If we become far more upset at a child for spilling his milk, for breaking a dish, or toy -- or, for that matter, even by accidentally dropping your lap top and breaking it -- than if the child does something that is objectively wrong -- such as being nasty and mean to a sibling, or taunting and making fun of an unfortunate person, or for being dishonest -- then we send the child wrong messages: that “things” matter more than people and that objects take precedent over ethical wrongdoing. Who knows, maybe that’s why the world looks the way it does today.

(Sefer- Aleinu L’shabeiach)

Wishing you a great and inspiring day!
