Women's Tehillim Group

The Women's Tehillim Group meets every Sunday at 10 am in the Nancy Taffel Annex. All women are invited to attend.

Want to Be a "Minyanaire"?!

Want to impress your Creator? Looking for a way to increase your "spiritual equity"? Come join the TY minyan. We are looking for a few (10+) good men ages 13-120 to join our daily minyan. Shacharis is at 6:30 am during the week, 8:30 am on Shabbos, and 8:00 am on Sundays. Mincha/Maariv begins 10 minutes before shkia; please check the seasonal davening schedule or the Lev Echad for exact times. Extra credit if you are one of the first ten in shul to daven.

Rabbi's Shabbos Shiur

Rabbi Goldberger's Shabbos afternoon shiur in the Rambam's Hilchos De'os begins one hour before Mincha. All men and women are invited and encouraged to attend. Bring your sefer; if you do not own a copy, photocopies will be available.

Rabbi's Shiurim for Men

Rabbi Goldberger's Tuesday night shiur in Midrash Rabbah on the weekly parsha has resumed! The shiur will immediately follow Maariv; photocopies will be available. All men are invited to come and learn.

The Rabbi will also be giving a shiur in Sfas Emes on the weekly parsha on Thursday nights after Maariv. All men are invited and encouraged to attend; photocopies available.

Lag BaOmer Bonfire

Come join us for an evening of music and singing and dancing featuring Yehuda Tenenbaum in honor of Lag BaOmer and Reb Shimon Bar Yochai. Bring along your musical instruments to join in the ruach. All the food will be arranged by the shul -- pizza, fries, and garlic knots -- and provided by Mama Leah's Pizza and our own members, Mark and Menucha Prince.

We will be emphasizing the spiritual nature of Lag BaOmer:

- The fire will be for gathering around to sing and dance

- We will have a sound system with our own Yehuda Tenenbaum leading the music to create the atmosphere for which we are striving. Special thanks to Eric and Elaine Gerstenfeld for the beautiful sound system.
- There will be food available but we will not be using the fire for roasting any food. Please make sure your children are aware of this.
- Men and women will stand on opposite sides of the circle surrounding the bonfire
For many years, we have had a beautiful and uplifting Lag BaOmer bonfire at shul, and we were among the first in our community to do so. It's a joyous night and a time of great kedusha. We look to reach great heights through our music and singing. The Lag BaOmer bonfire will begin this motzei Shabbos at 9:30 pm.

-Rabbi Menachem Goldberger

The Weekly Parsha

Parshas Emor

By Rabbi Ozer Alport

“You shall count for yourselves...seven weeks, they shall be complete” (23:15)

One of the reasons for the happiness associated with Lag B'Omer, which begins on the night of May 11, is that on this day, the students of Rabbi Akiva, who had died en masse every day since Pesach, stopped dying. As there are no coincidences in Judaism, why did they specifically stop dying at this time?

The seven weeks between Pesach and Shavuot represent a period in which we prepare ourselves to celebrate the giving of the Torah at Mount Sinai on Shavuot. The leaders of the Mussar movement point out that the Mishnah in Avos (6:6) teaches that there are 48 traits by which the Torah is acquired. Since there are 49 days during which we prepare to reaccept the Torah, they maintained that it would be appropriate to use this time to develop within ourselves the qualities and attributes which are necessary to accept and acquire the Torah on Shavuot. Therefore, on each day of this period, they worked on understanding and instilling within themselves one of these qualities. Since there were only 48 traits, they used the last day for a general overview of all of them.

In his work Lekach Tov, Rav Yaakov Yisroel Baifus suggests that if the founders of the Mussar movement engaged in this commendable practice, certainly the lofty Sages of the Gemora did so as well. The 32nd trait by which the Torah is acquired is love of one's fellow man. The Gemora teaches (Yevamos 62b) that the reason for the death of Rabbi Akiva's disciples was that they didn't feel and display appropriate respect toward one another. Rav Baifus suggests that once they had worked on the trait of loving one another on the 32nd day, they rectified the cause of this tragedy, and indeed on the following day the students stopped dying.

“...in the seventh month, on the first of the month... a remembrance with shofar blasts” (23:24)

The Gemora in Rosh Hashana (29b) points out that in Parshas Pinchas (Bamidbar 29:1), the Torah refers to Rosh Hashana as “Yom Teruah” – the day of blowing the shofar – while our parsha calls it “Zichron Teruah” – a remembrance of the shofar blasts. The Gemora explains that Parshas Pinchas discusses a scenario when Rosh Hashana falls out during the week and the shofar is actually sounded. Our parsha, on the other hand, refers to a year in which Rosh Hashana falls on Shabbos, on which there are no shofar blasts but only the remembrance of them.

This enactment was made due to a fear that a Jew may be unfamiliar with the proper way to blow the shofar. To learn how to do so, he may carry it to the Rav's house, in the process violating the prohibition against carrying in the public domain on Shabbos. Although this would be a tragedy, why did the Sages deny tens of thousands of people this invaluable and irreplaceable merit simply because one Jew may carry it – unintentionally, and for the sake of a mitzvah – to a Rav to learn how to blow it?

