CORRECTION TO DIRECTORY

Bob Turkewitz's name was inadvertently left off of the directory. He is, and always has been, a member. The directory should read:

Judith and Bernard (Bob) Turkewitz
(No changes to their contact information.) Sandy Geiger will have labels with the correction at shul or simply write Bob's name in yourself.

We apologize for the error!

RABBI'S MESSAGE

This week we read about the first seven plagues that Hashem brought against the Egyptians. These were; All the water in Egypt turned to blood; Croaking frogs were to be found everywhere including: ovens, food, beds, and people's stomachs; Itchy lice all over their bodies; Wild animals including: snakes, scorpions, lions and tigers running amok through the whole of Egypt; All the domestic animals died; Burning boils over all peoples' bodies; and finally, Hailstones of fire and ice crashing down destroying everything in Egypt. His plagues served a dual purpose. One was of course to demonstrate to the Egyptians and make them realize that God is all powerful and they should listen to Moses. The second reason was to improve the morale of the Jews. When you see the people who inflicted you with torture and pain suffering themselves that's one way of building up your own morale in order to be in the right frame of mind to be freed. There's no point taking out the nation of Israel if they were too low in spirit. We see that they had a hard time contemplating being free and wanted to run back to Egypt at every opportunity. Which plague do you feel was the worst for the Egyptians to endure? It is interesting that by the plague of hailstones the Torah describes it as 'Hashem sending all his plagues in one' which leads Rashi to declare this was the worst of them all.
