D'var Torah by Rabbi Halpern

Jill, the manager of the local branch of an international corporation, was facing an internal audit, which caused her some stress and, surprisingly, a great deal of optimism.

Jill's parent company believed in decentralized control, empowering each branch manager to run the business as they saw fit. With complete independence comes full responsibility, and while that typically held for Jill as well, once a year, things changed considerably. Along with auditors, HQ would send a team of world-class experts in HR, finance, and R&D. True, the HQ team would find the holes in Jill's operation, but they also brought along the resources needed to help conquer her challenges.

Jill embraced the yearly audits, but her colleague Jack saw things differently. Where Jill saw an opportunity for growth, Jack saw a threat to his autonomy. He dreaded the yearly visits and did his best to hamper the HQ team's efforts. Not surprisingly, Jill's branch flourished while Jack's floundered.

As individuals, not unlike Jack and Jill, the business managers, we have incredible freedom of choice. Man, from among all plants, planets, animals, and angels, is the only being with free will. "Between stimulus and response, there is a space. In that space is our power to choose our response. In our response lies our growth and freedom (Stephen R. Covey)."

Our freedom to choose is where the rubber of human greatness meets the road of life. Our choices may not determine our circumstances, but they define the person we become. If we live with courage, honesty, and empathy, we become great people, but if we act on our impulses of anger, jealousy, and desire, then we lose touch with our inner greatness.

All year, we operate with independent free will. But once a year, during the holy days of Rosh Hashanah, we receive a visit from the ultimate HQ, Hashem, our King. Are we ready for Him? Are our books in order? Have we written next year's business plan? Where are we going to hide all our issues?

Let's stop for a moment and think like our friend Jill. Hashem wants us to succeed; His visit is for our benefit. All our challenges are indeed problems when we deal with them ourselves. But when we introduce Hashem into the picture, things change dramatically for the better.

The visit from HQ reminds the manager that her little corner shop is part of a business empire — "there's a bigger picture, and I'm an integral part of it. My success isn't only about me."

Maharal explains that along with the judgment of Rosh Hashanah comes incredible holiness. On this holy day, we have a heightened awareness that Hashem is our King. And the world is more sacred when we focus on our Source — Hashem.

Rosh Hashanah ushers in an intense period, but there are two very different ways to approach the intensity: We can deny that business isn't as usual or embrace the opportunity to clarify who we are and why we are here.

The scrutiny is frightening. But when we see Hashem's arrival for the incredible opportunity that it is, the scrutiny changes from harshness to love — a chance for us to honestly see where we're lacking and ask Hashem, our loving and Omnipotent Father, to provide us with all that we need to succeed.

On Rosh Hashanah, we have one task: Stand before Hashem. Let's embrace the encounter for the incredible gift that it is.

Important Laws for when Rosh Hashanah falls out on Shabbat

- Candle lighting for Shabbat must be done at the usual Friday evening time (6:50 pm).
- Cooking can not be done on Shabbat.
- There is no shofar blowing on Shabbat.
- Avinu Malkeinu is not recited on Shabbat.
- Seuda Shlishit should be eaten on Shabbat/1st day Rosh Hashanah. The preference is to eat it by 5:13 pm.
- No prep can be done on Shabbat for the Yom Tov, therefore one must wait for the zman to begin preparing for 2nd night of Yom Tov. For example, the candles can only be lit after the zman and food can only be heated after the zman.
- Before doing Yom Tov prep Saturday night, if one hasn't heard kiddush/havdala, one must say "Baruch Hmavdil bein Kodesh l'kodesh"
- Tashlich is said on the 2nd day, or anytime until Hoshana Rabba.

This Week in Jewish History

1 Tishrei

Sarah, Rachel, Chana each prayed for offspring and were answered favorably on Rosh HaShana.

Abraham's supreme test of faith - his binding of Isaac in preparation to sacrifice him as per G-d's command - occurred in the year 2084 from creation (1677 BCE), and is recalled each Rosh Hashanah with the sounding of the shofar (ram's horn - a ram was sacrificed in Isaac's stead when an angel revealed that the command to sacrifice Isaac was but a divine test); the Torah's account of the event is publicly read in the synagogue on the 2nd day of Rosh Hashanah. On the day of Isaac's binding, his mother, Sarah, passed away at age 127, and was subsequently buried in the Machpelah Cave in Hebron.

4 Tishrei

First Jewish congregation established in Stockholm, Sweden, 1775.
