participating in camp activities because of their observance of Tisha B'Av. Realizing what was going on, the senior staff created a rule forbidding campers from reading Harry Potter that day, drastically affecting the numbers who decided they would participate after all! This amusing anecdote reminds us that it is not enough to perform Jewish rites and customs without a deeper understanding of the ethical and moral values underpinning them.

Learning is important for progressive Judaism. There are positive examples of Tisha B'Av activities at summer camps which might help the wider community to learn about and redefine this day. For example, one camp's educators decided to invite campers to clean up cemeteries after having learned about the people and community that used to thrive in the area around the camp. Another positive approach is to focus on the rabbinic idea that the Temple was destroyed because of sinat chinam (unwarranted hatred) and on Rav Kook's complementary idea that the Temple would only be rebuilt through ahavat chinam (unwarranted love). Campers spent a day creating moments of ahavat chinam for each other followed by a meaningful discussion.

Everyone will decide for themselves how or indeed whether to mark Tisha B'Av on Sunday August 11. This year I have decided to build the 'Temple' of words and letters, the 'Temple' of ideas, thoughts and inspirations, and the 'Temple' of positive self-reflection and self-development. This is why the initial letters of each paragraph of this article build the word 'Temple'.

Remembering Rabbi Dr David J. Goldberg OBE z”l

In these edited extracts from tributes written by some of the people who knew David well we get a flavour of the way he touched and enriched their lives. Their full tributes honour David’s immense contribution both to Liberal Judaism in general and to the LJS in particular. David’s participation in family life cycle events – often through the generations – is highlighted. Happy gatherings at David and Carole’s home are recalled, as is David’s kindness, compassion and support through times of difficulty. Testimony is given to the fortitude with which he bore his own terrible illness. David’s erudition, intellectual prowess and razor sharp mind are remembered, together with his fearless determination to speak up for justice. Ann Kirk’s words resonate with us all when she writes that she and her husband, Bob, always found David’s sermons stimulating and challenging, and that there was regularly something to think and talk about after the service.

David’s wit was legendary, and we begin these tributes with an indication of his humour from Penny Hastings, Ian Lazarus and Lisa Gershon:

Penny’s son, Jonathan, and David and Carole’s son, Rupert, had play dates. Penny recalls, ‘On one occasion when David came to collect Rupert he remarked wryly that if I was wondering why I was having such bad luck (I was recently divorced), it might be because my mezuzah was upside down!’

Ian recalls that at his mother’s funeral David said, ‘Rosemary, with no malice aforethought, was the nosiest person I ever met.’ Even at a funeral, no-one could help but laugh because it was so true! Ian believes David could get away with being irreverent because he had the ability to connect to everyone.

Lisa Gershon recounts David’s humour at a similarly solemn occasion: ‘On a cold morning in October 2003 a few of us were gathered around the family plot in the LJS cemetery to mark the joint stone-setting of my grandparents, Doreen and Louis Gluckstein. David was officiating, and there was a twinkle in his eye as it dawned on a few of us that owing to a rare but (literally) grave error, ‘Louis’ had become ‘Louise’. David’s fabulous sense of humour was just what was needed to save the situation.’

Here we read the words of others who remember David with gratitude and appreciation:

‘David and I worked very happily together on various editorial projects, the main one being a quarterly journal, Pointer, published by ULPS (later LJ) for which David was the editor and I the technical editor. I treasured our meetings, discussing content and layout, and researching suitable contributors and artists. David always knew exactly the right people to approach, and did this with his trademark persuasive powers and courtesy. When Bob and I became joint editors of the LJS newsletter, David took a close interest, sometimes suggesting lead subjects, and taking great pleasure in spotting any (fortunately very rare!) typographical errors.’

Ann Kirk

‘We were delighted that when we invited David to become President of the Out and About Club he accepted with alacrity and became a staunch supporter of the club. His annual talks were eagerly awaited and always engendered a lively discussion whether he was talking about antisemitism or his beloved cricket, and he and Carole never missed an annual dinner. His only complaint was that in the many years that Carole had drawn the raffle tickets, he had never won a prize.’

