From Rabbi Jana

If Not Now, When?

I don't have to tell you that life is precious, and time is limited for us. Sometimes at holidays we are even more aware of this fact. We think of people we cared about who were here, and gone the next time the holiday came around.

I was talking to someone from the congregation about how she was able to make a Rosh Hashanah dinner, and serve it on plates that her grandmother and great-grandmother used. The table was set with a tablecloth that she had embroidered when she was first married. This year she was sitting at a table where she was the grandmother. She got to share stories of all of the history of the things on the table, and more importantly the people and memories about the people who were connected to those things.

To be honest, I had that conversation, with only a slight change in details, with a few people from the congregation this year. For many people, holidays are times when we get together with people we care about. Sometimes they have shared lifetimes with us, and sometimes we have new connections, and our new experiences today become tomorrow's memories.

We get together, we go our separate ways, and hopefully we get together again. But life is precious, and time is limited, so we have no guarantees that we will see each other again.

I am reminded of a lesson that we are taught about the shofar blasts. The four sounds we hear on Rosh HaShanah are: T'kiya, Sh'varim, T'ru'ah and T'kiyah G'dolah. T'kiya is a blast. Sh'varim means "broken" and usually takes the same length of time as a T'kiya, but breaks it into three notes. T'ru'ah is made of many very short blasts - as if the T'kiya has been shattered. We return to the whole sound of T'kiya again. At the end of Rosh HaShanah, and the only shofar sound we hear for Yom Kippur is the T'kiya G'dolah.

I feel like that reminds us of our lives together: As children we have a blast. Time doesn't seem to end, but it is cheerful. Then we become adults, and go our separate ways, like a Sh'varim. Eventually our family has so many people that it feels like we are many separate people in many different directions. At the holidays, it is helpful when we come back together again. The long blast at the ends of the holidays can be a joyful sound, because the family/friends are reconnected (even if we go our separate ways), or a lament that we won't be together again.

There are many ways of understanding the pattern of the shofar blasts. We can feel like our lives are whole, and then experience difficult times, and know that sometimes things can get more difficult, but with faith and perseverance we can come back to being whole again (holy again).

We can be aware of difficulties in the world, feel that everything is becoming more fragmented, try desperately to fix things, and hopefully find peace and wholeness again.

I am sure you can think of other ways to be inspired by the shofar blasts. Hopefully the sounds wake up the feelings in you that we must do something now. If not now, when?

May you and your family have a healthy, sweet, and joyous new year.

L'shanah tovah um'tukah t'kateivu v'techateimu!

Rabbi Dr. Jana L. De Benedetti

From our President, Jon Black

The High Holy Days offer so many great opportunities. Each of us have the chance to look within ourselves and ask: Have I made good choices? Have I been optimistic and set good examples for my family and for others? Fortunately, we get the chance to wipe the slate clean of our shortcomings and begin a New Year with a fresh start. May we all be blessed and inscribed in the Book of Life.

At some point in each of my bulletin messages I seem to mention how blessed we are to have Rabbi

Jana. I suppose it is simply because I continue to see it day by day. In a sermon this past year she quoted, "The path you choose to walk on is the one God will lead you down." I have come to love that saying and try to think about it every day. To me it says that yes, God will help us and watch over us, but we have to actively participate by choosing our own path. Rabbi continues to inspire all of us.

The Sisterhood will once again provide an outstanding and delicious Break Fast after the Yom Kippur closing service. I look forward to visiting with you then and throughout the holidays. I urge you to reach out to our new members and welcome them into our B'nai Zion family.

Jerie joins me in wishing you and yours a happy, healthy and peaceful New Year.

Shana tova

Jon

Free Jewish 5780 Calendars

Pick up your free Jewish calendar at B'nai Zion and Agudath Achim. The calendars cover the entire Jewish year 5780, which includes September 2019 through September 2020.

We are grateful to Rose-Neath for this gift to our community.

From our Education Director, Barbara Joseph

The fall season is upon us – with holidays both in importance and frequency. Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur are quickly followed by Sukkot, Shmini Atzeret and Simchat Torah, all within a matter of twenty-three days. With so many holidays coming one right after the other, it's a busy time. It can be difficult to fully embrace all aspects of each one.

For families with children at home, Sukkot is an ideal focal point, with the experience of decorating a Sukkah and eating together with family, friends and other community members. It's often said that when your kids are young, the days are long and the years are short. Despite how busy those long days were for me and my family, there were a few years that we assembled a sukkah in our yard. The memories of figuring out which way the pieces went, finding a reason to finally cut back the bamboo (to use for the roof), threading acorns onto string and, of course, eating together with friends and family, stay with me.

There will be a sukkah assembled at each synagogue this month – children and children-at-heart are invited to build and decorate, then eat in the Sukkah, which fulfills the obligation to dwell in it.

See you soon,

Barbara

Religious School News

Decorate the Sukkah

The holiday of Sukkot begins the evening of Sunday, October 13. There will not be Religious School or Hebrew classes that day so that everyone can spend time in the afternoon decorating a Sukkah. You are welcome to come to Agudath Achim at 11:00 AM and/or B'nai Zion at 4:30 to help make and hang decorations.

At B'nai Zion everyone who helps decorate the Sukkah is welcome to enjoy some Sushi in the Sukkah, or Pizza in the Hut with some Lulav Shake. The Sushi and Pizza are snacks which can be eaten in the Sukkah to help fulfill the Mitzvah (commandment) about dwelling in the Sukkah. The Lulav Shake is when we gather the four species commanded in the Torah, and shake them in the Sukkah as part of a brief Sukkot service. The best part of any holiday is when everyone celebrates together.

We do read books by Jewish authors or books with some Jewish content. We read some really good ones last year, most notably The Weight of Ink and The Last Watchman of Old Cairo, for those of you who'd like to read those.

Special Guest Musicians for the High Holy Days

Our wonderful B'nai Zion Choir will return to enhance our High Holy Days. Most of the singers in this choir have been singing with us for years. They each have established wonderful reputations as musicians. Please get to know them, and let them know how much you appreciate that they enhance our worship each year.

In addition to the choir we have a few guest musicians who will be inspiring us through their music.

Adam Philley is the Music Director at B'nai Zion and is directing the High Holy Day Choir this year. He is also the Director of Music Ministries at Broadmoor United Methodist Church (and was a student of Rabbi Jana at Centenary).

Spencer Reichman will return as our Cantorial Soloist for Yom Kippur

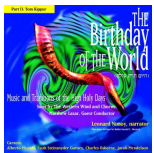

Ah Young Kim is the pianist and assistant conductor with SOX. She has a doctoral degree in piano.

Eliot Haas (son of Kristina and the late Peter Haas) will play cello for one of the three repetitions of the Kol Nidre during the Yom Kippur evening service 7:30 PM October 8. Eliot graduated from Oberlin Conservatory of Music, and is currently in the Shreveport Symphony Orchestra.

The first will be on Yom Kippur (3:30 PM October 9), and again for the end of Sukkot (10 AM Monday, October 21). We will use the Memorial Books May the memories of your loved ones always be a blessing.

Start at the Very Beginning

We read, discuss, and study the whole Torah, portion by portion every year, one week at a time. Start the cycle with us when we discuss Genesis on October 26. This is a great opportunity to start at the beginning.

Torah Study is 9:45-11:00 Saturday mornings. You don't need to know Hebrew. You don't have to have your own book (we have enough for everyone). You don't have to study ahead of time. People who study with us say it is their favorite time of the week. And of course, we have refreshments. You don't have to come every week, but you will not be sorry if you do.
