8:21pm Shabbat ends
It is with great excitement that we announce the visit of our next finalist for the newly-created Associate Rabbi position.

Next Shabbat, April 16-18, Rabbi Gideon Black, and his wife Aliza, will visit our community. A full schedule of events will be emailed to the community next week.

Rabbi Gideon Black is the Director of Professional Recruitment and Leadership Development for OU-JLIC, where he hires and mentors rabbinic couples on college campuses across North America & Israel. Previously he served as the OU-JLIC Rabbi at New York University from 2011 to 2015. Rabbi Black received a law degree from University College London, a Masters in Jewish Philosophy from YU’s Bernard Revel Graduate School and Semikha from RIETS. As part of his pulpit training, Rabbi Black served as a rabbinic intern in Charleston, SC, at Manhattan Jewish Experience and the Riverdale Jewish Center. In Israel, he studied at Yeshivat Har Etzion and the Gruss Kollel. Rabbi Black is married to Aliza, a Physician Assistant, and they are the proud parents of Judah (10), Natan (7), Maya (5), and Asher (1).

In Memory of Alcee Hastings

I went to lobby Alcee Hastings decades ago with my son Dani. He immediately dismissed his legislative aide, which was a good sign because it meant that he was confident in talking to us alone about Israel. He said “I am a bigger ‘Likudnick’ than Sharon. If the Israelis give back any part of the Golan, they don’t deserve to have the country.” His pro-Israel stance was directly attributed to our then congressman Peter Deutsch who personally took Alcee to visit Israel. He was a true friend, and will be missed.

Nesiat Kapayim: Priestly blessing

In Parshat Shemini we read (9:22)
וַיִּשָּׂ֨א אַַֽהֲר ֹ֧ון אֶת־יָדָָ֛יו אֶל־הָעָָ֖ם וַיְבַָֽרֲכ ֵ֑ם
And Aharon lifted up his hands towards the people and blessed them

Rashi explained that the blessing offered by Aharon to the people was the Birkat Kohanim. The Talmud in Sotah (38a) learns from here that a Kohen must raise his hands while offering the blessing. This is why Birkat Kohanim is also referred to as “Nesiat Kapayim”, literally “the lifting of the hands”. Perhaps this posture is meant to highlight the role of Kohen as “the middle man” between these Divine blessings and the Jewish People. The Kohen is not the source of the blessings. Rather he has been empowered by Hashem to convey these blessings to the Jewish People.

The Chasam Sofer (in Parshat Nasso) writes that the three-part Priestly Blessing includes all the material blessings one can possibly achieve in this world. The first verse, “May G-d bless you”, is a blessing that we should have great wealth and prosperity, as well as protection from harm to us and our possessions. Yet sometimes, due to our enhanced wealth, we might arouse envy and hatred from our family, friends and neighbors. Therefore, the second verse, which speaks of G-d’s granting us grace, is a blessing that we should find favor and grace in the eyes of all those around us. Yet sometimes, even when we are not hounded by others, we are not inwardly happy and content, as we always seem to want more and more money and possessions. So along comes the third and final verse, which is a blessing that G-d should grant us inner peace and contentment.
Humble Hounds and Boardroom Lions

A few years ago in a column in the New York Times, David Brooks suggested that there are two models of leadership: boardroom lions and humble hounds.

Boardroom lions are super confident, forceful and charismatic. They tend to be mavericks, always calling for serious and systemic change. These characteristics can be quite useful for leaders, whether in business or politics, or even one’s personal life. Yet research shows that these types of leaders can also be risky. Their confidence, coupled with a propensity towards change, can create achievements that are either fabulously successful or dismally miss their mark.

Brooks contrasts the boardroom lion with what he terms the humble hound model of leadership. Humble hounds are less interested in their achievements and more interested in looking ahead for any weaknesses and areas of potential improvement. They are more likely to make calculated, less-sweeping changes and only after consultation with others. They depend more on team efforts, and are not interested in highlighting personal achievement. Jim Collins, author of the book How the Mighty Fall sums up the character of humble hounds as, “extreme personal humility with intense professional will.”

In Pasuk Vav, Moshe says to Aharon: Kerav El Hamizbeiach “Come close to the Altar to perform your sacrificial service.” The Midrash picks up on the word “come near” and notes Aharon’s hesitance. He was ashamed to take on his role as Kohen due to his involvement with the Golden Calf. Only after being encouraged by Moshe does Aharon take up his priestly place.

Moshe and Aharon are prime examples of the humble hound school of leadership. By the Torah’s own account, Moshe was the most humble of all men. In Parshat Shemini he demonstrates this humility by deferring to Aharon to take over in the Mishkan. When his words go unheeded, he is willing to respectfully listen to his brother explain his logic. And when Aharon’s logic is convincing, not only is Moshe willing to admit his mistake but Vayitav B’einav- he is willing to do so happily, without any hard feelings whatsoever. (In this week’s Parsha we also see Aharon’s humility up close. He is willing to face the consequences of his involvement in the Golden Calf episode. This is beside the fact that his entire life he was willing to serve a secondary role to his younger brother Moshe.)

Whereas Moshe and Aharon are models of humble hound leadership, Nadav and Avihu were boardroom lions. They were intent on systemic change. According to rabbinic tradition, Nadav and Avihu would talk amongst themselves and ask concerning Moshe and Aharon, “When will these old men pass on so that we will become the new leaders of the nation?” Their fatal flaw was their arrogance. Rashi quotes the opinion that their sin was Shehoru Halacha Bifnei Moshe Raban. “They did not show Moshe the deference that he deserved. Perhaps the clearest example of their arrogance emerges from the opinion in the Medrash that Nadav and Avihu never married. According to Medrash Rabba:

They were conceited, many woman awaited them eagerly (to marry them) but what did they say? “Our uncle is king, our other uncle is a head of a tribe, our father is High Priest, we are his two assistants. What woman is worthy of us?”

The deaths of Nadav and Avihu remind us of the challenges inherent in leadership and the danger that exists with arrogance. If Moshe and Aharon were willing to reassess and reevaluate their actions then all of us must be willing to do so as well, as individuals and as a community.

China, With $400 Billion Iran Deal, Could Deepen Influence in the Middle East

China is buying record volumes of Iranian oil. The countries signed a sweeping pact that calls for heavy Chinese investments in Iran over 25 years in exchange for oil. The deal could deepen China’s influence in the Middle East. China’s economic lifeline to Iran undermines American diplomatic efforts, rewards the regime’s aggression, and makes a good nuclear deal harder to achieve. As the United States presses China on human rights, Hong Kong, trade, and a host of other issues, Beijing is using trade and investment with Iran to push back against America. U.S. leadership remains vital to enforce sanctions on those Chinese companies involved with these purchases, including energy, storage and shipping companies, as well as banks, insurance firms and ports.
