Light of the Torah

Lost and Found by Rabbi Alisa Zilbershtein

Among the various commandments in Parshat Ki Tetze, there is a law about returning lost objects: "You shall not see your brother's ox or his sheep straying away and ignore them; you shall certainly return them to your brother. And if your brother is not near you or if you do not know him, then you shall bring it home to your house, and it shall remain with you until your brother seeks it out, then you shall return it to him." (Deuteronomy 22:1-2)

This law goes beyond mere property rights; it reflects a deep sense of communal responsibility. It's not just about an ox or a sheep; it's about recognizing our duty to others and understanding that our well-being is interconnected with the well-being of our community.

While the literal interpretation concerns lost animals or objects, we can extrapolate a deeper, more profound lesson. The law doesn't say, "If someone loses something and asks you about it, give it back." It instructs us to actively seek out the owner. We're not just passive bystanders; we're active participants in maintaining the social fabric of our community. Just as we're responsible for returning lost items, we also have a duty to help those in our community who may feel "lost" because they are struggling with personal challenges. This could be someone grappling with the pain of a broken friendship, someone feeling isolated, or yearning for reconciliation and connection. The commandment serves as a metaphor, urging us to actively look out for the well-being of others.

The mitzvah of returning lost items is a reminder of the importance of community, mutual responsibility, and caring for one another. May we always remember that ethical living isn't just about our own actions but about how we actively work to uplift those around us.

Kever Avot

Beth Tikvah Cemetery Memorial Services

Kever Avot, the tradition of visiting the graves of our parents and loved ones between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, can evoke a wealth of emotions and memories. In these moments, many of us yearn to feel connected to a community. We invite you to join with us as we pray together, support one another, and honour the memory of those who have passed at our annual Kever Avot Memorial Services.

All are welcome, whether your loved ones are buried in our sections or far away.

Sunday, September 10th, 2023

10:30 AM - PARDES SHALOM
(In the new Beth Tikvah section, near the eastern end of the cemetery)

2:30 PM - BATHURST LAWN
(In the Minsker Farband section)

Beth Tikvah clergy will be on hand to recite private memorial prayers at the gravesides of loved ones in all cemetery sections following the community service.
