כי כאשר ייסר איש את בנו

“that just as a father will chastise his son” Devarim [8:5]

There is a beautiful insight to a verse in the book of Bereishis [45:8] which clarifies for us the definition of what it means to be a father. The verse states that Yosef said to his brothers, “and now it was not you who sent me here, but G-d, he has made me a ‘father’ to Pharaoh.” -- Rashi comments that father here means “a friend and a patron.” We see here the Torah’s concept of a father as someone who is a friend and a patron, meaning a father should relate to his children in a friendly, caring manner and see to all their needs lovingly. Although he is an authority figure, he should not be threatening or intimidating to his children. Rav Shlomo Wolbe z”l, one of the great masters of our generation on chinuch habonim (educating children), explains that if a parent’s whole approach is about when to punish, it undermines the entire relationship with one’s child. You may ask, doesn’t king Solomon say in Mishlei [13:24] חוֹשֵׁךְ שִׁבְטוֹ שׁוֹנֵא בְנוֹ (one who spares the rod hates his child)? The answer to that question lies in the type of rod we are talking about. The purpose of the rod is to motivate the child to do the right thing. So, you can use a staff of pleasantness or a staff of blows. If I give a child encouragement, I am using a staff. If a child does something good and I give them candy, that is also a staff. The harm a parent does by yelling or screaming at a child – not to mention hitting – in today's generation is unfathomable. Therefore, parents have no choice but to control themselves and work on their character traits not to become angry at every provocation, and this is especially important when dealing with teenagers. A parent has to find positive methods for convincing his children to cooperate. Doing so takes a great deal of thought and planning, but it is much more effective than force, threats, or harsh words, which are so unsuited to our generation. Yes, we have to have rules, and yes, there are consequences, but the key is to deal with it all in a pleasant manner, otherwise it has the opposite effect. Is this easier said than done? Of course, but if you're patient enough, the nachas you will receive in the future will be more than worth it!

STATEMENTS HAVE BEEN SENT OUT

The ongoing pandemic continues to be challenging for all of us, including the financial situation of our Young Israel. Over the past few months, our income has been greatly reduced from sources that we depend on (such as aliyah donations and social events). At the same time, we must continue paying our bills across the board (payroll, utilities, insurance, security, and maintenance).

Given that our overall accounts receivable is over $300K, we ask that you review your statement carefully and do your very best to clear your balance to the greatest extent possible. Please feel free to call Yakira on her cell phone, 786-488-2215, to clear your balance immediately over the phone.

Our Young Israel appreciates the loyalty of its generous supporters – now more than ever – and may Hashem grant us the strength and ability to safely emerge from this pandemic and look forward to a healthy and happy new year.
