FROM RABBI JANA...

LAZY, HAZY, CRAZY DAYS OF SUMMER

Y'all know that I am a Yankee. I was born and raised in New York state. You have heard me say that as much there is a lot that I love about living here in the deep south, I miss having four seasons. I miss watching the leisurely change of foliage in the fall. I actually miss the special silence after a newly fallen snow covers everything. I have mixed feelings about summer. On one hand, none of the places where my family lived had air conditioning. Having fans blow hot air around never made me feel cooler. In Shreveport the heat is... really hot. I really appreciate having air conditioning everywhere. Summer heat seems to last way longer here than what I was taught was supposed to be the duration of a season. Sometimes I realize that I swapped one difficult season: winter, for another one: summer. I remember having to brace myself in the winter just to open the door to go outside. The cold would hit hard as soon as the door was open, and it would painfully follow you everywhere you went while you were outside. It made it difficult to breathe (although it was kind of fun to exhale "clouds" with every breath - until it fogged up your glasses so that you couldn't see). I realized that it is a lot like when I open the door here in the summer - The heat hits hard as soon as I open the door, and it painfully follows everywhere I go while I am outside. Breathing is difficult in the heat, but instead of breathing clouds, I sweat rivers.

Some people are outdoor kinds of people. In the winter they would look forward to waking up early to be in the freezing weather so that they could ski. In the summer, they look forward to swimming all day. I look forward to the indoor things that the seasons encourage: like reading by a fire in the cold of winter, or relaxing and sipping iced tea in the heat of summer.

I realized that part of why I love the seasons is that they are moments in time when I am aware of what is around me. I stop to appreciate the awesome wonders that exist in the world. All of my senses participate.

If you get a chance to take a break during the summer: whether it is a vacation to somewhere else, or just a moment to sit and sip something refreshing, perhaps it can remind you that in some ways, that is what Shabbat is supposed to be for us every week. Each week we are supposed to take a vacation from the every day stuff, and appreciate what it is to just breathe the air - whether it is hot or cold. We should look around us and appreciate the wonders of the world, and be grateful for friends and family. When you come to B'nai Zion on Shabbat, it makes it easier to experience a mini-vacation. It could be that you join us on Friday evening, when you sit in our comfortable sanctuary, surrounded by friendly people, and then enjoy something refreshing before you leave. If you join us on Saturday morning, you sit around a table enjoying refreshments and friendly people who are being inspired and inspiring each other. Shabbat experiences help to refresh you for the rest of the week.

Summertime can feel like a long, extended Shabbat. Even when it is really hot.

One of the conversations I often have with people during a surprise encounter when we are out and about is that they would be happy to see me, but then "confess" that they haven't been a "good Jew" because they haven't come to services. I always say that coming to services is not necessary for being a "good Jew." There are so many things that we do in our lives to (as I always say) take care of ourselves, take care of each other, and take care of this world, that don't include going to services, that I think are part of what makes us "good Jews." Perhaps I should add that coming to services is not a requirement, but it enhances all of the other things we do to be good people. The prayers remind us to think about where we have been, who we are connected to, what is important to us - whether it is appreciating the world around us, wanting ideas about how to make the world a better place, connecting to other people in meaningful ways, or giving us moments of nostalgia and hope for the future.

Air conditioning makes the hot days and nights enjoyable. B'nai Zion can be your soul-conditioner. During the summer, enjoy the longer Shabbat days. Take time to refresh your soul. I hope to see you soon.

Bivrakha (with blessing),

Rabbi Dr. Jana De Benedetti

From our President, Jon Black

Some of you care about the education of our students, and the future of Judaism. Please serve on the Education committee. Some of you are great at making new people feel welcome, and finding ways to get people together. Please serve on the Membership committee. Some of you care about the history of the congregation. Please serve on the Cemetery committee. These are just a few examples of the kinds of things that you already care about, and where we need you. Please contact Rabbi Jana, me or the office if you want to help our congregation, or want to suggest someone who may be a good person to help us.

I know that every congregant has something wonderful to contribute to the wellbeing of our congregation. Now is the time to decide what that is for you, and help enrich B'nai Zion.

This month we will have Shabbat services that end way before it gets dark, which means that we hope to see you at services and programs during the summer.

From our Education Director, Barbara Joseph

I recently returned from the Institute of Southern Jewish Life's sixteenth annual Education Conference. Rebecca Austin and I benefitted greatly from the wonderful speakers, including Rabbi David Stern of Temple Emanu-El in Dallas, Texas. Emanu-El has many more members than both Shreveport synagogues combined, but I found it interesting that he tries to make his "large congregation feel like a small congregation." He also spoke about the Teacher as a Learner, and how the educational values of relationships, conflict and text usually outweigh students' memories of content. All the while, he snuck in lots of content, including 6th century Talmudic text that related directly to quotes about social justice and contemporary academic citations on neuroscience.

