

Meredith Fontecchio

Meredith has nearly 20 years of experience working in both the nonprofit and private sectors. Meredith has recently joined her father to manage and expand her family's real estate business with a portfolio comprised primarily of residential holdings in New York City. Prior to that, Meredith spent 13 years at Deloitte as a Senior Manager in the firm's National Corporate Citizenship department. She helped launch and execute the marquee pro bono program, providing $100M worth of pro bono services to 300 + nonprofits under her leadership. She also designed, developed and activated RightStep, Deloitte's commitment to helping low-income students prepare for college. Prior to joining Deloitte, she managed corporate, foundation and government fundraising for an international student exchange organization. Previously, she held various positions in the media and entertainment industry. She worked in production and development for Spike TV, an entity of MTV Networks, and launched her career as an NBC page in New York. Meredith graduated with a BA in American Studies from Cornell University. She lives with her husband and three children.
