ISRAELUPDATE

Death Toll in Egypt Raids Climbs to 525

August 16, 2013

The death toll from Egypt's bloody crackdown on supporters of the deposed president, Mohamed Morsi, soared beyond 500 across the country with over 3,700 people injured, the Health Ministry said, in a further sign of the extent and the ferocity of an earlier assault by security forces to raze two pro-Morsi protest camps in Cairo. This attack, the third mass killing of Islamist demonstrators since the overthrow, followed a series of government threats, lasting more than 12 hours, with armored vehicles, bulldozers, tear gas, birdshot, live ammunition and snipers. Despite the growing tally of dead, Muslim Brotherhood supporters of Morsi urged followers to take to the streets a day after the assault. This set off a violent backlash across Egypt and underscored the new government's determination to crush the Islamists.