Jenny Nathan

‘David will be primarily remembered as a bold rabbi who believed that the pen is more powerful than the sword. From the pulpit and in his writings David demonstrated profound intellectual honesty. He was prepared to express ideas, such as condemnation of the Israeli invasion into Lebanon, without concern that his views were not acceptable to the more conservative elements within the Jewish community. David led his diverse congregation with the skill of a great conductor, harnessing the talents of its members to the advantage of the community, commissioning artists and architects to create the Shoah memorial, and bankers and business people in fundraising for its rebuilding of the LJS. David’s talent for motivating others to serve the community enabled him to raise the profile of the LJS as a powerful voice in the intellectual and moral leadership of the Jewish community, vindicating his view that the pen is indeed mightier than the sword.’

Martin Slowe

‘I had a blind introduction to David. As a newly-arrived postgraduate student in London, singing with the Professional Choir from the concealed choir loft of the old synagogue building, I found provocation, inspiration and enlightenment from this unseen orator as he preached from the pulpit below. David and John Rayner, both invisible, were my introduction to the LJS, and the rest is history. Some years were to elapse before David and others appointed me as Music Director. In this role it was my great fortune to be supported and nurtured by David, a great lover of music, who, with his surgical attention to detail and his unmistakable, occasionally in-tune singing voice, proved to be a colleague with impeccable timing and a highly refined sense of aesthetic beauty and balance. As a ‘slip of a girl’ (his words) cutting my teeth, his unflinching honesty and well-intentioned criticism were always tempered with appropriate praise, compassion and humour. It is no secret that David loved being in the company of artists. Perhaps this is why he spent so much time kibbutzing with the choir, tucked away in the upstairs kitchen, where he could be found bantering and joking with the musicians before the start of a service.’

Cathy Heller Jones

‘After reviewing David’s superbly written but controversial This is Not the Way: Jews, Judaism and Israel for LJS News in 2012, I took him on a tour of St Paul’s Cathedral, where I was working in the archive. In his book, David had confessed to ‘intellectual hypocrisy’ for leading the LJS congregation in a prayer that extolled God’s guiding hand in Jewish history and had questioned the certitudes of the Amidah. If you cannot conceive of God as the Creator, he argued, God’s intervention in human history is no more tenable. In the St Paul’s library he was shown the cathedral’s greatest treasure, William Tyndale’s 1526 translation of The New Testament. We then descended to the cathedral floor where The Lord’s Prayer is recited on the hour. Without hesitation he joined in, reassuring me in a moving affirmation of a common faith tradition, “It is a good Jewish prayer.”’

Gordon Higgott

‘David was an important person in my life. I met him in the summer of 1987 when I was one of very few Russian refuseniks arriving in London. He helped both myself and my family to walk the way from being just people of Jewish origin to becoming Jewish people, and I am very grateful.’

Tim Sandler

‘It is to David that I owe several of those rare ‘lump in the throat’ moments in life when the emotion that surges through you feels quite overwhelming. The most memorable was his introduction and words at the memorial service for Yehudi Menuhin. I felt huge pride as LJS Chair seeing David in his distinctive gown walking down the central nave of Westminster Abbey along with Church dignitaries, representatives of other faiths and the Dalai Lama. And then came, “I will now recite the Jewish Memorial Prayer – the Kaddish. Will those who wish to please join me.” His familiar voice, joined by more people than one might have expected, spread around this vast historic place. As ever, David’s words were meticulously chosen, carefully enunciated and reassuring.’

Caroline Hagar

Our heartfelt thanks to a beloved and inspiring teacher

During the Shabbat service on 26 May, Caroline Hagar, much loved teacher of our kindergarten class, Kitah Gan, was honoured in celebration of her 36 years as a Jewish educator. Rabbi Elana Dellal explained that in gematria – a system in which different letters are given numerical values – the number 18 is the numerical value for the word chai, meaning ‘life’. The number 18 therefore holds great significance in Judaism, as does 36, which is ‘double-chai’. So we were celebrating Caroline’s ‘double-chai teach-iversary’!

