WHAT SHABBAT MEANS TO ME

Rochelle Schumer

I would like to share with you the very special new dimension that Shabbat has added to my life.

I own an executive search business and work 12 to 14 hours a day. But on Friday nights, as sundown approaches, I so look forward to stopping work to light my Shabbat candles. An aura of peace comes over me, like I've never known before. And for 25 hours, I have no stress. My computer is shut off, as are my phones, and I focus only on Shabbat. It is truly wonderful to have a day off!

One of my earliest and fondest memories of my childhood is that of my Bobba lighting "Shabbos candles." She would put a napkin on her head, and with her arms she would embrace the light from the candles, then she would cover her eyes and say the Shabbat prayer. As she opened her eyes, she had a special glow around her. Even now, when I light my candles, I feel her presence. And as I circle my arms around the candles, I feel that I am embracing her soul into my heart. "L'dor Va'dor," from generation to generation—by lighting candles, we protect this chain. We are the carriers of wisdom, not the first and not the last.

My Bobba would be proud!

Lighting candles is just the start. I love Shabbat so much, that on Fridays I often ask myself, "Is it dark yet, is it time for Shabbat?" I look forward with great anticipation to all of it: shutting down my office, cooking my chicken, lighting my candles and having my Shabbat wine. I love going to Shul to welcome the "Shabbat bride." On Shabbat day, I love attending Beginners Services with Rabbi Buchwald. This takes my mind off the pressures of work and family. Many of us exercise and go to the gym to relieve the stress and tension of our daily lives. Ask yourself, how many things in your life give you that release? For me, Shabbat is number one!

How special I feel when I light my candles! Thank you G-d for giving us this one day of rest and thank you Rabbi Buchwald for inspiring me to attend Shul and for sharing your passion for Judaism. No one reads and explains Torah like you do!

What does Shabbat mean to me? Peace. Serenity. Memories of the past and hope for the future. As the flames from the candles glow, a sense of pride comes over me. I did that. I made the lights of these candles dance.
