D'var Echod B'lev Echod

Insights into the weekly Parsha and other matters at the heart of the LSS community

11 Cheshvan 5777 • November 11-12, 2016

Parshat Lech Lecha

By: Gidi Grinsten

The first three psukim of Lech Lecha seed the four founding narratives of the Jewish People, which have shaped the collective and individual outlooks of Jews of all generations and across a full spectrum of religious and political outlooks. The text reads: "And the Lord said to Abram, 'Go forth from your land and from your birthplace and from your father's house, to the land that I will show you; And I will make you into a great nation, and I will bless you, and I will aggrandize your name, and [you shall] be a blessing; ... and all the families of the earth shall be blessed in you.'" (Bereshit, 12:1-3)

The first founding narrative is about faith and covenant. It establishes Abraham and his descendants as a religious community, collectively and individually sanctified by a unique relationship with God. It tells the story of Abram's utter faith and absolute obedience, initially by leaving his land and the house of his father, and later by his willingness to make the ultimate sacrifice of his only son Isaac.

The second story is the story of nationhood: it is about a special association with a specific place on the face of this earth, which is the Land of Yisrael. This is the beginning of the millennia-long Hebrew and Jewish story of uninterrupted association and right to that land; of unquestioned loyalty to it, in spite of hunger and other difficulties; of the quest for ownership, sovereignty and control of it; and of a recurring story of exile from it and a triumphant return to it. The Parsha not only articulates the promise to Abraham to inherit the land for all generations, but also elaborates on the physical journey from its North to its South.

The third story which is seeded in Lech Lecha is the story of Jewish peoplehood. It is a story about Jews as a family and a tribe, with shared history and shared destiny, whose connectedness transcends religious, cultural, geographic or political differences.

The fourth founding story – emanating from the pasuk: "all the families of the earth shall be blessed in you" – introduced the notion that the Jewish People will have a special mission in humanity, from a permanent condition of otherness. This idea will evolve into our eternal mission to be a light unto the nations, to repair the world in the kingdom of God and to be a "chosen people" (Am Segula).

Each of these stories will develop into a rich coherent narrative, which is rooted in distinct Jewish symbols, heritages, rituals, texts and holidays. Examples are countless: in Yom Kippur, when we enumerate our sins in plural, we not only re-accept the sovereignty of God as individuals, but we also establish that we stand before Him together as a people. Hence, in this very act we enshrine both the stories of faith and covenant, as well as of peoplehood. Sukkoth, Pesach and Shavuot are holidays that are celebrated according to their seasons in the Land of Israel, hence anchoring the story of nationhood. The Exodus of the Israelites from Egypt and their journey to the Land of Israel is about coming together as a people, returning to the ancestral land, accepting the Torah and offering a new vision to humanity. In 1948, the 1,100-word Declaration of Independence of the State of Israel also merges these four narratives within one cohesive constitutional text, as does the Jewish vision of Achrit HaYamim.

These founding stories have very concrete manifestations in our present Jewish life. It is the story of peoplehood that launched the global Jewish community and the State of Israel to cry 'Let My People Go' toward the Soviet Empire of Evil, and to mobilize for Ethiopian Jewry. And one could easily make the case that UJA Federation of NY, Jewish National Fund, American Jewish World Service or Aish HaTorah, are each rooted in a different founding story.

These four narratives are like four different prisms that help Jews understand their condition and direction. So, when a peoplehood-Jew asks: "Is it good for the Jews?" he or she means: will Jews around the world be safer or not? When a faith-Jew asks that same question, he or she probably means: what will happen to the world of Torah? Meanwhile, for a nationhood Jew, that question would probably mean: Is it good for Israel? And a tikkun-olam Jew would probably ponder whether Jews have acted ethically and thereby provided an inspiring model to humanity.

Together, the four stories serve as a sophisticated and vital survival mechanism. As our world evolves at an ever-growing pace, it is increasingly difficult to assess whether any specific development is good or bad. Therefore, those communities that are equipped with the mechanisms to appreciate their condition and direction are much better set to survive and thrive. The delicate interplay among these four stories is one of the most sophisticated mechanisms that the Jewish People has to do so, emanating directly from the first psukim of Lech Lecha.
