Relax, it's Cheshvan!

by Cory Weiss
Rabbi

Maybe you don't celebrate Rosh Chodesh Cheshvan, but most rabbis do. Cheshvan is the only Jewish month with no holidays! After making it through all of Tishrei and its many chagim, it's nice to get back to routine. And that means "normal" Shabbats, B'nai Mitzvah ceremonies, more time for study, and the return of Lunch and Learn. Not that anything this year has been "normal," but we've worked hard to keep our synagogue routines going to the best of our abilities. Sadly, there is no Interfaith Clergy Curling on the horizon—another bonus that usually starts in Cheshvan.

Originally, the month was called Marcheshvan, from the Akkadian for "eighth month." At some point the 'mar' dropped off, but that didn't stop the rabbis from interpreting the 'mar' as "bitter" (as in maror), since there was nothing to celebrate during the month. I'm guessing they didn't have to write as many sermons as I did for Tishrei!

It's refreshing to get back to normal routines during Cheshvan, and at Temple Har Zion, there's still plenty going on, most of it happening virtually. Lunch and Learn continues every Thursday at noon; Torah Study meets every Shabbat at 9 a.m.; yoga is still happening; Brotherhood and Sisterhood are meeting; worship happens on Sunday at 9 a.m., Tuesday and Thursday at 7:15 a.m., and on Shabbat, which is now open to limited in-person attendance on Friday evenings. Please register and join us in the sanctuary if you're comfortable with doing so.

Now that Cheshvan is here, why not find your routine? Make following the Jewish calendar and involving yourself in something Jewishly new a part of that routine. Take a look at the Torah portion for each week. Come to one virtual event you haven't tried before. Make Havdalah at home. Say a blessing before a meal. My old middle school teacher, Wendell Stickney, alav hashalom, used to say, "If you do it three times, it's a habit." Try and create a new Jewish habit in Cheshvan. After all, there's no holidays to get ready for, and no big sermons to write!

L'Shalom,
Rabbi Cory Weiss

Diversity and unconscious bias: The Jewish history

by Gwen Yacht

Join us on Thursday, November. 26, at 7:30 p.m. on Zoom for a very special and thought-provoking program.

Over the past months, we have experienced the anxiety of an historic pandemic and witnessed racial tensions. We are living through interesting times. Our Temple community has risen to the challenges, praying together and supporting each other. As always, there is more work to be done.

Our congregation includes members of various skin tones, body structures, hair types, accents, gender alignment, ages, and physical abilities. Not everyone has felt the same degree of acceptance and welcome. There has been a call for Allyship from GTA Jews of colour. What does allyship even mean Is there any such thing as race or even colour?

A long-time Temple Har Zion family with two generations of children educated at our school , has felt , with a sense of discomfort , that as a family they were not fully included in the social community life of our Temple . How many others have felt this way? Have we been and are we being welcoming enough to the diverse membership of our congregation?

The heightened tension in the world right now with respect to racial injustice and equality has focussed on Black Lives matter and other antiracist movements. Hopefully, we can come to a better understanding by discussing tough questions with open minds.

We have embarked on a new year, 5781, and we begin by educating ourselves about the experiences of three of our members. A panel including Sheron Forbes, Shirley Kehimkar and Evelyn Krakauer, assisted by Rabbi Weiss, will discuss their personal experiences with diversity.

Let us grow in strength as a community that embraces inclusion, equality, awareness and caring. "Let justice flow as a mighty stream."

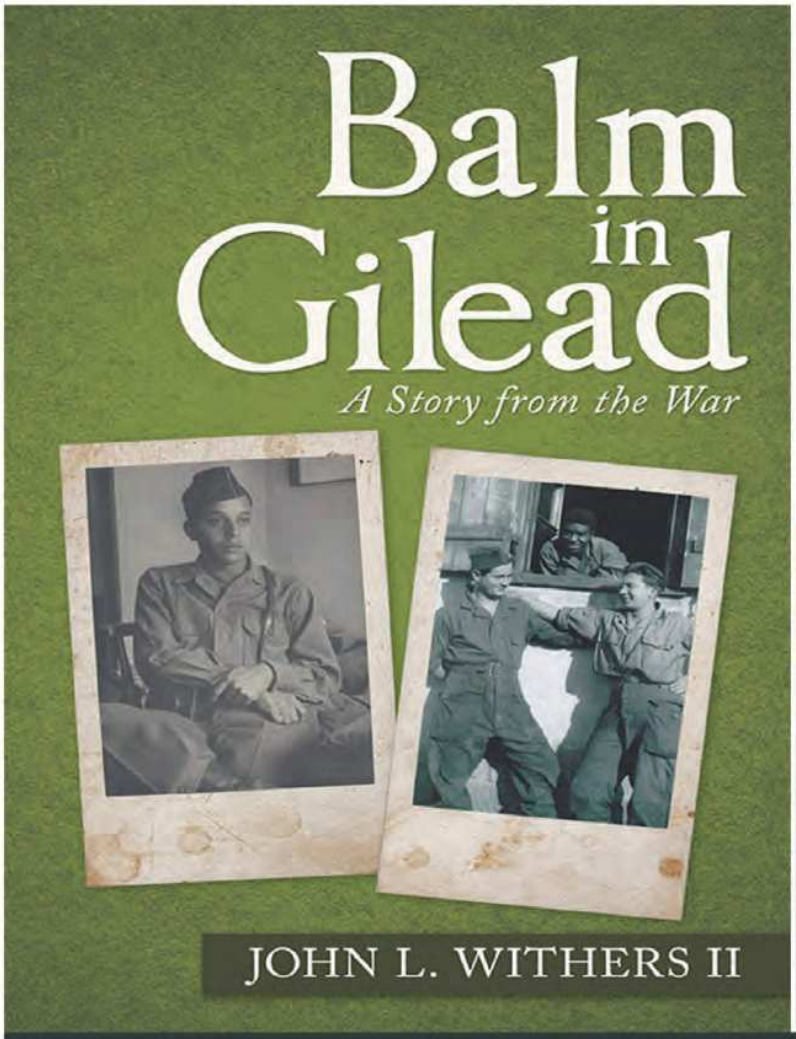
HOLOCAUST EDUCATION



On the seventy-fifth anniversary of Dachau's liberation, the author has not only resurrected a moving tale of past friendship but a parable of human compassion that holds enduring lessons for today.

Balm in Gilead traces John L. Withers II's prolonged search for the roots of his father's story — a search that one day, miraculously, ended with the old friends finding each other again.

Please join us, together with special guests
