The Weekly Parsha

Parshas Eikev

By Rabbi A. Leib Scheinbaum

"And to serve Him with all your heart" (11:13)

Le'vavchem is written in the plural. Certainly, man has only one heart. Chazal explain that this is a reference to the two inclinations that work simultaneously within man. The yetzer tov, good inclination, and the yetzer hora, evil inclination, are to be found only within the human being. Angels do not have a yetzer hora. They are "programmed" to carry out Hashem's bidding. Man, on the other hand, has two contradictory forces working within him. Horav Eliyahu Meir Bloch, zl, notes this uniqueness of man. His ability to make one dominant over the other - while maintaining divergent emotions within one personality - distinguishes him from the angels. Furthermore, man has both of these forces playing active roles in his life - simultaneously.

We see this idea in action in the dialogue that ensued between the Angels and Hashem as Klal Yisrael stood at the shores of the Red Sea. As the water split and the Egyptians drowned, the Heavenly Angels sought to say Shirah, sing a song of praise, to the Almighty. Hashem's response was, "My creations are drowning in the sea, and you want to say Shirah?" Nonetheless, Klal Yisrael did sing Shirah, to which Hashem responded, "For them, I Have waited." He wanted to hear our Shirah, yet He eschewed the Shirah of the Angels. Why?

Rav Eliyahu Meir explains that when an Angel is filled with joy, he cannot sense any other emotion. He cannot feel pain when he feels joy. A person, however, has the ability to sense pain to the point that he is anguished and brought to tears - and still transcend his grief in order to serve the Almighty with complete joy. Avraham Avinu did this when he was instructed to prepare his beloved son, Yitzchak Avinu, as a sacrifice. He stood there willingly, with complete equanimity, ready to carry out Hashem's Will. Yet, Chazal tell us that he stood knee-deep in tears for his son! He did not ignore his emotions of fatherly love. He was not stone cold as he looked into the eyes of his dear son as he raised the knife about to serve Hashem. No, he ignored nothing; he transcended his emotions!

Hashem does not want us to put our human emotions to rest. Instead, He wants us to acknowledge and experience these emotions, but, when necessary, to override them for Him. Avraham stood there in control of his full complement of emotions. He sublimated his fatherly love to Hashem, because he was asked to do so. He was not a heartless, unfeeling robot. He was a loving father who carried his love to the highest level - serving his Father in Heaven.

During Klal Yisrael's darkest periods, this dual emotion was manifest by those who were able to transcend the pain and sorrow to continue to serve the Almighty with a sense of joy and pride. The Gerrer Rebbe would not allow the pain and grief inflicted by the terrors of the Holocaust to diminish his Oneg Shabbos. He experienced the sweet joy of Shabbos amidst deprivation and misery.

It was Friday night, and the chazzan began to chant the Lecha Dodi prayer with the traditional Gerrer niggun, tune. The Rebbe sang along, enunciating the words and emphasizing the melody. His son was standing by, staring incredulously at his great father. "Tateh, tateh," he cried out forlornly, "Maasei yadai tov'eim bayam ve'atem omrim shirah?" "[My, Hashem's] creations are drowning in the sea, and you want to sing Shirah?" This is a reference to the Angels who wanted to sing praise to the Almighty when the Egyptians drowned in the Red Sea. The son was asking his father how could he sing with joy amidst all of the suffering and death? The Rebbe looked at his son with piercing eyes, replying with a calm, strong voice, "My dear son, we must always sing Shirah. It is up to the Almighty if He chooses to listen, but we must sing regardless." B'chol levavechem!

The Joy of Mitzvos

In Parshas Eikev we find the reiteration of the second passage of the Shema (Devarim 11:13-21), which is characterized by the Chachamim as קבלת עול המצוות, acceptance of the yoke of the commandments, because it deals with the requirement to perform the commandments with total dedication (Berachos 13a). The passage goes further, saying that the performance of the commandments earns reward and their neglect is punished. This concept of reward and punishment is central to Judaism, and is included among the Rambam's Thirteen Principles of Faith: "I believe with perfect faith that G-d rewards those who keep His commandments and punishes those who transgress them." This concept is paralleled by the verse in Yigdal that states: "He rewards man with love, as his deeds deserve; He gives the wicked evil, according to their wrong."