Rav Yitzchok Blazer explains that the impending arrival of Rosh Hashana is heralded by the blowing of the shofar each morning during the month of Elul. Certainly, when Rosh Hashana itself comes, everybody will come to the synagogue, anxiously awaiting the 100 blasts which are sounded. When the normal time for the blowing of the shofar arrives but no sounds are heard, people will become curious about the omission. Upon asking, they will be told that it is because of the aforementioned fear of another Jew accidentally carrying the shofar outside on Shabbos. The questioner will press on, wondering why so many people must lose out over such an improbable fear, one which would seem to be greatly outweighed by the guaranteed downside of Jews across the world being unable to hear the shofar blasts.

However, from the fact that Chazal made their decree, we see that they understood that indeed, the possibility that one Jew may inadvertently carry the shofar outside – even for the sake of a mitzvah – is so incredibly detrimental that they saw no choice but to forbid the blowing of the shofar for everybody. Upon understanding this, the questioner will be left with a new appreciation of the severity of even an accidental sin and all the more so an intentional one. This new recognition will inspire him to a newfound resolve to repent his sins in a way that even the sound of the mighty shofar couldn't have accomplished.

Shabbos and the Yom Tovim

The Torah dedicates the entire chapter 23 in Parshas Emor to the festivals, referred to here as the מוֹעֲדִים, appointed times, as a means for the Jewish people to come closer to Hashem through their observance of these special days. R' Hirsch writes: “Moadim, appointed seasons, summon us to submit ourselves entirely to the contemplation and inner realization of those ideals which lie at their foundation. Just as Moed in space refers to the locality which men have as their appointed place of assembly for an appointed purpose [such as the Ohel Moed, the Tent of Meeting], so Moed in time is a point in time which summons us continually to an appointed activity – in this case, an inner activity. Thus, Moadim are the days which stand out from the other days of the year. They summon us from our everyday life to halt and to dedicate all our spiritual activities to them. From this point of view, Shabbos and Yom Kippur are also Moadim” (Stone Chumash).

The chapter begins with, “...these are My appointed festivals. For six days labor may be done, and the seventh day is a day of complete rest... it is a Shabbos for Hashem” (Vayikra 23:2-3). Rashi asks, “Why is the subject of Shabbos put here next to the subject of the festivals?” to which he responds, “To teach you that whoever desecrates the festivals is considered as if he desecrated the Shabbos days, and whoever upholds the festivals is considered as if he upheld the Shabbos days.” Although Shabbos and the Moadim are connected as Rashi states, they do differ in the sense that the festivals are set in terms of the day of the month based on man's declaration of Rosh Chodesh, whereas Shabbos is set in terms of the day of the week, the immutable cycle of which was put into effect at the time of Creation (Nachalas Yaakov). Furthermore, as Toras Kohanim states, earthly courts treat festivals more leniently than Shabbos. Doing forbidden work on Shabbos is punished by being stoned to death; doing forbidden work on the festivals is punished by lashes. But the Heavenly Court views them with equal gravity.

In his sefer Darash Moshe, HaRav Moshe Feinstein explains this Rashi: “The aim of Shabbos is belief in Creation. Consequently, one who desecrates the Shabbos is adjudged as if he denies the Creation. The festivals represent the belief that Hashem directs the world by Himself and controls nature, thus safeguarding the Jewish people. When He redeemed us from Mitzraim, He performed miracles for us, enveloped us in the Clouds of glory, sustained and supported us in the desert, and bestowed upon us Torah and mitzvos to guide us in life.” He goes on to explain that “half a faith” is of no use. One who believes that Hashem created the world but has delegated its direction to others, such as malachim, or believes that the forces of nature are independent of His will, is as if he does not believe in Creation. According to Reb Moshe, if one truly has this mindset, there is no need to keep Hashem's Torah.

In the beginning of Hilchos Avodah Zarah, the Rambam explains that this belief system led to the downfall of Enosh and his followers, who believed that control of the world was delegated to the heavenly bodies, and therefore, they were to be worshipped as servants of Hashem. The end result of such a belief is that one falls into the trap of avadah zarah and forgets G-d altogether. This was especially prevalent in the Greek and Roman cultures, where a different "god" that "controlled" each of the many different forces of nature was assigned and worshipped by them independently from "god to god." Reb Moshe continues: "Therefore, when one desecrates the festivals, which testify to Hashem's active direction and control of the world, it is as if he desecrated the Shabbos. Likewise, if one believes that Hashem controls the world, but does not believe that He created it, but that others created it, or he believes that it was created long before the date given us by the Torah, his belief in divine Providence is meaningless."

Shabbos generates an opportunity to begin anew each week, to better connect to the Almighty; so, too, do the festivals. Both Shabbos and the מועדים have a unique, intrinsic quality that allows a Jew to grow spiritually and come closer to Hashem, as the mitzvos performed in the observance of Shabbos and the Yom Tovim allow for the Jew to build "spiritual equity" and develop a greater deveikus b'Hashem. I believe that is what the Torah is teaching us in our pasuk by introducing Shabbos observance before the festivals. Reb Moshe concludes: "The reason the mitzvah of Shabbos is juxtaposed to that of the festivals is because these fundamentals of faith are interdependent. Likewise, the belief in the Divine origin of the Torah is essential, and without it, the belief in Creation is of no consequence." True Torah Judaism is a complete package: the unfettered belief that Hashem not only created the entire universe and everything in it, but that He is also in constant control of every aspect of the world, and everything that happens every moment of every day is all part of His Divine plan. A gutten Shabbos.
