I must admit that as we celebrate Shmini Atzeret and Simchat Torah I am tinged with sadness at the conclusion of the Tishrei holidays season. It is an emotion that I remember feeling even when I was a child. The end of Pesach is also a let-down, after the preparations and the celebration of the 8-day holiday. But Pesach leads straight into the Omer, which takes us through the subsequent 7 weeks until Shavuot, stopping along the way for Yom Haatzmaut, Lag B’Omer and Yom Yerushalayim. Shavuot means the end of the school year, an exciting time for kids and parents as summer vacation plans take shape. After Simchat Torah, we have to wait close to 6 months before the next Chag, and two months before Chanukah. I’m sure this melancholy I recall from childhood was partly a reflection of the meteorological realities. The end of Sukkot in New England meant the onset of colder and shorter days. In Florida we get more sunlight and more sunshine (and almost no change in seasons). And yet I still feel that tinge of sadness, especially as I daven Mincha on Simchat Torah (the last Festival Amidah until Spring).

But then I remember one teaching and one story. First the teaching: Targum Yonatan Ben Uziel in Parashat Pinchas explains the significance of Shmini Atzeret as follows: “On the eighth day you shall gather in joy as you leave your sukka and return to your home.” The month of Tishrei is non-stop avenues of inspiration. From Rosh Hashanah to Aseret Ymei Teshuva to preparing for Sukkot to Sukkot, Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah. It’s exhilarating. It’s inspirational. It can be exhausting and fun and meaningful all at the same time. It’s also not “real life” in the sense that we are not meant to live lives of 12 Tishrei’s per year. After the holidays we must go back to full weeks of work and school. But we must be sure to take the inspiration of Tishrei with us into the New Year. That’s the goal of Shemini Atzeret. Take a day (or two) to absorb the season and consider ways in which that growth can stay with us into the upcoming month of Cheshvan and beyond. We celebrate Simchat Torah as part of this reflection. If we want to live Tishrei lives even as we return to our homes, then Torah learning, Torah values and Torah living must be made a priority. Here are some practical ways to do so for your consideration:

Attend minyan more regularly: Communal prayer can completely change your relationship with prayer for the better. Whether this means attending more often on Sundays, Friday nights, Shabbat afternoons, weekday mornings and evening- be a part of our Minyan Campaign. You’ll be glad you did.

Make Torah study a part of your daily routine. Whether it’s attending a shiur in person, or listening / watching a shiur online or signing up for Torah E-mails/ WhatsApp groups. Torah has never been more accessible. And it is a crucial element in nurturing our souls.

Find ways to help people/ make life better for others: Volunteer for Bikur Cholim. Attend a Feed the Homeless program on a Sunday. Hlep a neighbor or friend. Contribute to the Young Israel Charity Fund. Be nicer to your friends and family. Smile more.

The common theme among all of these suggestions is that our shul can help facilitate these opportunities. And so my last suggestion is: Get More Involved in Our Shul. Attend a program. Join a Committee. Chair or Sponsor or Host an event. It will be a mutually beneficial experience for both the shul and you.

And now the story. It was common for Chasidim to spend Tishrei with their Rebbe. One year on Simchat Torah afternoon the Rebbe noticed that his Chasidim were sad. He understood it was because the holidays were coming to a close and they were sad to take leave of their teacher. After Mincha the Rebbe banged on his podium and announced for all to hear: “The God of Ata Bechartanu (“You have chosen us” – a phrase from the festival Amida – Artscroll pg 662) is the same God as Ata Chanantanu (“You have graced us with intelligence”) a phrase from the Havdalah paragraph, indicating the conclusion of Shabbat/ Yom Tov that we recite in the first weekday – Artscroll pg 268). Let us utilize Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah in a constructive fashion so that the spirituality and growth that we experienced during Tishrei remains with us in the days and months ahead.

D’var Torah : Rabbi Yosef Weinstock

An insight from the Machzor to help enhance our prayer experience

“Blessed are You Hashem, for You alone do we serve with awe.”

(Chazzan’s Repetition, Yom Tov Mussaf- Artscroll pg. 692)

The word “alone” seems to be superfluous. For we know from the Torah (Devarim 4) “there is no other besides for Hashem.” Furthermore, the Talmud (Sotah 31a) taught that serving God out of love is a greater level than serving God out of awe. That being the case, why don’t we end the blessing with a reference to service with love?

Rabbi Baruch HaLevi Epstein suggests that we can answer both questions with the Mishna in Pirkei Avot (3:6, Artscroll Siddur pg 559): “Whoever takes upon him/herself the yoke of Torah, the yoke of government will be removed.” In other words, if we commit to Hashem as our Master, we no longer need to worry about any human masters, including kings and government officials. When it comes to human masters, the only service is one out of awe/fear. In this blessing we hope that we will be able to avoid serving human masters, and only serve Hashem. In this equation it only makes sense to “serve with awe”.

This can also explain the usage of the word “alone” in the blessing. Our hope is that we never have to serve human masters; rather we hope to be able to focus all of our talents and energy in service to the one and only Lord, Hashem.

Big Sh’bang (Simchat Beit Hashoevah)

Zablotsky Herring Kiddush

We are dedicating the Kiddush today in memory of Shlomo Hochbaum. In addition, we are renaming the Kol Hanearim Chupah to the Shlomo Hochbaum Chupah. Many of our newer members never met Shlomo but we have all benefited from his involvement with our Shul. He led by example. In 2002 when the Men's Club was about to disband, he agreed to be president in order to keep it going. He started new events and got others involved and the Brotherhood is now an internal part of our Shul. Shlomo came up with the idea of creating a Kol Hanearim Chupah which he had made with the original names silk screened onto the Chupah. He never stopped trying to improve upon the Chupah. When we were having difficulty adding names he came up with the high quality iron-on method we now use. He also came up with the Kol Hanearim Children's Fund to buy clothes for children during the holidays. Although Shlomo is not here with us, his ideas and creations have continued to enhance our lives.

Israel Strikes Iranian Arms Shipment at Damascus Airport

Israeli missiles are suspected to have struck an Iranian arms shipment at Damascus airport late Saturday, the latest in a string of attacks aimed at eroding Tehran’s military foothold in Syria, The Wall Street Journal reported. […] Israel has watched with concern as Iran has entrenched itself deeper in Syria on the back of its support for the regime of President Bashar al-Assad, which has reclaimed most of the territory once held by antigovernment rebels. Over the past year, Israel has sharply increased airstrikes against Iranian assets in Syria, striking targets from its own border area to the far eastern part of the country to neighborhoods near the capital, Damascus. Saturday’s strike seemingly targeted a warehouse and a recently arrived arms shipment from Iran to the Lebanese Hezbollah militia, according to the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, a U.K.-based monitoring group, which said the launched missiles were likely Israeli. According to a news report by the Israeli Hadashot TV Sunday morning, the strike also hit an Iranian cargo plane loaded with weapons, which had recently landed at Damascus International Airport from Tehran.
