

From Rabbi Chaitovsky

Hello everyone! We cannot help but be moved by the legitimate and peaceful protesting taking place around the country and around the world in the aftermath of the senseless, cruel killing of George Floyd, an African American, at the hands of a white, now disgraced, former police officer (and his associates). You can read a statement by the Orthodox Union, below, that summarizes our dismay, our support and our hopes moving forward. Here is a link to a video dvar for this week's Torah portion, Naso, which features two people - the Kohen and the Nazir - who are especially sensitive to holiness, spirituality, and closeness to God. Watch the video to learn how both strive for holiness, but in opposite ways. In the context of all that is going on around us, I think the Torah might be telling us which approach it actually prefers.

I have also linked some interesting reading material. There is an article about a group of refugee women in Israel bringing a little color and joy to the masks we need to wear, an article about clergy "front line" workers and even a little summer eating information about a little umami sauce that you can make that you will be putting on everything.

Of course, we are delighted that our morning minyan will start again this Sunday, another small but mighty step towards a complete opening at some point in the future.

Shabbat Shalom!

Rabbi Chaitovsky

Be Prepared to Be Amazed!

Alain Nu, "The Man Who Knows," is an international performance artist and an entertaining man of mystery. He is a mindreader, a visionary of the future, and a "you have to see it to believe it" sort of guy. He has starred in his own four part mini-series for the TLC network, "The Mysterious World Of Alain Nu," and has authored two books ("State Of Mind" and "Picture Your ESP") available on Amazon. Highlights of his career include headlining at theaters, casinos such as Caesars Palace Las Vegas, and the Norwegian Getaway cruise ship. Nu has performed for presidents (including both of Barrack Obama's Inaugural Balls), politicians, princes, princesses and other ambassadors/world leaders. Most recently, Nu is a headliner at the OYO Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas (temporarily on hiatus during the pandemic shutdown).

Be amazed by Alain Nu virtually, via the Zoom platform, and experience a show specifically designed to illustrate how connected we are despite the current circumstances. Minds will be read, futures foretold, synchronicities revealed! You might even find yourself bending one of your own kitchen spoons.