The ISJL Education Curriculum is a spiraled curriculum, in which students revisit key content areas with increased sophistication as they progress through the curriculum. This summer we received updated versions of the second and third grade curricula. Second grade has content focusing on Community, Israel, Culture and Lifecycle. Third grade centers on Mitzvot, TaNaKh and God. These two grades also contain information about the holidays, evolving each year from first through fifth grade, to build on prior knowledge and understanding. I look forward to our use of the Family Letters included with the curriculum – these letters can go home with students each day of Religious School, and give parents questions to ask, as well as links to songs and other resources relevant to the day's activities.

One of the reasons that the ISJL curriculum exists is so that schools who have no trained Jewish educators could have novice teachers use the curriculum successfully. All it takes is a desire to help students learn about Judaism. We have some teachers who have been teaching at our Religious School for a few years. We also have some classes that do not have teachers yet. Please consider teaching our children. We need you to help. If you feel you do not know enough to teach, you can teach! The curriculum gives anyone the foundation to nurture students' Jewish identity, providing big ideas, scripts, time estimates, and a variety of activities that address different learning (and teaching) styles. And if you feel like you do have a specific skill or area of expertise (Jewish or otherwise), you can teach! The Education team is ready to help you incorporate your contribution into the curriculum. The hours and dates are flexible - helping with Religious School does not mean you are obligated to the whole morning, or the whole calendar. Let's talk about what will work best for you.

Other ways to help include:

- Assist a teacher (or team teach)
- Craft projects for younger kids
- Discussion groups

The benefits are great! Being involved with the Religious School models to our children and young families the importance of:

- continued learning as an adult
- the continuity of Jewish communal life
- L'dor v'dor – one generation passing down values to the next generation
- Jewish education depends on the entire community – please call Barbara at the BZ office or email bjoseph318@gmail.com today to discuss your role.

On the facing page I am sharing thank you notes from some of the entities that received tzedakah funds from the Religious School in May. Students in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh grades spent much time and effort researching potential recipients that could increase "justice" in the world. Please share these notes from the Good People Fund and American Jewish World Service with your children. I believe they will appreciate knowing exactly what these organizations will do with their donations.

I look forward to seeing students of all ages at our Pool Party on August 5th!

We proudly use the ISJL
Curriculum

DEAR RELIGIOUS SCHOOL STUDENTS:

Yasher koach and awesome! We were so excited to receive your $500 donation and are honored that you have entrusted us with these very important dollars to distribute. Rest assured that your tzedakah will be used wisely at recipient organizations.

Because of your generosity children living with cancer in their family can enjoy a much-welcomed break; kids in low-income areas will have much needed sports equipment; hungry people will have food to eat; refugees will have access to job-training and careers, and so much more. So many people will benefit from your kindness.

You should be proud of all that you accomplished at religious school. Not only have you learned about tzedakah, but you have set a wonderful example of what it means to practice tzedakah. Thank you for joining us on our journey to repair the world!

Shalom,

"I always felt that I had a responsibility to fix the world. This imperative is not an easy legacy for Jews though. It's a big world and there are a lot of problems, and it can be very painful sometimes to realize that we alone are not going to fix all of them. But we do have a responsibility to do our part. AJWS takes very seriously the idea that tzedakah is more "justice" than "charity." AJWS is all about respect for the people it serves, and this is what development is all about."

Meryl Frank, Former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Commission on the Status of Women

Dear Students,

Thank you for your generous contribution of $500 to American Jewish World Service. I am so moved that you decided to contribute your money to us, and inspired by your desire to make the world a better place.

As you may know, the Hebrew word commonly translated as "charity" - tzedakah - actually has a much deeper meaning. The word tzedakah comes from the word tzedek, which means justice and reflects the Jewish tradition's view of right and wrong, fairness, and social responsibility. With your help, AJWS is acting on these views by helping people around the world. Thank you again for caring and for your generosity!

With warm wishes,

Thanks to everyone who has registered B'nai Zion for donations when you shop at Kroger. This past quarter 31 households have contributed to our $126.84 donation. Thank you!

Smile.Amazon.com orders have contributed to B'nai Zion receiving $420.65 so far. Thank you to everyone who makes purchases at Smile.Amazon.com that also generate donations to B'nai Zion!

Henry S Jacobs Camp First Session 2018

B'nai Zion Campers and Counselors get a visit from Rabbi Jana & Max.

In consideration of the Mitzvah of "Bal Taschit" - not wasting, we are only printing copies of the news to send to people who request them. The news is always available online, in emails and in the congregational calls. We appreciated the feedback we have received from people who love having the paper version and people who love accessing the information online.