Rabbi Elana paid this tribute to Caroline: ‘For 36 years you have blessed young people by fostering environments of curiosity, compassion, excitement, and a deep love of Jewish tradition and texts.’ She went on to comment on the many people present who had once sat in Caroline’s classroom or were now parents of children who had studied with her, or who were studying with her now.

It was particularly poignant when Daniel Lewis, a former student of Caroline’s, and now the father of three children who were all in Caroline’s class, recounted how around 35 years previously he’d been an inattentive and naughty little boy trying to sneak out of class. But he hadn’t reckoned with having a boundlessly energetic and enthusiastic teacher who wasn’t put off by his bad behaviour. Caroline dealt with the situation by calling him up to the front of the class to sing a duet as she played along on her guitar. And although that little boy wasn’t much of a singer, Caroline just kept smiling as she always does. Daniel told everyone that today was his opportunity finally to apologise for his previous bad behaviour, but more importantly, it was his opportunity to acknowledge the impact Caroline had had in shaping his Jewish identity, for helping him build those critical foundations of Hebrew knowledge and Jewish values – and for allowing him to find independence on Saturday mornings away from his parents. (Daniel admitted he still can’t sing, though!)

Before presenting Caroline with a special gift, Daniel spoke for everyone when he said that Caroline must have taught hundreds if not thousands of children – including his own – over the years, and that Caroline is quintessentially Caroline because she never gives up and always keeps smiling. She is clearly happiest when surrounded by a group of children – even if they are sometimes rowdy... Caroline teaches from the heart, truly cares about her students, perseveres and inspires.

We thank you, Caroline.

Trekking in Israel in aid of Jewish Child's Day

Following the very successful and well-attended Nosh 'n' Drosh session given by Gaby Lazarus earlier this year, we hear about last year's trek as well as the forthcoming one.

Simon and Gaby (holding the banner) and fellow trekkers, with the children and their volunteer carers

LJS members Gaby Lazarus and Simon Cooney formed part of a group of 16 people who undertook a three-day trek covering 60 kilometres in northern Israel in November last year in aid of a Jewish Child's Day (JCD) project. Although there was a fair amount of preparation and the walking itself was strenuous, it was a most rewarding activity, not least because of the bonding within the group of walkers, and in particular because the walkers had the opportunity to spend time with the children who were the beneficiaries of the fundraising. Meeting with these children was the highlight of the trip, and at her wonderful Nosh 'n' Drosh account of the trek, Gaby made it clear to us just how heart-warming it was to see what a difference could be made in the lives of these children who lived with some highly challenging physical and mental disabilities.

The next JCD trek will be around the scenic hills of Jerusalem and will take place 3-7 November this year. These dates include two travel days and three days of walking. Participants will walk along the historical Burma Road, pass springs including the Limor Spring, and visit the National Park Sataf, ending the trip in Jerusalem.

Gaby would be delighted if other LJS members wanted to participate in this next walk, the preparation for which – both walking and getting to know one's fellow walkers – will begin in September. A reasonable degree of fitness is required as walkers are expected to cover about 20 kms a day. Prospective walkers should also note that apart from a £350.00 non-refundable deposit, there is a minimum sponsorship of £1,750 which covers all costs (flights, accommodation, guides, meals and a celebratory last night in Jerusalem). This means that if participants wish to self-fund to cover all costs (which in turn means all the sponsorship money raised goes direct to the charity), a personal contribution of £2,100 is required.

Although this is a substantial outlay, listening to Gaby and watching the inspiring 8-minute film (on the JCD website), there was no doubt that this was a truly special and worthwhile experience. For more details please look at the JCD website <https://jcd.uk.com/> or contact Gaby on: gaby.lazarus@jcd.uk.com

RESTAURANT TUESDAY – mitzvah opportunity!

This popular informal lunch club for the more elderly members of the LJS has been re-styled and is all set up and ready to go. But we urgently need volunteers to help serve meals and support some of our frailer diners. The work is not onerous, involves no actual cooking, and is very rewarding. Helpers are needed 11.30am-2.30pm on the third Tuesday of each month – but it doesn't have to be every month. Please email communitycare@ljs.org to help us get Restaurant Tuesday back up and running.
