TRANFORMATIONS

by Nancy Jacobs

When I was asked to write an article on "transformations", it struck me as an odd word. "Transformation" was the word they used to kick around at EST seminars. It was the promise you could buy for $750 and a weekend.

my experience of Judaism has been anything but a "quick fix" to life's problems or questions. At its base, Judaism, religious practice learning have given something nothing else ever has -- a context to become who I really am, a Jewish Woman. It has given my life a structure, so that don't feel like I need to re-invent the wheel every day. There has been a growing selfconfidence which I've obtained by being part of community.

I came from a dysfunctional home. Therefore, it was often incredible, and at times overwhelming, for me to learn and observe the Shabbat rituals of love for family and children. But I now know that there are different role models from which I can choose, when, G-d willing, I create my own family. My friends say that I have more peacefulness about me. I just think I'm less scared. My life and all its blessing are very real for me now, I don't feel like a house of cards. I feel supported by G-d and by community.

Sometimes all the feelings are hard to process. They can be quite painful. But I never feel that it is pain without purpose. To the contrary, I always feel, literally, as if they are growing pains.

A lot of external things have changed over the past few years. My business, thank G-d, is doing well. And most importantly, I have created a beautiful home across the street from the Shul! I am more at home in the world since I have found a home as a Jew, and a place to explore my relationship with G-d.

It has been a "transformation," a slow growing process which has left me much richer than I ever imagined possible.