Although this concept is a fundamental tenet of Judaism, Rav Levi Yitzchak of Berditchof teaches that there is a difference between someone who serves Hashem with an eye on the reward he will one day receive and the Jew who is driven by loftier ambitions, as the Mishnah states: "Be not as servants who serve the master for the sake of receiving [even a token] reward, but rather, be like servants who serve the master not for the sake of receiving [a token] reward; and [nonetheless] the fear of Heaven should be upon you" (Avos 1:3). Abarbanel comments that the Mishnah refers to tangible reward in this world: Do not serve Hashem in order to receive reward in this world, since "there is no reward for mitzvos in this world" (Kiddushin 39b). Rashi agrees and states: "Serve G-d out of love and let the fear of Heaven be upon you, since there is no reward in this world, as the verse states: It will be that if you hearken to My commandments that I command you today, to love Hashem... and to serve Him with all your heart and with all your soul" (Devarim 11:13). The sages interpret this verse to imply that today, i.e., is for the performance of the commandments, but the reward will come tomorrow, i.e., in the World to Come. Certainly there is reward in the World to Come, and one is permitted to serve G-d in order to earn it (Artscroll Pirkei Avos).

The Berditchover teaches: "The main pleasure that a person can ever hope to experience does not come as an offshoot of the mitzvos. Rather, it exists within the mitzvah itself. The joy a person can feel while performing the actual mitzvah is even greater than the reward he is slated to receive. The feeling of closeness with Hashem and the realization of how infinitely small we are when held up to His Infinite greatness allows us to let go of our petty worries and bask in the light of His presence. Focusing on the great gifts we have been granted in the framework of halachah and mitzvos which guide our every step and draw Hashem into our lives, we are filled with glowing contentment and love for our Creator. One who is fully present in his avodas Hashem understands that there is no joy as profound as that of reaching beyond this physical existence to touch eternity."

Ben Azzai says: Run to [perform even] a "minor" mitzvah...for one mitzvah leads to another mitzvah... for the consequence of a mitzvah is another mitzvah, שכר מצוה מצוה (Avos 4:2). On a basic level, this means the reward of the mitzvah is another mitzvah, yet virtually all the Chassidic masters explained that there is a deeper intention within these words, and they explain it to mean: The reward of a mitzvah is the mitzvah itself. This, explains Rav Levi, is the way one can truly feel the joy of serving Hashem and at the same time attain the ultimate שכר מצוה. Rabbeinu Yonah notes that this “domino effect” is a natural phenomenon since it creates a spiritual groove and habituates us to a particular pattern of action. The reward one receives for fulfilling a mitzvah is the Heavenly gift of being able to do another mitzvah. Rav renders the clause as follows: Since the enjoyment one had from [performance of] a mitzvah is [itself] a mitzvah. One receives reward not only for the act of performing the mitzvah itself, but also for whatever enjoyment he derives from its performance. Tiferes Yisroel adds that when man fulfills mitzvos, he provides G-d with the opportunity, so to speak, to concretize His will to bestow goodness upon us. Hence, the enjoyment and reward one receives for a mitzvah is in itself a mitzvah, since man’s receiving reward is itself something that, so to speak, pleases G-d (Artscroll Pirkei Avos).

May we all be zoche to find the joy in our performance of mitzvos, to aspire to serve Hashem with all our heart and with all our soul, and attain the higher level of avodas Hashem b’ahavah.. A gutten Shabbos.

summer, the NWCP runs a membership campaign to encourage community members to join and fill its ranks, which tend to diminish over the year due to attrition. They are looking for new volunteers to join and give back to the community by helping to protect it. It is a small investment (the commitment is only 2 ½ hours every 7 weeks) that brings back great returns. To volunteer, please email office@nwcp.info or go to www.nwcp.info, or call 410-664-6927, ext. 3.
